"I understood and admired, while I resented, his arrogant demeanor. Here he was—a refugee, an exile from his country under sentence of death, in a position entirely dependent upon the good will of the British government, and also one of the United States. The Germans had conquered his country. He had no real football anywhere. Never mind; he 'defied all!'

Truman in Year of Decisions, 1952:

"De Gaulle was a man of dedicated courage who had rendered important services to France in 1940 at a time when French morale had hit bottom. The desire of the French people to regain something of their lost power and prestige was understandable and American policy it easy to sympathize with them. De Gaulle's methods of championing French interests and causes, however, were not always along peaceful lines, and his tendency to use force to press national claims made for difficult situations."

Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery in The Path to Leadership, 1961:

"In my opinion there is only one great national leader in the Western world today—Gen. de Gaulle. He has vision, political courage, honesty and the ability of speaking. His life is dedicated to the task of France, and his leadership is known in the Western world. I have a tremendous admiration for him. He is a great man."

He isolated on France having his independent atomic armaments industry and refused to sign the East-West nuclear test-ban treaty in 1963.

He withdrew from all military integration inside NATO and visited Russia to advertise what he saw as a growing rapprochement between the East and West of Europe.

"De Gaulle is not on the left," he once said. "Nor on the right. Nor in the centre. He is above."

Throughout his long political career, he said all his actions and statements and decisions were intended for the greatness and the grandeur of France.

He had admiration and respect for President John F. Kennedy, but later antagonized the U.S. by his disengagement from NATO and his open disagreement with U.S. policy in Vietnam.

But at the same time, he and the late West German chancellor, Konrad Adenauer, were joint architects of a friendship treaty in 1963 which ended a century of hostility between France and Germany.

In 1966, he began the series of diplomatic notes, declarations and demands that resulted in withdrawal of the Atlantic alliance's military headquarters and U.S. troops from France.

He began 1967 with another of his frequents calls for the United States to get out of the "desolating" war in Vietnam.

In June that year, he labelled But his "grand design" began to fall into disarray in 1968. He survived two grave domestic crises but at heavy cost to his prestige and power. In May that year, students demanding reforms in the nation's education programs rioted, seized university buildings and closed Sorbonne. Workers demanding higher wages and other benefits joined in a general strike which paralyzed the country. At first, De Gaulle ignored the whole thing and went off to Romania for a state visit. But he was forced to cut the visit short as strikes crippled France.

Then in April, 1969, in a stran— and somewhat Quixotic action, De Gaulle staked his future on a referendum vote for government centralization and Senate reform, saying he would resign if the voters rejected it. Later, in the face of polls forecasting defeat, he declared in a radio-television address on the eve of the vote that he wouldn't "right away" stop being president if "I am disavowed."

As soon as the result was clear, De Gaulle announced in the early morning of April 28, 1969, that he was resigning the exercise of my functions as president of thy republic. This decision takes effect at noon today."

The spokesman said the same number was found on documents during other police raids in the Montreal area.

Police apparently were snowed under by thousands of similar clues and didn't get around to checking the Queen Mary Road number until Friday night.

"It was as simple as that," the policeman said. "We're slowly putting all the small pieces together."

This account discouraged speculation that Lortie was arrested on a tip connected with the re-trial. The speculation was spurred mainly by the scheduling of the inquest, announced Saturday was announced a couple of hours before his capture, although it hadn't been expected for weeks—and his free-flowing testimony at the inquest.

Mr. Choquette said there was no informant.

Detectives have also said privately that, Lortie gave many details not made public at the inquest.

The inquest resumes Thursday and prosecutors indicated that Lortie, who testified, in his words, "freely and voluntarily," may be recalled, as well as other witnesses.

A warrant was out for the arrest of Lortie for conspiracy in the Lapointe kidnapping but he hasn't been arraigned under any charge. Police said arraignment is unlikely until the inquest is over.

Lortie told the inquest the kidnap gang bought two high-powered semi-automatic rifles at a store Dame Street pawn shop in Montreal.

How easy it is to get such a weapon was demonstrated by the Montreal Star Monday in a story in which a reporter described buying the same type of rifle at a sports shop.

Mr. Choquette said the government will study existing controls, stiffened in the Criminal Code last year, on sale and possession of firearms.

Close Questioning Expected

Bourassa, Choquette Face Opposition for First Time

QUEBEC (CP) — Crisis comes into the Quebec national assembly today as Premier Robert Bourassa's Liberal government faces opposition critics for the first time since before the death of Labor Minister Pierre Laporte.

Mr. Bourassa and Justice Minister Jerome Choquette, in particular, are expected to be subjected to close questioning from the Parti Quebecois and the Union Nationale party concerning their handling of the current Quebec crisis.

The assembly last met Oct. 13. It was a special sitting to put Quebec's medical care insurance plan into effect Nov. 1 without participating doctors' approval and to order an end, to a 10-day strike by the province's medical specialists, who were protesting the plan.

That sitting followed the kidnappings of British envoy James Cross and Mr. Laporte, and the army had been called into Quebec to support tiring police forces only a few hours before the assembly met.

Today, the assembly meets after the invocation of the War Measures Act and the slaying of Mr. Laporte.

Meanwhile, the Montreal Gazette speculates the new session will adjourn until Wednesday next after it opens in respect for the slain labor minister.

The newspaper says the government house leader is expected to get in touch with leaders of the three opposition parties to find out if they will agree to such an adjournment.

The Parti Quebecois has been persistently questioning the government's actions for the last few weeks, while the Union Nationale last week broke its silence to announce that it too, wants further explanations of the situation.

The Creditistes, meanwhile, continue to support the government's actions, but they may join the two other opposition parties in attacking Mr. Bourassa's Liberals for their social policies.

Mr. Bourassa, a 37-year-old economist who became Liberal leader in January and led the party to victory in the April 29 Quebec general election, also has problems arising on his own side of the house.

Mr. Laporte's death took from the Liberals an experienced debater and legislative tactician who had provided his party with a certain amount of protection against the more cunning opposition members.

As house leader, he was able to shield the inexperienced Liberal ministers from the barbed questions coming from the veteran Union Nationale members, avoiding the political errors the government committed while he was absent for the first week of the summer sitting.

Without him, the Liberals will be largely on their own. Gerard D. Levesque, minister of industry, trade and commerce and one of only three Liberal ministers with previous cabinet experience, has been named to succeed Mr. Laporte as house leader.

Mr. Laporte was one of the most prominent figures in Jean Lesage's "Quiet Revolution" and enjoyed a more important position from 1960 to 1966 than Mr. Levesque, Claire Kirkland-Casgrain or Bernard Pinard, the other Lesage veterans still in the house.

There have been persistent reports in recent weeks that some members of Mr. Bourassa's cabinet and several Liberal caucus members are dissatisfied with the handling of the crisis.

The Parti Quebecois has been harassing the government for weeks, questioning its actions and demanding a full explanation of the reasons why it asked the federal government for the army and the War Measures Act.

The PQ in some ways took over from the Union Nationale as the main Opposition party, although it has only seven members in the house to the UN's 17. The UN forms the official Opposition.

Soon after the kidnapping of Mr. Cross, the UN announced that it would refrain from criticizing the government's actions during a time of crisis, but last week, with the PQ vigorously poking at Mr. Bourassa's Liberals, it also swung into action.

The PQ has also urged the government to undertake a massive program to control the province's model. He said to reduce an expected high winter unemployment rate.

On this front, the PQ can look forward to the unlikely support of the Rallement Créditiste, usually the PQ's arch-enemy.

Mr. Bourassa has announced that 15 pieces of legislation will be presented during the fall sitting, but the government will combat unemployment mainly through "administrative measures".

Williams Convicted By Court

TORONTO (CP) — A stock fraud case involving a conspiracy to defraud the public of $100 million ended in the Supreme Court of Ontario Monday when Joseph (Diamond Joe) Williams, 58, was sentenced to one year in prison for conspiracy to trade in unregistered shares.

Williams, a disbarred lawyer, originally was charged with conspiring to defraud the public of $100 million but the charge was withdrawn after he pleaded guilty to the lesser charge.

Williams' trial had been pending since June, 1967, when he was charged with Myer Rush, Manuel Betiuktay and former Toronto alderman Robert Colucci.

The case involved the sale of securities of Dorlex Exploration Co. S.A., British Overseas Mutual Fund Corp.—and DeVeers Consolidated Mining Corp. S.A., all registered in Panama, to United States citizens by telephone from Toronto.

The Crown alleged that Rush acquired the bulk of shareholders of four dormant Ontario mining companies and then notified the shareholders that the shares had become valuable.

Shareholders were told they could exchange their holdings for shares of Dorlex Exploration by paying only a transfer fee through British Overseas, the trustee agent.

Counsel for Williams told Mr. Justice Edson Haines his client had lost everything, including his profession, as a result of the venture.

Williams had been disbarred after 30 years in the legal profession and any additional penalty would be "killing a mosquito with an elephant gun," said defence counsel Allan Mints.

Mr. Justice Haines sentenced Williams to one year in prison, the sentence to be served concurrently with a three-year term he currently is serving for conspiring to commit theft in connection with Kirkland Townsite Mines Ltd.

Sgt. N. E. Mercier, in charge of the sentry dog section at the Canadian Armed Forces base at Lahr, West Germany, put his dog, Greif, through his paces during a regular weekly exercise. Each man-dog team on the base goes through the weekly training exercise to keep their skills and teamwork at a peak. The dogs also receive a monthly physical checkup. (CP Photo)

Sentry Dogs Patrol Canadian Military Bases in Germany

LAHR, West Germany (CP) — "Warning: This airfield is patrolled by sentry dogs."

Signs bearing this warning in English and German are posted at Canadian Armed Forces bases operated by the NATO - assigned Air Group at Lahr and Baden-Soellingen, West Germany. The dogs are handled by military policemen, all volunteers for this specialized phase of police work. Canadian security personnel consider the man - dog team the equivalent of a three - man patrol.

Any intruders hoping to escape detection in the dark are due for a shock. The German Shepherds used as sentry dogs can see amazing distances at night. Their eyesight is 10 times greater than a human's, their sense of hearing is 20 times greater and their sense of smell has a range of 220 yards.

For the handlers and their dogs, training never ceases. Exercises are held once a week to keep their skill and teamwork at a peak. The dogs also undergo a monthly health inspection, receiving a detailed physical examination.

In spite of the fact the dogs are trained to attack people, they are not vicious. Sgt. N. E. Mercier, in charge of the sentry dog section at Lahr, says vicious dogs would be uncontrollable. However, the dogs are aggressive — a subtle difference that might not be appreciated by an intruder held in the vice - like grip of a dog's teeth.

There will be no delivery of city or rural mail and street letterbox collections will be made as per Sunday schedules.

There will be no wicket services, but the lock box lobby will be open for 24-hour service. Special delivery service will be available.

All mails will be received and dispatched as usual.

Women Teachers Told Quebec Crisis 'Gravest'

The current Quebec crisis is the gravest Canada has ever faced, Hastings county teachers were told last night.

Kathleen Sigurjonsson, co-hostess of television's Weekend show, addressed the first general meeting of The Hastings county unit of the Federation of Women Teachers' Association of Ontario.

Teachers must become more aware of the trials and of what is going on in the world today, the speaker said.

"It is not going to go away — what price is the rest of Canada willing to pay to keep Quebec in Confederation?" she asked.

Miss Sigurjonsson, a former teacher, confessed she was confused about invocation of the War Measures Act, and noted that this reaction seems general among Canadians.

One of the reasons, she theorized, is that Canadians are law - abiding people, whose country was not formed by revolution.

Had the same measures been taken in the United States, the people would not have "sat back and taken it", she said.

Miss Jane Ann Lister of Peterborough, FWTAO director, inducted the new officers.

They are: president, Marion Cameron; past president, Pat Gervis; first vice-president, Laura Fisher; second vice - president, Wanda Cook; secretary, Lana Devalin; treasurer, Dorothy Thompson.

Co-ordinated Signal System Is Approved by City Council

City council yesterday gave approval to a traffic and light committee recommendation to spend $15,286 for the purchase of a monotrol master control system which hopefully will alleviate some of the traffic congestion problems in the city's downtown area.

The equipment, which will synchronize traffic lights in the downtown area, will be purchased from Davis Controls Ltd. of Georgetown, Ont.

Installation of the equipment will cost an estimated additional $5,100.

Traffic Committee chairman Ald. Arthur Keegan said the equipment would improve traffic flow both east and west and north and south.

Similar equipment installed in other Ontario centres had proven very successful, he said.

A representative of Davis Controls assured council that the pre-timed programming for traffic control could at any time be switched to manual control in the case of a heavy snowstorm or other emergency.

Mayor J. Russell Scott commended the traffic committee for their efforts toward improving traffic conditions in the city's downtown area.

The equipment to synchronize lights was something badly needed, the mayor said.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said the equipment would hopefully result in a big improvement in traffic conditions.

There was no suggested date for installation of the equipment but it is not expected the equipment will be in operation before early next year.

Also yesterday, council approved a traffic committee recommendation to hire Totten-Sims and Hubicsie Associates Ltd. to do a study of Belleville's north-south traffic arteries.

The agreement will cover a traffic survey and study, as well as conceptual and functional design for any new traffic arteries.

The firm was authorized to proceed immediately with the traffic survey at an estimated cost of $5,800.

To a question from Alderman Ross David as to whether this would be "just another survey," Mayor Scott said something must be done to improve north - south traffic movement by 1972.

Traffic Committee chairman Arthur Keegan agreed that prompt action was necessary to improve conditions both on Cannifton Road and North Front Street.

Council to Pay Committee Cost

The Quinte District Labor Council last night voted to pay the costs of launching the area's first citizens' anti-pollution committee.

The QDLC will pay the costs of the committee's organizational meeting — to be announced within the next week, said council president Robert Andrus.

Formation of the committee results from a recent seminar on pollution in Belleville — a joint project of the QDLC and Loyalist College.

Ceremony Promised

Belleville's new Dundas Street Bridge won't go into use without some official recognition.

Mayor J. Russell Scott told council members yesterday that an official opening was being planned for the new bridge when it went into operation.

The bridge, he said, had been proposed for many years and was a key link in an important new traffic artery and should have official recognition at its opening.

MacDonald Visit Program Is Set

TRENTON (Staff) — The date is set for the visit of Defence Minister Donald MacDonald to the Canadian Forces Base here.

Capt. Wayne Crowell, protocol officer, CFB Trenton, said yesterday that Mr. MacDonald would tour the Forces installation on Nov. 18.

Arriving about 10 a.m. the 38 - year - old defence minister, will be met on the flight line by Maj. Gen. A. C. Hull, Commander of Air Transport Command.

A guard of honor and the Air Transport Command Band will also be on hand as the new holder of the defence port-folio steps from his aircraft.

Following the formal reception Mr. MacDonald will be taken to a series of briefings on the operations of Air Transport Command.

A private luncheon will be held in his honor at the Officers' Mess.

During the afternoon, he will view various aircraft demonstrations and visit the maintenance area of No. 10 hangar where the largest planes of the command are serviced.

Rather than returning to Ottawa in the late afternoon as originally anticipated, the defence minister has agreed to address a dinner meeting being organized by the Prince Edward - Hastings Liberal Association.

George Cunningham, the riding's Liberal candidate, said this morning that the dinner would be held in the Batawa recreation hall at 7:30 p.m.

Mr. MacDonald's day in Trenton is part of a familiarization program to give him first - hand acquaintance with various aspects of his portfolio.

Cahill's Job Assured

It's November and Argos Planning Changes

TORONTO (CP) — Head coach Leo Cahill, standing amid the wreckage of the club once picked to run away with the Eastern Football Conference championship, said quietly: "There'll have to be a lot of changes made."

This was supposed to have been the year for Toronto Argonauts. Ottawa Rough Riders had lost quarterback Russ Jackson and other key personnel; Hamilton Tiger-Cats were getting a little old, and Montreal Alouettes would take years to build their way out of the cellar.

Cahill had taken a club, which finished last for five straight years, to third place with a 5-8-1 record in 1967. Argos rewrote his contract and the next year they were in second with nine victories and five losses.

Last year, their record was 10-4 and this spring the words Grey Cup were heard as early as training camp.

In each of the last two years, Toronto had gone right to the final and even won the opening game of the two-game, total-point series before eventually bowing to Ottawa.

This year something went wrong and Argos finished second with an 8-6 record—just behind the old men of Hamilton and slightly ahead of the rebuilt, resurging Alouettes.

Leo's job is safe, assured by chairman John Bassett, who said:

"It is up to him now to make certain readjustments on which I won't be consulted, but which must be perfectly obvious to anybody."

Cahill agreed on the need for "readjustments" but said:

"I can't be specific about the moves we want to make. I'll have to meet with my coaching staff and discuss the whole thing. We have a pretty good file on available players. What we have to talk over is where things went wrong this year and how we want to correct it. Once we've done that, we'll prepare a list of priorities and work from there."

All the decisions won't be up to Cahill, however:

Dave Mann veteran place-kicker and punter, is retiring. So is defensive captain Danny Nykoluk.

Tight end Mel Profit, who played this season without a contract, said:

"I have to assume they don't want me back. I'm a free agent now. They haven't talked to me all season."

Montreal reporters, here to cover the sudden-death semi-final, went home to write that Cahill now will be forced to get rid of quarterback Tom Wilkinson, dump Dave Ralmey and unload several malcontents.

Quarterback Don Jonas was reported to have asked to be traded. Ralmey and Bill Symons were supposed to have given the Argos a solid ground attack, but Jonas slowed Ralmey and a sputtering offensive line couldn't open wide enough holes for Symons.

Above all, the spirit of the previous two years seemed to be lacking.

"We knew we weren't strong enough in certain areas," Cahill said. "But, because the league was balanced this year, we still thought we could win."

Record with Handicap

New Orleans Saints' Tom Dempsey (19) who is missing a hand and part of his right foot, moves in to kick a record 63 yard field goal Sunday in New Orleans with two seconds to go in the National Football League game. The kick gave Dempsey the record which had been held by Dave Cutler of Edmonton Eskimos who kicked a 59-yard field goal Oct. 25. Rushing in is Detroit Lions' Alex Karras (71) and blocking is Saints' Bill Cody (66). Holding for kick is Joe Scarpati. The kick gave the Saints a 19-17 victory.

Baltimore's New Wrinkles Produce Win

MILWAUKEE (APT) — Two new wrinkles set the tone as Baltimore Colts continued their charge toward a National Football League playoff berth Monday night by downing Green Bay Packers 13-10.

One of those "new wrinkles" was unveiled on the first play of the game when running back Sam Havrilak, a former quarterback, took the ball on an apparent reverse and threw to wide receiver Roy Jefferson.

"It was one of those high school plays," Baltimore coach Don McCafferty said. "We have been using reverses all season, but that's the first time we have thrown off of it."

Then there was Jerry Hill's 15-yard scamper around right end for the Colts' only touchdown of the game. Quarterback John Unitas faked to Havrilak on a plunge through the center of the line, then pitched out to Hill, who turned the left end with nothing but a host of Baltimore jerseys out in front of him.

"That was a great call by John," McCafferty said.

"That's the first time we used it this year. You have to come up with new wrinkles now and then to keep everybody honest."

Although the score was close, the game wasn't. Green Bay took an early 3-0 lead, then watched Baltimore explode to a 13-3 advantage before the Packers scored their final points with less than two minutes remaining in the game.

Havrilak's pass on the first play, which was good for 56 yards, was the only real long gainer of the day as intermittent rain forced both teams to play more conservatively than they wanted to.

The drive started by long play finished, however, when Jim O'Brien missed a 39-yard field goal attempt.

After Mike Livingston capped a 71-yard Packer drive with a 28-yard field goal, Unitas took the Colts 86 yards leading to Hill's 15-yard sweep around left end.

O'Brien then booted three-pointers from 42 and 39 yards before Green Bay finished the scoring when Jim Grabowski plunged one yard for the final touchdown.

It was the first touchdown the Baltimore defence has allowed in 13 quarters of play.

The victory raised Baltimore's record to 7-1 in its bid for the American Conference's Eastern Division title. Green Bay, a member of the National Conference's Central Division, now is 4-4.

Oshawa Jockey Sets His Sights On 485 Record

TORONTO (CP) — A change in living habits hasn't affected Sandy Hawley's trips to the winner's circle.

The 21-year-old Oshawa, Ont., jockey rode victory No. 400 for the year at Greenwood race track Monday and says he's going after Willie Shoemaker's world record 485.

Hawley's magic number victory in the fifth, his second in a row on the day's card, was aboard Windfields Farm's Sweet Romance. The race for two-year-old fillies was run over a mile in one minute, 38 4-5 seconds.

And it was done in the Hawley fashion that has typified his meteoric career and made him the darling of the racing fans on the Florida circuit last winter—a photo finish.

His victory in the fourth, aboard Gardiner Farm's Dominneer III, was by a nose.

Hawley's 400 victories in a season places him in exclusive company. In addition to the Shoe's record 485 set in 1953, only Bill Hartack (417) in 1955 and Jorge Vesaques (428) in 1967 have reached that figure in a single season.

"Scared Desmond Hawley stormed on to the Florida race circuit last winter with 19 winners in 16 days at Tropical and was the leading rider at Hialeah when he decided to return home to race at Fort Erie, Ont. He returned against the wishes of Tom Hays of Oakville, Ont., who holds his jockey's contract until June 29, 1971, and Dake Campbell, the trainer who gave Hawley his start four years ago.

"If he'd followed my advice he'd be many dollars ahead of where he is today," Hays said recently. ". . . he could have easily beaten Shoemaker's record."

Hays implied at the time Hawley was accepting a lot of bad advice from the wrong sources. Campbell expressed equal displeasure but his pretege preferred staying in bed rather than rising at 5:30 a.m. and working the horses.

Or they haggle with the scalpers.

Or sneak in.

But Bob Sims, who owns the underling franchise at the stadium, is ready for those trying to crash the gate.

Sims has them classified into groups—the scalpers, the sharpers, the namedroppers and the bribers.

"We have 43 turnstiles," Sims said, "And that's the only legal way to get in. But there must be 50,000 ways—so high behind the scoreboard people try to get into the stadium."

"The most simple way is climbing the fence," Sims said "They kind of go up it like an attack at Fort Apache. They even use the same methods—rickety ladders, barrels."

"Some guy even drove a fork lift on the property and was lifting people over the fence. He didn't charge anything. I guess he was just being neighborly. Last year they had the snow pushed up that a four-year-old could have stepped into the place.

"Relatively few actually get in—maybe 50 or 75 a game. But at night the figure triples. The greatest ticket demand I've ever seen for a game was two weeks ago when the Vikes played the Rams at night. Even women try it."

The namedroppers are the first guys who try to crash the gate" Sims said. "They'll say anything; be anybody's relative. There was one guy who deserves an academy award."

"The guy said his diabetic grandfather was inside and was four hours overdue for his insulin shot. He even had the syringe with him.

"People will try anything. They'll even try to pay off the gatemen. We are unsympathetic."

"Some guys do what they do out of frustration. They show up two or three hours early and try to buy a ticket. Then it's one o'clock and they don't have a ticket. They've apprehensive. There's only one thing to do—force your way in."

"Five, 10 and 20 of them at a time get together—all nice guys normally—and rush the gates. They'll knock our men down. We get one or two of them. They're charged with disorderly conduct and are slapped with a $50 fine."

Met Stadium is patrolled by Sims' 218-man crew, 45 at the gates. Policemen also are stationed at the turnstiles to blunt the charges.

"We're not there to defend the place," Sims said. "We're there to protect the seats of people who have paid to get in."

Alouettes Airlift Relief

MONTREAL (CP) — Newfound flanker Lperis Cook likely will miss the first game of the Eastern Football Conference final against Hamilton Tiger-Cats here Sunday.

But already help is on the way in case he does.

Cook, normally in the defensive backfield, started as a flanker in the Alouettes 16-7 win against the Argonauts in Toronto Saturday.

The Als are bringing in a new utility back—Ted Alflen who played two years with Denver Broncos. Alflen is a graduate of Springfield College in Massachusetts. He reports here on a five-day trial and will work out as a defensive back and wide receiver.

Cook, injured on his first shot at offence this season, remained a question mark for head coach Sam Etcheverry Monday.

Cook suffered a knee injury in the third quarter of the Toronto game.

Jenkins Says He'll Be After $100,000 Contract

MITCHELL'S Bay, Ont. (CP) — Pitcher Ferguson Jenkins of Chicago Cubs said in an interview Monday he is going to ask the National League baseball club for a $100,000 contract for 1971.

"I'm going to be very firm about it too," he said while duck hunting in this community on Lake St. Clair, in the northwest of Chatham, Ont., his home town.

"I just think I've had four pretty good years in a row and I deserve that kind of contract."

he said. "I'm not really concerned what some of the other players are getting, although I see where Bob Gibson got $150,000 for next year and (Curt) Flood is supposed to be signed for $110,000."

Jenkins won 20 games for the fourth year in a row last season, becoming the 12th pitcher in major league history to do it. Last year was his fourth full season as a starter. Gibson, with the Cardinals, won 19 games for the fifth time last season but his record is spread over 11 seasons.

Boxing Gate $3 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — Closed-circuit television showings of last month's Muhammad Ali-Jerry Quarry heavyweight fight produced gross income in excess of $3 million from sites in the United States and Canada, Michael H. Malitz, president of Sports Action, Inc., estimated Monday.

Malitz said he based his "modest projection" on a study of 50 per cent of the returns from about 200 locations.

"Additional fixed income overseas will produce at least $250,000 and live gate in Atlanta came close to $300,000, which indicates a total of more than $3.4 million for the fight," Malitz said.

What's A Body to Do

Feverish Viking Fans Resort to Gate Crashing

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Feverished Minnesota Vikings football fans have a problem.

How do they watch National Football League powerhouse play when the 47,900-seat Metropolitan Stadium is sold out for every home game?

If fans don't have a ticket for next Sunday's game against Detroit Lions, they can get out of the 75-mile blackout radius and watch the game on television.

Tie Cobourg 5-5

Cougar Clawing Opens Door For Late Fairway Comeback

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

There are certain things on a hockey rink that the Cobourg Cougars do exceptionally well. They're strong forecheckers. Their defence is exceptionally good at clearing bodies from in front of their net. They're also adept at killing penalties — they have to be.

In addition, the Cougars are quite competent at a couple of other hockey "skills" that could only be appreciated by a third-rate goal-crazy boxcar or a hardcore Boston Bruin fan.

Cobourg's inability to recognize when a hard nose play stops and hardheaded play begins cost them an Eastern Ontario Junior B win last night as the Belleville Fairways bounced back from a 4-1 deficit to tie the Cougars 5-5.

Using their small ice surface and hard hitting style of play, Cobourg found themselves sitting on a 5-3 lead early in the third period.

Fairway defenceman John Mulvihill was belted with a cross in the nose from the stick of Ray Bevan, to which Belleville winger Brian Collins took exception. The pair waltzed through several fast bars of the "Old Shuffle", while Mulvihill was getting medical attention to stem the bleeding.

Affairs appeared to cool down when the linesmen separated O'Cain and Bevan, but headed up quickly enough when John Lowe made his bid for centre ring.

Obviously miffed by his exclusion from the general mayhem, the Cobourg defenceman clobbered O'Cain with a right stick and then headed himself with the task of attempting to kick (with skates on!) winger Cliff Janitsch who joined in the fray.

The outcome of the whole affair was that the two teams were left playing four men aside for much of the remainder of the game, a distinct advantage to the fast skating Fairways who had trouble getting untracked on the small ice surface.

Mulvihill, who clung with

JOHN MULVIHILL

Peter Ackerman was forced to play the final nine minutes of the game, when Dave Ferguson, the team's only other available rearguard was hit with a misconduct, provided to conduct a session on the fundamentals of stickhandling.

The sophocore rearguard, who figured in every Belleville scoring play, worked his way out of the corner and beat Mike J. Cain with a backhand shot to narrow Cobourg's lead to one goal.

He set up the equalizer at 15.58 of the last frame with a handling in from the point and cutting loose a hard shot that Cain was also able to get in front of. The rebound bounced out to Peter Ackerman whose shot was also stopped by the Cougar netminder, but right winger Brian O'Cain was able to muscle his way in close to scoop in the loose puck.

Cain, who had a relatively easy night in the first two periods came in with key saves on Mulvihill and Danny Lapenatis to preserve a tie for the home team.

Belleville once again started slowly as Cobourg notched them 33-17 at the end of two periods of play.

Ron Jury looked sharp in the first period but was left at the mercy of unchecked Cougar forwards for three of the Cobourg tallies. His best saves came in the second period when he did the splits to block a low point shot by John Gutteridge and then recovered to block the rebound and on a similar play when he sprawled to smother a rebound slapped by Kevin Lowe.

Danny Lapenatis, who later received a deep gash on his upper lip from an errant stick, assisted Belleville's first goal beating Cains with a low drive after Bradford and Mike Caine had given the home team a 2-0 edge.

Cliff Janitsch and Mulvihill counted in the second period for the Fairways, while Pete Kelly, John Gutteridge and Caine scored Cobourg's.

Mulvihill with two goals and three assists was the outstanding player on the ice for Belleville, while Peter Ackerman again came up with some tight defensive work, particularly in the third period.

On the forward lines Brian O'Cain, who skates with authority, but not much velocity found the Cobourg style of play to his liking, turning in a solid performance in his with Lapenotte and Janitsch.

Rod Palmer helped shake up the Belleville team in the last period, when the small portsider breezed two Cougars with solid bodychecks.

The point was the first in four games for Ron Fairwayz, whose next meeting will be next Tuesday night in Kingston.

On the Loose

Cobourg forward Dale Lucks takes a swipe at a loose puck while Belleville winger Cliff Janitsch closes in on the stray disc and defenceman Peter Ackerman fends off Cobourg's John Gutteridge.

The Fairways scored two unanswered goals in the final frame to pull out a 5-5 tie with the Cougars and pick up their first point in four Eastern Ontario Junior B contests to date.

Mulroneys, Marysville 'Gassed'

The Mustangs and Marchands had things pretty much their own way, coming up with impressive Gas House win last night.

Carl Boumhower counted three goals and two assists to lead the Merchants to a 7-3 win over Mulroneys. Perry Soules scored twice, with Ralph Boumhower collecting a goal and two assists and Wally Insted adding the other score.

Bernie Coughlan and Dave Middleton replied for Mulroneys as each team picked up one penalty.

John Smith scored twice and Pat Salmon and Tom Woodley once each to pace the Mustangs to a 4-0 shut out of Marysville. The winners collected four of the games five penalties.

Saints, Trojans Look For Winning COSSA Formula

While the combatants have not changed at least one Bay of Quinte high school joust is hoping that the coming will be a little different in this COSSA "AA" football finals tomorrow.

Quinte Saints will be looking to avenge a 34-18 loss when they travel to Peterborough to play Sir Thomas A. Stewart Griffins in the senior championship.

Quarterback Jim Reilly, whose aerial attack was so effective in last year's final game will be back at the helm for the defending COSSA champions. Reilly ran for the only score in the Griffins narrow 7-6 win over Pickering in the semi-final match last week.

Matching passes with Reilly will be Saint standout Rick Meagher, who passed for two touchdowns and ran for another in Quinte's 33-13 win over Oshawa Central.

One break for the Saints will be the return of standout defensive end Steve Whalen, who was injured in the final regular season game and missed the contest with Oshawa. His return will bolster an already solid front line.

Safety Terry Meagher is listed as a doubtful starter, and the loss of the top Saint defensive back could be a serious blow in the face of the Griffins sharp passing attack.

The game is scheduled to get under way at 1 p.m.

Moira Junior Trojans, on the other hand, hope that they can maintain their winning formula that they used to stop Adam Scott 38-27.

Adam Scott came up with a strong defensive effort to edge Ajax 13-9 in their semi-final match, while Moira won an abbreviated 14-0 decision over Pickering.

The Trojans balanced attack, consisting of halfbacks Dave Rutherford and Peter Stalkowich along with six-foot fullback Rick Bombay and hard-nosed guard Dave Kirby should test the Peterborough school's defensive crew.

The game is slated for 1.30 p.m. at Moira Secondary School.

Brundage Blasts Militants

NEW YORK (AP) — Avery Brundage chided the world's militant youth Monday for adopting the ideals of the Olympic Games and then using the wrong means to achieve them.

"What the kids are demonstrating for today are the very things the Olympic movement has been fostering for 58 years," said the 88-year-old president of the International Olympic Committee.

"Their motives may be good but their methods are bad. "They say they want peace. Peace has been the cornerstone of the Olympics since they were started. They say they want equality of races and opportunities. They want to rectify injustices and uproot the establishment.

"The Olympics have the same goals—big and small countries, peoples of different races, colors and creeds striving together. No distinctions. The emphasis on the individual and not the nation.

"But the rebelling kids want to burn, loot and destroy to gain their aims. The Olympics do it through sports. I am not discouraged. I think youngsters will realize this and come around to the Olympic ideal."

Brundage, IOC president for the last 20 years, was a guest at Olympic House at which 15 lithographs and posters were unveiled in commemoration of the 20th Olympic Games at Munich in 1972.

NHL Surprise

Vancouver Scorers Tell Story

MONTREAL (CP)—A look at the Stan Division standings and at the leaders' list in the individual scoring race shows why Vancouver Canucks are the surprise team of the young National Hockey League season.

With 13 points in 14 games, the Canucks trail Boston Bruins, the East Division leaders, by six points and New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens, tied for second place, five.

The newly-formed Canucks are two points ahead of fifth-place Detroit Red Wings, six seventh place with 11 points and seven clear of the Buffalo Sabres.

Maple Leafs and have seven more than their 1970 expansion brothers—Buffalo Sabres.

The Canucks have the leading scorer among the teams which joined the NHL when Bo originally entered into a two-division league in 1967.

Wayne Maki, Vancouver's 13th choice in Max Kaminsky's draft, and Murray Hall, who played the last two seasons for the Canucks in the Western Hockey League, are tied for fifth spot in the scoring race with 10 points apiece.

Only the first-place Bruins have more players in the top 25 scoring leaders than the Canucks.

Boston's Phil Esposito continues to lead with 23 points, three more than team-mate John McKenzie and five more than Rene-mate Ken Hodge and Jean Ratelle of New York.

In addition to Maki and Hall, Canucks' Orland Kurtenbach and Andre Boudrias are the other Canucks in the leading scorers list. The Bruins have five players listed and the Canadiens four, the same as Vancouver.

Chicago Black Hawks have three players on the list, Detroit two, and New York, Toronto Buffalo, St. Louis and California Golden Seals one each.

The six teams which joined the NHL in the 1967-68 expansion have an improved record against the six original teams, compared to last season.

There have been 21 games involving the 12 teams and the new teams won 10, lost 15 and tied six for 26 of a possible 42, or 41.9 per cent.

This compares with eight wins, 14 losses, seven ties and 23 points after an many interlocking games last season.

The St. Louis goaltending pair of Ernie Wakely and Glenn Hall lead the goaltenders' race with six averages of 1.75. The pair combined for 4 shutout last season Boston, the first time since Feb. 14, 1968, that two netminders shared a shutout.

Ed Giacomin of New York and Tony Esposito of Chicago lead in shutouts with two each.

Burlington Braves Try To Avénge 1967 Loss

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — In November of 1967, coach Bernie Custis took his Burlington Braves to Regina for their first Canadian junior football final. They lost 29-6 to Edmonton Wildcats.

Custis, a former Tiger-Cat star, has a chance to avenge that loss Wednesday afternoon when the Braves take on Regina Rams in the 1970 title clash at Regina.

"We're going out there to win it this time," Custis said in a recent interview.

Braves appear to have a good chance. They have won 13 consecutive games averaging 43.5 points a game while yielding only 4.5.

En route to the Eastern Canada final, the Braves polished off Hamilton Hurricanes in their own Ontario Junior Football Conference final 54-13 in a two-game, total-point series, then trounced Brantford in an all-Ontario final 52-13.

Custis feels this is the best Ontario team since the Parkdale Lions won the title in 1967.

Three members of the team will be making a return visit to Regina. Five-point backfielder Dave Hutton, four-year centre Adrian Taylor and four-year offensive tackle Jim Scales all played against Edmonton.

While not a big team—the offensive average is 202 pounds, the defensive line 220 pounds—Braves are deep on talent. Their offensive backfield contains three quarterbacks. One of them, Jay Graydon, came on in late November to spark Bovina to a 20-13 Eastern Canada win over NDG Maple Leafs.

The Braves real strength, however, is a defence that boasts six shutouts and went seven games at one stretch without conceding a touchdown. No team had scored more than 14 points against them.

Their ace in the hole could be a 17-year-old rookie player. As a rookie place kicker, Ian Sinclair has converted 64 of Braves' 66 touchdowns in their 13 league games, kicked three field goals and three singles.

Canadiens' Equipment Stolen

BOSTON (AP) — Police reported Monday that $371 worth of hockey equipment was stolen from Montreal Canadiens' dressing room some time after the team's 6-1 National Hockey League defeat by Boston Bruins Sunday night.

Police said the thieves broke into the medical room at Boston Garden and then gained entry to the visiting team dressing room by cutting a hole in the ceiling.

Meanwhile, Marc Tardif, Canadiens' forward injured in Sunday night's game, was released from Massachusetts General Hospital Monday.

Tardif, 21, suffered a possible concussion when checked into the boards by Boston's Don Awrey in the first period.

Plante Sidelined For at Least Week

TORONTO (CP) — Jacques Plante will be lost to Toronto Maple Leafs for at least a week after an injury suffered in Saturday's 3-2 National Hockey League loss to Vancouver Canucks was diagnosed as a stretched ligament.

The veteran goaltender's injuries were detailed Monday after he was examined by the club's physician, Dr. David Hastings.

Murray McLachlan has been brought in from Toronto's Central Hockey League farm club at Tulsa to serve as backup to Bruce Gamble in Wednesday's game here against Vancouver.

Two other Leafs injured during the team's disastrous three-game road trip to the West Coast which also saw them lose to California Golden Seals and Los Angeles Kings, will be dressed for the Wednesday game.

Defenceman Rick Ley had stitches inserted from his knee and winger Guy Trottier worked out with the team after he returned from examination of an injured hand which disclosed a ruptured nerve.

Jim Gregory, Toronto general manager, indicated Monday he is concerned with Leafs' play this year in which they have won only three of 12 starts. While implying that he didn't plan any changes, Gregory left to look over Tulsa Oilers in their game tonight against Omaha.

Balding Looks Good

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — At Balding of Toronto, four-time Canadian Professional Golfers Association champion, showed solid form Monday in a nine-hole test for the World Cup golf championship opening here Thursday.

Balding, the 1966 individual winner who is playing this time with Bob Cox Jr. of Vancouver, had two birdies on his round but did not keep it unscored.

The tournament is being held at the Jockey Club where 88 golfers from 44 countries will compete for both individual and team honors.

Belding will be seeking Canada's fifth individual title in the 17 years of World Cup competition. Canadian great Stan Leonard of Vancouver won it twice and George Knudsen of Toronto once.

Hees Calls for Restraint

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau was urged in the Commons Monday by George Hees (PC-Prince Edward-Hastings) to hold meetings with business and labor to encourage price and wage restraints.

Mr. Hees said there is an urgent need for co-operation since the heads of "principal business organizations" in Canada have said that many of their members are not willing to continue price restraints unless there is co-operation from labor.

Mr. Trudeau said he did not think the business statements were that categorical. There have been meetings at various levels, he said, and these will continue.

Mr. Hees said the prime minister should "put the good of the economy ahead of his fear of a rebuff by labor leaders."

Public Order Bill Debate

Government Accused of 'Polarizing Opinion'

OTTAWA (CP) — The government was accused Monday of leading the Canadian people on an emotional binge after invoking the War Measures Act to deal with trouble in Quebec.

Commons debate continued on the proposed Public Order Temporary Measures Act, 1970.

David MacDonald (PC—Egmont) said the government has "fanned the flame of emotion" and polarized public opinion since the War Measures Act was invoked Oct. 16.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) said that Canadians have gone on a "psychedelic trip" as a result of the act's invocation.

The public order bill, on which debate continues today, continues but limits government powers proclaimed under the War Measures Act that would be revoked when the new legislation is enacted.

The bill, being studied clause by clause in committee-of-the-whole, outlaws the Front de Libération du Quebec and makes membership in the organization punishable by a jail term of up to five years.

The Commons approved Monday an amendment by John Burton (NDP—Regina East) that would ensure that troops only be given police powers when assigned to specific duty by order-in-council. The motion carried 31 to 23, with only the Liberals opposed.

A surprise vote on the amendment was that of Pierre de Bane (L—Matane), who left party ranks and voted with the opposition. Some 250 members were absent from the House when the vote was called.

The Senate held an unusual Monday night sitting. It usually meets Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Mr. MacDonald, the lone MP to vote against second reading of this public order bill, said that one of the "greatest disservices of the government" has been that it has built up emotions rather than damping them since the early days of the kidnapping crisis.

The government had not tried to explain the situation through "a reasonable process of facts."

Referring to remarks by Prime Minister Trudeau on television last week about "wishy-washy thinking", Mr. MacDonald said:

"It was the height of dishonesty for him to suggest on the public media of this country that this kind of problem can easily be resolved by resorting to strong opinions, to disagreements or to simple answers."

Mr. Peters said that there is no doubt 97 per cent of all Canadians supported the government action in invoking the War Measures Act. "We might as well have been taking LSD."

There might be a need for curbing the news media so that news is based on facts, he said.

He also said that police forces failed badly in the kidnapping crisis. The RCMP was more concerned "in dealing with drug problems than with the FLQ.

"Dogs are trained to sniff out marijuana but they are not trained to sniff out explosives."

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker said that illegal censorship is being imposed throughout Canada.

He said that censorship is not permitted under the War Measures Act but there is censorship and "therefore it is censorship that is being illegally applied."

Various radio stations had been made aware that certain types of information would not be in the public interest to broadcast. Certain student newspapers in some universities had been "given to understand" that they were subject to censorship.

This was a "subtle kind" of censorship.

Referring to a remark by Justice Minister John Turner that under the regulations there would be an offence only if journalists were used as a "propaganda vehicle" for the FLQ, Mr. Diefenbaker said:

"I should like to know who determines whether they are being used as propaganda agents."

The former prime minister also said that if the evidence of Bernard Lortie, self-confessed member of the FLQ, to a coroner's inquest in Montreal Saturday is to be believed the kidnaping of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte was the "most infantile example of amateurism that could have been put together."

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) said that while he supported the War Measures Act regulations he opposes the police action on psychological grounds.

People were aware of the dangers of the War Measures Act. But there was a tendency to accept the public order bill as a way out of the problem.

But the psychological victory that had been won by the government action in invoking the War Measures Act could be lost in continuing the powers in more limited form under new legislation. There was no justification for continuing "emergency legislation."

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said there was unanimous support from the people when the government invoked the War Measures Act but soon there was growing criticism of the government.

Police had not been as successful at infiltrating the FLQ as American police had been into terrorist organizations in that country.

Municipal Officials' Benefits to Improve

TORONTO (CP) — The combined retirement savings of employees of Ontario municipalities will earn greater interest in future and buy improved retirement benefits, the legislature was told Monday.

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough told the house an amendment to the Ontario Municipal Employees Retirement Board system will increase interest earned on employee premiums to about 6½ per cent from 6¼ per cent.

The Health Employees Registration Board, which runs the employee retirement fund, intends to use its increased assets to increase benefits "to a considerable extent."

The bill was given third reading and approval by the legislature and needs only proclamation by the lieutenant-governor.

The fund, built up from premiums paid by municipal employees, can be invested only in provincial debentures, and until now the interest was restricted to 6¼ per cent.

This has been a sore point for the employees because interest on other investments increased by 50 per cent.

The legislation permits the provincial treasurer and the registration board to fix the interest every year according to the weighted average interest paid on all provincial debentures and those debentures which the province guarantees, such as the debentures of Ontario Hydro.

Liquor Vote Crosses Parties

TORONTO (CP) — Three New Democratic Party members, including Dr. Morton Shulman, broke party lines Monday night to vote with the government in opposing a Liberal proposal to outlaw local option in liquor plebiscites across the province.

Dr. Shulman, member for Toronto High Park, joined party colleagues Fred Burr, Sandwich-Riverside, and Fred Young, Toronto Yorkview, in opposing the amendment in the legislature by Liberal Leader Robert Nixon.

The vote was 56 to 31 with other NDP members voting for the proposal.

In an interview outside the house, Dr. Shulman said he voted against the amendment because "the people in my riding have voted dry" for many years.

Mr. Nixon's amendment would have provided uniformity of liquor laws in municipalities across the province, many of which now must acquire two-thirds majority in a plebiscite to become wet. Mr. Nixon's amendment also provided for the liquor licensing board to rule on whether a liquor vote can be held in a municipality.

The NDP split was the first for the party this session, and came only a few weeks after Stephen Lewis took over as leader.

"We are all here and we are voting," Mr. Lewis said with a smile in answer to jeers from the government benches during the vote-counting.

But Elmer Sopha, Liberal member from Sudbury, got in the last word when his vote after the vote was announced and, pointing to the government members, said:

"As far as we are concerned over here, now that you've got Shulman, you can have him."

Conservation Project Assistance Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — Marvin Howe (PC—Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo) proposed in the Commons Monday that the Canada Water Act be amended to provide financial assistance to municipalities for conservation projects "so necessary for pollution control."

Mr. Howe's motion that the matter be referred to the Commons committee on national resources for consideration could not be moved, however, because there was not the required unanimous consent.

The Ontario member said there is a need for such assistance since the repeal of the Canada Water Conservation Assistance Act. Such assistance would help municipalities faced with rising unemployment and welfare costs.

Ontario Seeks Ottawa Repeal Of Three Per Cent Surtax

TORONTO (CP) — Treasurer Charles MacNaughton called on Monday night for the abolition of the federal government's three per cent surtax on personal income by the end of 1979.

In a speech concluding a special debate on taxation policy in the Ontario legislature, Mr. MacNaughton said such a step would generate an "immediate stimulus to the Canadian economy" which is required if the province is to reduce unemployment.

It would demonstrate to taxpayers that "temporary tax increases for economic stabilization purposes are indeed temporary." And it would also restore confidence that governments are "genuinely seeking reforms that benefit taxpayers."

Mr. MacNaughton's hour-long speech was continually interrupted by heckling from the opposition benches.

Speaker Fred Cass twice called for order when Mr. MacNaughton's remarks were drowned out by shouts and catcalls.

The surtax was imposed in 1968 as an anti-inflation measure, and extended by Ottawa last year to Dec. 31, 1979.

Ontario takes a strong position that "this temporary surtax should not be incorporated as a built-in component of a reformed income tax structure," Mr. MacNaughton said.

He said Ontario is continuing its analysis of revenue implications and indications are that the current income tax system itself could generate about $29 billion by 1980 compared with $19 billion in 1979.

Under the federal white paper system, revenues would grow even faster to a total of about $35 billion by 1980—an increase of about $5 billion in revenue growth as a function of tax reform."

This capacity to generate huge taxation revenue could lead to further massive public expenditures. One way to check this would be eliminate of the temporary surtax.

Mr. MacNaughton also attacked the New Democratic Party, which, he said, supports every appeal for greater spending, backs every demand for increased services, and advocates many new expenditure programs.

"I think the people of Ontario have a right to know what limits, if any, the NDP proposes for its policies on government spending and taxation," he said.

Education Minister William Davis announced the creation of a three-man committee to find "acceptable procedures" for solving contract negotiation problems between school boards and teachers.

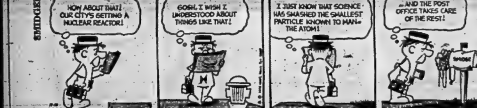
Mr. Davis said C. E. Bennett, chief judge of the county and district courts of Ontario, will head the committee.

Girls In Slacks Sent Home

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — About 20 girls, most of them in Grade 10, were sent home Monday from a high school for wearing slacks to school instead of dresses.

"We're training them to be young businesswomen and I think it is better for them to be dressed like young businesswomen," said Lewis Cook, principal of Commerce high school. "We're the only Windsor school with a full business and commerce program."

Many of the girls said they will return to school today wearing slacks and will encourage their friends to do the same. Mr. Cook said girls wearing slacks will continue to be sent home.



STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Trips by LSD Rarely Uneventful

You decide to take a trip — by auto. You leave home in high anticipation. The sun shines, the weather is great, and you just know you are in for a relaxing time.

Without warning, a thunderstorm strikes you one hour later on the highway. You crawl along at 20 miles an hour instead of at 65. Later on there's a detour, and for 25 miles you bounce along on a bumpy road. On the first day, at least, you've had a rough time. The following day everything is "normal" again, and you are thankful.

Consider the LSD trip. According to some youngsters, it also begins in sunshine and high anticipation. But, unlike an innocent auto adventure, the LSD trip stays bumpier and gets more difficult as the days go by. Comes the time when remorse and anxiety become emotional detours harmful to the normal way of life.

According to my files, increasing numbers of youngsters are thinking "twice" before they take the first fateful step on an LSD trip. They are not only concerned about their own physical and psychological reactions, but about marriage and the effect of LSD on unborn children.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 16 and have taken quite a few trips. For the past three months I have taken none, and don't intend to again. I'm really worried now that I've read that LSD can cause damage to a girl's chromosomes.

Will it wreck my kids? I am to have three years in the future. Maybe it's too late. But I am concerned about all this now because I have found a really great guy I am fond of.

He questioned me about LSD. He hinted in a way (not really meaning me) that he never really wanted to marry a girl who ever took a trip. He says he loves kids and wants beautiful kids.

Well, so do I! I know a lot of guys feel this way. When he said this it really hurt. I only wish girls could realize this risk before they take their first "lovely" trip. Life can get quite stormy. (Signed: Wish I'd Stayed Home.)

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I just learned that my son is taking marijuana and LSD. He has just returned from Vietnam and he has 13 more months to go. He is our only son. Is there anything you can tell him? — Mrs. D.

Comment: I think he will listen to "Wish I'd Stayed Home" more than he will to me. Let him read what she wrote. What she expressed applies to boys as well as to girls.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 15 years old. When I was a baby I had a very severe case of chicken pox. It has left me with little holes, especially on my forehead and on the sides of my face.

I look a mess. It has made me too conscious of myself. I can't look in a mirror. Is there anything to do for it? — Miss R.

Comment: Have your doctor refer you to a dermatologist. (Tell your parents how much it bothers you.) There is a process called "dermabrasion" in which skin is planed down and blemishes are removed. Whether or not such treatment will be recommended in your case, I don't know. But it's worth considering. Why go on suffering unnecessarily?

Sydney J. Harris Says

South Unpopular Name

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

In a recent issue of the Saturday Review, Richard Armour, the popular satirist and humorist (whose new book, "A Short History of Sex," has just landed on my desk), wrote an amusing little piece on people named after directions — North, West, East and South.

He mentioned that he just met his first person named East, had never met a South, but knew several Norths and many more Wests; then pondered on the relative frequencies or rarity of these directional names.

The piece reminded me of a friend I knew long ago, whose wife was daughter of a Russian emigrant here. Her father was one of four sons to come to America, and all changed their names when they came, one to South, one to East, and one to West.

I have met more Easts than Mr. Armour has, but the only South I can recall was that famous old Jazz fiddler, Eddie South, "the dark angel of the violin," as he was then promoted.

Not only the prevalence, but also the prominence, of Wests over the other directions was confirmed by Mr. Armour's research into the Social Register of Who's Who in America — where there are 45 Wests, 13 Norths, only one East, and no South whatever.

If these are old family names, it is indeed hard to understand the proliferation of Wests over the other three directions — except that the movement of populations has been steadily westward, as it perhaps people who settled in a new land took the name of the direction they had come.

Actually, all the Romance languages borrowed the names of the cardinal points of the compass from the Germanic invaders rather than from Latin (and also the names of most of the colors, though nobody knows why.) It is, strange that even though German ranks quite low in the number of root-forms in English, all our directions are from Germanic words — nord, sud, osten, and westen.

If we had borrowed them from the Latin, as we did most words of this kind, we would call our directions septentrio, meridies, oriens and occidens. As you can tell, however, we still use Orient and Occident and Southern terms for the two hemispheres.

It puzzles me, as it does Mr. Armour, that there aren't more people named South which is out-numbered 10 to one by North and nearly 40 to one by West. But then, think of all the people named Winter and Summer and Spring — but has anyone met a Mr. Autumn? Even in the fall?

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For November 11

Your birthday today: . This year your introspective side develops far more than the playful surface you present to the world. Your intuition sharpens and occasional sparkling moments of clarity light your way through a patch of frustration ahead. (Use that time for reflection, planning when it comes.) Your limitations this year are superficial, and are transcended by your becoming a better sort of person. Today's natives have inventive minds, make convivial friends and formidable adversaries.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Caution about finances would mark your day, at least until evening after your intuition has had time to work. Pursue romantic or sentimental leisure.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): The same crosscurrents prevail as yesterday. Relax your inner self and the whole shadow dissolves as a bad dream late in the afternoon. Then you can wind up the day well.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You still feel caught in the cross-pulls of conflicting energies. Wait it out. Things come up right later in the day and you can have a pleasant evening.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Seek some creative path that has not been overrused lately; explore it alone. Esthetic factors, poetry, vision are important today, while material things falter.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Home life and career effort run at cross-purposes. Settle personal affairs first; if possible, take the day off for catching up on family discrepancies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Most of today belongs properly to private considerations, meditation, health care. Go back refreshed to the work world late in the day, or even better, tomorrow.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): The early half of today is variable and your work is sidetracked by outside factors. Keep matters uncomplicated and in shape for later review.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): The more you fret trying to get things done, the less will be achieved. People love to drift a bit, bumble into peace. The evening proves interesting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Your public life is full of minor obstacles. Your private affairs, romantic inclinations turn out to be memorable this evening, according to what you do about them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Let everything ride now wherever you can. Give others a chance to use the problem and possible solutions. The evening is for social activities — there may be somebody new.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Keep your tact and good humor going, as some of today is not really funny. Things tend to straighten out, and you go full speed ahead in the afternoon.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Wait's while for acquaintance to grow into friendship. If it does, then it will be time to trust and confide. The evening is for some lively conversation.

Study Teams Bring in Report on Restoring Falls' Beauty

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (CP) — A joint Canadian-American organization outlined tentative plans Monday to restore the natural beauty of the American Falls.

The American Falls International Board of the International Joint Commission said one plan is to remove at least part of the rock that have piled up at the base of the American Falls over the years.

The study team said that also being considered is a plan to build a small dam downstream from the falls, raising the water level and helping hide much of the rock at the base of the falls. The estimated cost of such a dam is $8.7 million to $13.3 million.

The proposals were outlined at a news conference by T. M. Patterson of Ottawa, a spokesman for the four-member American Falls International Board.

Patterson said a final decision on removal of the rock would rest on findings by geologists on whether removing the rubble would weaken the stone face of the falls.

Meanwhile, the Toronto Globe and Mail quoted geologist T. A. Wilkinson of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers as telling the conference that a rockfall of the same magnitude as that of 1954 is almost certain to hit the American Falls in the next few years.

Sixteen years ago 185,000 tons of rock broke away from the face of the American Falls and plunged into Niagara gorge.

The newspaper quotes Mr. Wilkinson as saying the area is honeycombed with vertical fractures and has become partly detached from the main rock mass.

The danger area is immediately next to Prospect Point, where visitors take elevators down to board the Maid of the Mist ferry on the U.S. side of the river.

Mr. Wilkinson is quoted as saying he is not able to determine exactly when the rockfall might occur, but that it could happen next month—or 10 to 20 years from now.

Canada and U.S. Cut Central Bank Rates

Canadian Rate Six Per Cent

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada announced Tuesday night a reduction of its lending rate to six per cent from 6½; the fourth such reduction in the the Canadian bank rate in five months.

The new interest rate, reflecting recent declines in commercial short-term lending rates, will be effective when Canadian banks reopen Thursday following the Remembrance Day bank holiday today.

Bank governor Louis Rasminsky said that since early this year the bank has been loosening restraints on money supply and credit amid signs of a slowdown in business activity caused by anti-inflationary policies.

The result has been more ready cash in the commercial banks and declines in short-term interest rates. The chartered banks also have reduced some of their lending and mortgage rates.

The latest bank-rate reduction "will bring it more closely into line with other short-term interest rates " Mr. Rasminsky said.

He has said in recent speeches that, while monetary

Lovely Weather - - for Ducks

Like four-year-old Carol Lundin — with raincoat, hat, umbrella — most people need special gear for getting through wet-weather days now dampening Quinte district. But it's still lovely weather for ducks, as this nonchalant stroller outside Quinte Humane Society seemed to indicate. She was one of the pets greeting visiting school children — including Carol — from York Road Kindergarten, near Trenton. (For story, see Page 2.)

U. S. Banks Get Cheaper Money

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A trend toward lower interest rates in the U.S. was given new momentum today when the price of borrowed money was made slightly cheaper for commercial banks.

The U.S. Federal Reserve Board, by approving earlier Tuesday a cut to 5¾ per cent from six in the discount rate, advertised its ambition to stimulate American economic growth.

Lowering of the discount rate, which is the interest charged to commercial banks for short-term loans, was widely welcomed—although there was some criticism that the cut was too small.

The move bopes among U.S. businessmen that the reduction would lead to a cut in the prime interest rate, currently 7½ per cent, which is what commercial banks charge their best customers.

The reserve board's action raised the prospect of a new round of prime rate reductions by major banks, financial observers said.

Monetary sources said the cut was an official acknowledgment that credit conditions are be coming easier in the American economy, which exerts an important influence on world economic conditions.

The reduction is also in line with the Nixon administration's aim of accelerating economic growth to reduce unemployment —now at a high of 5.8 per cent —before the 1972 presidential election.

The high level of unemployment apparently hurt the Re publicans in last week's elections.

The six-per-cent U.S. discount rate was the highest in 40 years It had been raised to that level in April, 1969.

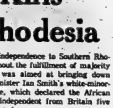
Six of the 12 banks of the fed eral reserve system put the new rate of 5¾ per cent into effect today. The other six are expected to follow suit in a few days.

British Veto Kills Motion on Rhodesia

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Britain vetoed an Afro-Asian resolution on Rhodesia in the UN Security Council Tuesday night, calling it an attempt to dictate conditions for working out a settlement with the breakaway state. It was Britain's fifth veto.

Twelve of the 15 council members voted for the resolution, and the other two — the United States and France — abstained. Although only nine votes were needed for approval, the negative by one of the five permanent members killed the resolution.

The resolution called on Britain "not to grant independence to Southern Rhodesia without the fulfillment of majority rule." It was aimed at bringing down Prime Minister Ian Smith's white-minority regime, which declared the African territory independent from Britain five years ago today.



Britain's chief delegate, Sir Colin Crowe, served notice before the ballot that his government was prepared to cast the veto. He called the resolution an attempt to dictate conditions for a settlement with Rhodesia "from the outside," and he said this was unacceptable to Prime Minister Edward Heath's Conservative government.

Swiss Overtake Canadian Output

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadians may have dropped to fourth place among the world's most prosperous peoples, a report published by the World Bank suggests.

Not only the United States, but also Sweden and Switzerland were in Canada's in the bank's calculations of gross national product per capita—the volume of goods and services produced by a nation, divided by the number of its inhabitants.

Their figures, just made public in the World Bank atlas of 1970, are for 1968, the last year available.

The bank, known officially as the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, lists per-capita GNP for the leaders in U.S. dollars as United States $3,980, Sweden $3,040, Switzerland $2,490 and Canada $2,460.

Although Canada has trailed behind Sweden in various international charts for several years, the surge by Switzerland is regarded here as a new development.

GM Strike Settled

OSHAWA (CP) — Production at strike-bound General Motors of Canada Ltd. plants could resume the week of Nov. 23, officials of both GM and the United Auto Workers said today.

Following announcement in Detroit of a tentative settlement in the eight-week strike against GM plants in the United States and Canada, GM and union officials outlined the points remaining to be settled in Canada.

All that is needed for a final settlement in the seven plants in six Canadian cities—five in Ontario and one in Quebec—is agreement on issues uperifically affecting Canadian workers: agreement on local issues at two Canadian plants; and ratification of all agreements by the UAW membership.

Bill Harding, secretary-treasurer of UAW Local 222 which represents about 10,000 GM workers here, said he estimates a settlement of Canadian master-level issues could be reached "within a week."

Am Stapleton, chief of GM's Canadian negotiating team, said in Toronto that this time-table is "quite realistic."

The two sides said details of the contract would not be released until after a meeting of the union's 229-member GM council later today.

Sources close to the negotiations, however, said it included these items:

—A union demand for a return to an unlimited cost-of-living wage escalator clause under which workers' wages go up with increases in the U.S. consumer price index.

—Retirement at $380 a month for workers with 30 years of service at age 58 in the first year of the contract, age 56 in the second year and age 55 in the third year.

—A compromise wage increase in the first year of the contract somewhere between the union's last demand for an additional 61.5 cents hourly and the company's last offer of a 36-cent boost.

—Four weeks' vacation after 20 years' service.

Leaders of Half World Head for Paris to Honor de Gaulle

PARIS (CP) — Leaders of about half the nations of the world converged on Paris today to pay funeral tribute to Charles de Gaulle—a simple mass for the man whose death, President Pompidou said, made France a widow.

The presence of some 80 world leaders at the memorial service in Notre Dame Cathedral Thursday will mark the towering stature in history of the former French army officer whose unshakable faith in France and stubborn will helped rescue his nation from humiliation in the Second World War and prevented civil war in 1958.

The monarchs, presidents and other leaders will attend a mass of simple liturgy, devoid of pomp and circumstance in accordance with de Gaulle's instructions in a letter he wrote in 1952.

Four hours later will come the simple funeral which de Gaulle decreed for himself. It will be held in the village church at Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises, 100 miles east of Paris, where the former president died suddenly Monday night. He was nearly 80.

Only members of the family, close friends and representatives of the army will attend the funeral.

Among those present at Notre Dame, the famed Gothic church, will be Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain, Prince Charles of Britain, heir to the throne, U.S. President Nixon and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau will not go to Paris, leaving Ottawa's representation in the hands of External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.

De Gaulle cut short a state visit to Canada in 1967 after Lester Pearson, then prime minister, bluntly rebuked him for his "vive le Quebec libre" slogan shouted to crowds outside Montreal's city hall.

Trudeau said in a message of sympathy: "Gen. de Gaulle's destiny was an exceptional one, a one for which he was fitted by his unique qualities and by his profound affection for France. For this reason he was a great figure. . . ."

Other West European notables who have announced they will attend include Queen Juliana of The Netherlands, King Baudoin of Belgium, President Gustave Heinemann of West Germany and President Giuseppe Saragat and Prime Minister Emilio Colombo of Italy.

West German Chancellor Willy Brandt also had planned to attend but he came down with influenza today and his doctors ordered him to bed. But former chancellors Ludwig Erhard and Kurt Georg Kiesinger will be present.

Africa will be represented by 16 statesmen, among them Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia and leaders of former French colonies in West Africa which achieved independence under de Gaulle.

Israeli President Zalman Shazar will be accompanied by the Jewish nation's veteran statesman and first prime minister, David Ben-Gurion. The Arab world will be represented by the Shah of Iran and Lebanese President Suleiman Frangieh.

De Gaulle's body lay in state in Colombey today in his well-guarded home, La Boisserie.

The family admitted a few persons to the house Tuesday to pay their respects.

There were unconfirmed reports from Moscow that Kosygin would make the pilgrimage to Colombey today as a personal gesture in the man who tried to make France a bridge between the East and West blocs.

Nixon is arriving in Paris around midnight, bringing with him aboard the presidential jet de Gaulle's eldest grandson, Charles de Gaulle, 20, who had arrived in New York only a few days ago to begin a work-study program with a law firm.

China broke its silence Tuesday night when the New China news agency carried a Peking dateline announcement of de Gaulle's death and a brief summary of his career.

Soviet leaders praised the general for developing friendly ties with Russia and said his name was inseparable from the joint struggle in the grim years of the Second World War.

The Earl of Avon, who as Anthony Eden was British war secretary during the Second World War, wrote in a newspaper article that de Gaulle was realistic and ruthless in all his plans.

He said it was a mistake to regard the general's willingness to stand alone as just a striving for power. It was, he said, "an expression of his service to a France in which he believed without equivocation and for which he would at any time die with pride."

Hydro Hike Protested

Unanimous support was given at yesterday'd meeting of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission to officially protest the increase in rates announced by Ontario Hydro chairman George Gathercole, Nov. 1.

The commission will seek city council's support in their protest as well as other provincial commissions through the Ontario Municipal Electric Association.

The OMEA is an association of commissioners from all utilities and acts as liaison between boards and Ontario Hydro.

The rules in rates, which will go into effect Jan. 1, 1971, increases total cost of power to Belleville by 6.7 per cent.

Utilities Commission manager Ernest L. Burnham stated that "as of yet, the commission does not know how much will be added" to Belleville rates.

He explained that the rates would have to be increased. "It's unfortunate, but the commission can't operate at a loss; we have to break even at least."

He went on to explain that the PUC faces some of the same problems which brought about the increase by Ontario Hydro. Not only are more materials required but new wage contracts will be negotiated for Jan. 1.

Pollution controls, conversion of coal-burning plants to cleaner, natural gas or cleaner coal have formed a major portion of hydro's costs.

As one commissioner put it, "we understand why the increased rates, but we will still register an objection."

Petting Session

White goats, among inhabitants of Ontario Humane Society's Quinte shelter, come in for some affectionate petting from school children yesterday. Tour of shelter — by Trenton-area York Road Kindergarten — is one of growing number of such visits permitted by OHS.

Council Will Seek Permission To Continue Zwicks Dumping

Despite a warning from Mayor J. Russell Scott that the request in all probability would be turned down, city council last night voted to make application to the department of energy and resources management for continued use of East Zwick's Island as a garbage dump.

The mayor stated that seepage from the sanitary land fill operation on East Zwick's was polluting the bay and any government organization which allowed continued use would be derelict in its duty.

Application for continued use was a sure way of having the dump closed down, he said.

The motion for application to energy management was made by Alderman Donald Soutter after council learned that Commercial Refuse Services had withdrawn former concessions to merchants in the dumping of commercial refuse.

Under the terms of the city's agreement with Commercial Refuse Services, city garbage collected by the garbage collector will be disposed of at a sanitary land fill area in Sidney township.

But private cars, trailers and trucks are to be charged set fees for use of the dump.

This charge for private vehicles raised objection in council, particularly from merchants and industrial plants who are now dumping free at East Zwick's Island.

The result was that a compromise was worked out under which commercial users would be offered season tickets at a lower rate.

Under the terms of the agreement, dumping at the new site is to commence Jan. 1.

Now, however, the concession previously granted to retail merchants is withdrawn.

In view of this, Alderman Soutter suggested that application be made for continued use of East Zwick's as a dump.

If this is granted, a study will be made regarding the economic feasibility of continued use of the area for commercial and industrial refuse until the new park area is filled.

Animal Shelter Is Like A Zoo

Moppets and pets: It's a combination that clicks every time.

The Quinte branch of the Ontario Humane Society seems well aware of the natural attraction that exists to work anywhere animals and youngsters are drawn together.

Recently, the big OHS shelter on Sidney township's second concession has become a rendezvous for both youngsters and pets since the society launched a program of regular visits for school-children.

The shelter services a broad area of Eastern Ontario for the OHS, and there's more to see than just the registration of cats and dogs traditionally associated with such visits.

The shelter lodges a wide variety of animals — from livestock to fowl. For Quinte area youngsters its the next best thing to a full-time zoo.

But the school visits which can be made by appointment — are also educational, say shelter officials.

They not only acquaint children with humane aspects of animal care, but also give them an insight into OHS work, which ranges far beyond municipal animal control services.

Hunter Drowned Near Point Petre

POINT PETRE (Staff) — Police divers today are searching the Prince Edward County shoreline of Lake Ontario near here today for a duckhunter missing after he and a companion were thrown from a capsized boat.

Provincial police today identified the missing man as Crandall Frail, 19, of Brampton.

In hospital at Picton after being rescued by a local fisherman is his cousin, Robert Frail, 20.

Frail was taken to Prince Edward County Memorial hospital suffering shock and the effects of being an hour in cold water clinging to the overturned boat, according to hold on to his cousin.

Leonard Goodmurphy, lighthouse keeper here, estimates the mishap occurred about 3 p.m.

The Frail cousins were accompanied by a third companion, whose name was not immediately known, when they shot several ducks.

There was an onshore wind at the time and the game was blown into the lake, said Mr. Goodmurphy.

The cousins set out in their small punt to retrieve the birds about 100 yards offshore.

As their companion watched the boat capsized and both men were thrown into the lake. The third hunter ran back home to radio along the shore seeking help — finally arriving at the lighthouse where Mr. Goodmurphy immediately phoned local fishermen who went to the rescue.

Mr. Goodmurphy said Frail had been in the water about an hour and had managed to keep his relative above water, "propping him there or three times" until numbed.

Belleville were still searching the area late this morning.

24 Baptized

Belleville was host last weekend to 1,486 Jehovah's Witnesses in two sessions at Centennial Secondary School.

Arthur Powley, district supervisor of the Witnesses was speaker for the meeting Sunday afternoon.

A baptismal service conducted Saturday morning saw 24 people baptized — 11 men and 13 women.

City Requests More Members

The city of Belleville is requesting more representation on the Hastings and Prince Edward Health Unit.

Monday city council passed a motion tabled by Alderman Enos David asking the two - county health unit board to review membership by the various municipalities.

Under the present board makeup, Belleville with 35,000 people has two members, while Trenton with 14,000 has one member.

But Prince Edward county with fewer than 19,000 has two members and Hastings county three. In addition, both counties have provincial government appointees.

"Membership on the board is all out of proportion to population," the Belleville alderman claims.

Poppy Sales Increase

Sales of poppies by veterens' organizations in Belleville are expected to top last year's totals.

Returns so far amount to $2,127 — and more funds are awaited from other poppy-pedlar sources, says a Canadian Legion spokesman.

Sale of Remembrance Day wreaths — deposited at the cenotaph during today's memorial services — so far have totalled $2,224.

The Honors and Awards Committee of the City of Belleville are desirous of recognizing the achievements of any members of the various organizations within the City who may have won an Ontario or Canadian championship or been chosen as a representative at any of the International Games.

It would be appreciated if you would file any recommendations you may have with the City Clerk on or before November 16, 1970.

Adam S. Stalker,
City Clerk,
City Hall,

History of Cenotaph Has Ups and Downs

Belleville's cenotaph has a colorful history.

Following the World War I the late R. J. Graham with Harry Ackerman in the dried fruit business, took the initiative in creating a suitable memorial in Belleville.

Travelling near Hamilton, he observed a memorial which formed a basis for Belleville's.

A. C. Campbell of Campbell Monument Co. Ltd. supplied the information regarding the history of the monument.

For it was A. C. Campbell who provided the stone and the engraving.

As the story goes, Mr. Graham purchased the grey Stanstead Granite from Mr. Campbell and contracted to have the names of the fallen soldiers inscribed on the surface of the monument.

It was Mr. Graham's hope that families would take an interest in sharing in a monument to their sons, husbands and fathers.

To this end he asked in the neighborhood of $5 to help pay for the names. Unfortunately the memorial was erected in 1932, during the depression.

Only a half dozen people contributed.

Undaunted, Mr. Graham paid for the lettering himself. Three men worked half the winter lettering the granite slabs.

Mr. Campbell explained that the World War I Md. was inscribed in lead, Holes were drilled and soft lead was driven into the stone face, sunken in the tiny impressions.

This method of letterin'g was the standard at that time.

After the World War II, sandblasting was employed to inscribe the new names and to replace the dedication plaque, owing to the absence of some of the lead letters after "kids got busy with their pen knives."

It was Mr. Graham's dream to have a 10 - foot statue erected on the top of the monument, just like the one near Hamilton.

He left this task up to the city or any other interested parties.

Rumor had it that the city had purchased a statue in France but—that the bronze figure went down with a ship while being transported across the ocean.

Mr. Campbell scoffed at this idea as merely rumor.

The Hastings - Prince Edward Regiment considered purchasing a statue a few years ago but decided on erecting a monument on the armories lawn.

Mr. Campbell explained that a statue such as the one Mr. Graham had had in mind would cost in the neighborhood of $10-15,000.

And that is the story of the monument at which veterans gathered this morning to pay tribute to fallen comrades.

Erected by R. J. Graham in 1932, the monument was in memory of his wife.

Kiwanis Speaker Warns of Threat

Socialism represents a real threat to business in Canada, particularly the service industries, Mrs. Yvonne Kerr, an Ottawa insurance agency executive warned the Kiwanis Club here yesterday.

Mrs. Kerr is secretary-treasurer of Orville Kerr Ltd., an insurance agency.

Unlike socialists in other parts of the world, she said, socialists in Canada "seek power initially by preaching the takeover of service industries.

"The auto insurance industry is one of their targets for takeover, she said.

"If the socialists want to control car insurance as a public entity, all other industries are liable in various ways to the same threat," Mrs. Kerr said.

The Manitoba government has enacted legislation to take over the automobile insurance industry, claiming it can cut the cost of services by eliminating competition. Kiwanians were told.

"They said this, although the car insurance industry told them that 70 per cent of car owners would pay more for their insurance under a Saskatchewan - style government monopoly," Mrs. Kerr said.

"The primary question at stake is freedom of choice," she continued. "Under a government monopoly, you have only one sales and service outlet.

"Under a private enterprise system, you do have freedom of choice — if you are not happy with the service given you by one company you switch companies."

Socialists single out dissatisfied customers and distort their dissatisfactions out of all proportion, she said.

"One should not rob a thousand to relieve ten — but the socialists treat the people of Canada to do just that.

"It is not the right of government," Mrs. Kerr concluded, "to dictate to the people what service they should have, how they obtain that service and how much they pay for it. That is socialism. That is authoritarianism. Let's not have it in Ontario."

Mayor Would Back Kells as Trustee

Interest in what had promised to be a routine school board election this year picked up today with the intervention of Belleville's mayor in the contest.

Dr. J. Russell Scott said yesterday that he has asked former Belleville Public School Board superintendent J. A. Kells to contest a seat.

"I've been asking Mr. Kells to run for school board," the mayor said during a meeting of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission.

Mayor Scott was asked if he would back Mr. Kells if his name came up for nomination Nov. 22.

"Sure I'll back him — I might even get up in council and bring it up during general business; that would go on record, wouldn't it?" he quipped.

Mr. Kells said in a telephone conversation this morning that "the mayor mentioned this subject on one occasion".

"But I haven't decided to run yet," he added.

Mr. Kells retired as a superintendent for, Hastings county board of education in August of this year. Before that, he was superintendent of the Belleville Public School Board until it was amalgamated with 12 other county school boards in 1963.

Five trustees will be elected Dec. 7 to represent the city of Belleville on the 16-member board.

Nominations will be accepted Nov. 22 at City Hall.

Missing Hunter Found in Bush

KALADAR (Staff) — The second of two deer hunters missing in dense bush north of here was found Tuesday morning.

Provincial police said Douglas Stone, 22, believed a Picton - area resident, showed no ill effects from a night spent in the outdoors.

Mr. Stone went missing early Monday near a lumber camp operated by the Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Company, northwest of the Marlowe Lake area.

He was found about 8 a.m. say police, but because the area was so deep in bush it took some time for reports of his safety to reach here.

Another hunter, James Wilson, 55, whose address is not known, was also found yesterday morning, near Herchimer Lake — northwest of Marlowe, after being missing since noon Monday.

Council Opposes Longer Trailers

Belleville city council feels that the huge highway transport trailer combinations using the provincial highways are already large enough.

Monday council concurred in a resolution from Owen Sound calling for the Ontario highways minister to reject applications for the extension of the 65-foot overall length of truck units.

Another resolution concurred in was one from North York supporting the provincial ban on the use of studded tires.

West Park Study Back to Planners

Belleville city council is standing by a previous decision that the West Park Village Community study be sent back to the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board for re-consideration.

The study, submitted to council some weeks ago, was based on the basis of the city's official plan for the West Park Village area but was sent back for reconsideration when council failed to agree with the zoning for a certain area.

The plan was also referred to the traffic and light committee, the board of parks management and the recreation and areas committee which now have submitted recommendations to council.

One of these was that the major road pattern of the area be accepted in principal, subject to the complete layout of the detail plan.

This recommendation, along with several others, was tabled until the planning board reports back on the request for reconsideration of the plan.

Council did go along, however, with another park management and recreation committee recommendation that where possible, parks be provided in accordance with standards proposed in the parks planning study and that school sites and park sites be adjacent in order to make more and better use of open space and thus accommodate the community school concept.

Another resolution asking that council enter into negotiations with the board of education for the sale of industrial land south of Tracey Street to the school board was tabled.

Two more resolutions calling for preparation of a land use plan for a school park site and proposed requirements for school buildings were adopted and referred to the board of education for comment.

Remembrance

Today when we remember the fallen of two world wars it is only natural that for those who served — and survived — memories of those days come flooding back.

For the Rev. Laurie Sutherland of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church there are the boyhood recollections of Remembrance Day in a small Ontario village, with the boys and girls of both rooms of the school assembled at the War Memorial, an address by a retired army officer and the two minutes silence.

Mr. Sutherland spoke of these and his own more recent second world war experiences at Rotary the other day. There were the Ansons from Camp Borden skimming the treetops so low that you could see the faces of the pilots and navigators. Then came training as a pilot and there were classmates who were killed in practice strike training, and when the war ended there were memories of these men and of others killed in action.

There were the days spent in training at OSD here in Belleville, hours spent under P. T. corporals in the drill hall (scheduled for demolition next year) and 20 years later, returning to the city as a minister. And there was the realization in those latter days, while officiating at a graveside on the south side of the Bay of Quinte, with planes from Trenton overhead, of what it must have been like for people on the ground in similar circumstances when he was flying.

"Hordes of noisy Harvards, one after another on the down-wind leg of their circuit, throttling back and jamming the throttle open again to check the horn and lower the undercarriage . . . you will remember the noise the Harvards used to make."

These and other memories — and the honor accorded those who did not come back — today unite a vast aggregation of people throughout the western world. And while we look back on those days we must address ourselves also to the pressing problems of our immediate time, for upon their successful issue rests the very survival of society itself.

De Gaulle Dead

Charles de Gaulle is dead. Leader of the Free French forces after his country's fall, and sequestered President of France during the most fateful period in its history, de Gaulle will be remembered as one of the great men of his day.

De Gaulle dominated French life and politics like no other leader of the country in modern times. His independent approach to France's problems, as well as to the country's allies made him a difficult man with whom to deal; but those leaders who found him thus among them Churchill, came also to respect him.

The former president unquestionably was one of the most powerful men on the world political scene. He was not only his own man but he believed implicitly in the greatness of France, even when the country's fortunes were at their lowest ebb.

De Gaulle proved himself time and again; in 1940 when he assumed leadership of France's shattered forces, later returning with the Allied invasion forces and making a triumphal entry into Paris, as premier of the provisional government and subsequently president of the Fifth Republic. His handling of events leading up to independence of Algeria, his more recent success in averting the threat of civil war, in the disturbances of two years ago, marked him as a skilled politician.

In Canada none will forget his efforts to forge a special link between his country and Quebec, his propagation of the "French fact" around the world — a concept which took him to French colonial territories around the world. Some have been trying to place the initial blame for Canada's present troubles on de Gaulle's cry of Vive Le Quebec Libre during his 1967 visit. The remark likely gave momentum to the separatist cause but it can have been little more than that. Separatism had been a force in Quebec long before his visit.

In the last as it may, there can be no denying de Gaulle's impact not only on France but on the world scene generally. The general had been writing his memoirs; to what extent these had been completed we do not know, but such as has been committed to print will constitute a very significant contribution to the history of our day.

Participatory Democracy Runs Amok in Winnipeg

FRANCES RUSSELL in
The Globe and Mail

WINNIPEG — Something bitter, even ugly, hung in the air at Milton 70, the four-day national conference on social change which concluded here. There were delegates, 400 of them, from every part of Canada and representing most of the major social service organizations in the country. Here also was a constant atmosphere of concern for fellow man, of earnestly wanting not to impose ideas, but to be open-minded.

But it was here that a chilling three - hour attack on the humanity of a man occurred simply because he was a member of the federal Cabinet. And it was also here that members of a particular group — the news media, present as both delegates and working press — were attacked for their "slanted" product and packaged into a "they", and threatened with expulsion from meetings until one delegate drew attention to the fact media people were, after all, human beings too.

This was not all there was to Milton 70, a joint project of the Vanier Institute of The Family and the Canadian Council on Children and Youth. Significant discussions were held later - personal and inter - group communication and understanding were achieved between Maritimers and Westerners, between Indians and whites and between young and middle-aged.

But that achievement fell in sharp contrast to the evening the delegates spent with Robert Stanbury, Minister Without Portfolio and responsible for citizenship and information Canada.

Mr. Stanbury started with a short speech urging more involvement by voluntary groups in citizen participation in pointing out that the federal Government will contribute $35-million this year to assist such private organizations.

Then he opened himself to questions from the floor. He was verbally assaulted for the next two hours. When he answered questions, he was told he should listen. When he listened, he was told he was vague and evasive.

When he was told governments were not doing enough and he suggested other possible fields for action, he was attacked for destroying local control.

Half-way through the evening, a young delegate strode up to Mr. Stanbury and said: "I really feel sorry for you, man. Your Prime Minister, whatsname Trudeau, sent you out here and you haven't got anything to say at all. Why are you here? You go back to your man that sent you here and tell him he better listen to the people of this country or other you'll be destroyed or we will."

Another young delegate told him that if he had any job at all, it was to "figure out how you can stop being a Government. You get out of the Government business and the police get out of the police business and we'll all be better off."

"You know, there's a lot of truth in what you say," the minister replied. "I'm ready, but are you."

"Sure I am, Bob," replied the delegate, "But I don't think you are."

"I'm not sure society is," continued the minister. He was booed and jeered.

The two issues creating the most controversy were the Government's youth hostel program of last summer and its administration of the War Measures Act.

Mr. Stanbury asked the young people concerned about the hostels for suggestions. He was told by one that "I don't have any trust or faith in you or your Government."

"Then maybe we should stop doing things entirely," replied the minister.

"You've broken my trust in you," one girl said.

Mr. Stanbury asserted out his replies to criticisms about the War Measures Act by saying he could understand how thinking you were beautiful, concerned people. That you had balm on your hands. Last night, you destroyed the humanity of a man because you didn't like what he represented. Now, to me, you don't have balm. You have horns."

The conference came to no conclusions about the social problems on its agenda, including unemployment, pollution, the future of the family, education and citizen participation. But conference organizers did not really expect to.

No Utopia—But Canada Is Still Free

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

The hotchpotch of misquotation and misunderstanding offered by "One Who Was There" served only to completely destroy the illusion shared by himself and Mr. Johnston that Canadians are living in a police state.

He informs us that anybody can be arrested for "expressions of dissent" — so by now, both he and the publisher of The Intelligencer should be in jail. But they are not, and we all know they are not likely to be.

For a glimpse into the beginnings of a police state I commend "There" to read Today in History in Saturday's edition of The Intelligencer. It reads as follows: 1926: Italian dictator Benito Mussolini banned all opposition political parties, newspapers and public meetings. Is this the situation existing in Canada today?

Opposition leaders Douglas and Stanfield can be heard singing their blessed hearts' chorus almost every day — newspapers are still being published (and people are still writing to them). The TV and news media carry an assortment of pictures and stories providing liberal time and space to the views of dissenters, currently, despite the loss of his "civil liberty", Milk Johnston still permeates the airwaves of 3 a.m. each morning. Where then is this police state that your correspondent bleats so piteously about? Where indeed, "by golly"!

Since abducting Mr. Cross and savagely murdering Mr. Laporte has there been any mention by the FLQ of concern for the "poor and underprivileged" in the province of Quebec? Has any of the monies stolen in terrorist bank robberies found its way into the pockets of the poor? Was the ransom money demanded by the kidnappers to be applied Robin Hood fashion to alleviate the ills of the poor?

If "There" believes any of this he is as gullible as he is naive. Why then I am a New Canadian (15 years vintage) but unlike him I did not come to this country to find freedom — I knew it was here long before I came. I have enjoyed this freedom, and because of the action of a democratically - elected government (backed by 90 per cent of the people) I am still able to do so.

When he asks, in respect to freedom, "where shall I find it now"? I can only suggest that he try Cuba — or Czech or variety. Canada is far from Utopia, but it would be hard to find a country where the individual is as free as he is here. Yes, even under the War Measures Act. If this is not so, how on earth did "There" get his letter of dissent published under the language in this dreadful Canadian police state?

His "Vive Bourassa", "Vive Drapeau" was fully endorsed by the electors of Quebec in the recent elections. They unanimously supported the platforms of Mr. Drapeau and Mr. Bourassa while completely rejecting the policies of the extremists — or perhaps the significance of this is lost on "There". Theatrically "Heeling Trudeau", only further emphasizes the absurdity of his claim that Canadians are living in a police state. His genius would have been more appropriate in the Pinnacle Playhouse, where I understand they are looking for actors. Continue to enjoy the freedoms of this country my friend, and in the meantime, pray fervently that Canada never succumbs to anarchy and terrorism, because if it ever does, your letters to the editor may well be signed "Back There Again".

Road Toll

Government to Blame Says Montreal Surgeon

Brockville Recorder and Times

The government is primarily to blame for alarming number of deaths on our highways each year. This is the opinion of a prominent Montreal neurosurgeon, Dr. Harold Elliott, who was appointed by the federal government as an adviser on traffic accidents. He looks at politicians and civil servants, not drivers as being primarily responsible for most of the carnage on the highways.

This runs counter to the usual observations made by experts studying the traffic accident death problem. As a rule the "nut behind the wheel" is blamed in writing off traffic deaths as being due to "driver error". Dr. Elliott's research doesn't support this observation. He has found that careless engineering of roads, inadequate safety and warning devices, antiquated laws, lack of initiative on the part of civil servants and poorly repaired vehicles are primarily to blame. This is what Mr. Ralph Nader, the US crusader has found too. But getting governments to act poses a problem.

Accidents injure more than 100,000 Canadians on our highways every year and permanently damage and doctors' bills run at over 1 billion. This would seem to be sufficient reason for federal and provincial governments to take notice of Dr. Elliott's findings.

It is Dr. Elliott's contention that politicians ignore the problem because it is too complex. They tend to blame the driver and not the roads and vehicles for this reason.

Death on the highways has become an epidemic. The number has increased from 2,222 in 1950 to 5,049 in 1965. Figures for the intervening years are not available on a nationwide basis but presumably they would be higher for the country as a whole. In Ontario the death rate has gone down per mile travelled since Highway 401 was completed thus proving a point of Dr. Elliott's that better roads do provide one answer.

Dr. Elliott points out that car companies collect their own statistics about accidents and which cars are most susceptible to injury but the results are not available to the public.

What is available however, is the finding of the many inquests held in the country. Coroner's juries make thousands of recommendations a year, recommendations that are all but ignored in most cases. It seems the governments could arm themselves with a study of coroner juries' recommendations and this, coupled with the work Dr. Elliott is doing, may produce a clearer picture of the real culprits.

At the federal level he has found frustration. Politicians, elected by the people, don't seem interested in an endemic that has claimed 50,000 Canadian lives in 18 years. If it were unsafe milk or a new outbreak of a contagious disease, or an unsafe medicine, they'd be quick to act. The highway carnage is every bit as serious.

Christmas Gesture

Office Group Balked In Efforts to Aid The Less Fortunate

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

We are a small group of office girls who wished to get together a Christmas Basket for someone less fortunate.

We planned, each payday, to buy certain articles of food and toys out of our own grocery money, to be given to some family at Christmas.

It appears this is just not done anymore.

After phoning most of the organizations in Belleville to be given the information as to ages and number of children in the family, we were told that Christmas Baskets are just not acceptable this year.

Instead, all organizations are specifying cash, which is converted into Food Vouchers to be issued to needy families of their choice.

For ourselves, and for certain other groups we have spoken to, the feeling of giving is lost.

Food Vouchers can be converted into money, which does, in some cases, go for liquor, etc., and the children are the ones that suffer.

Our point is that it is so easy for all of us just to write a cheque and be done with it. No extra shopping, no searching for the right toy on our lunch hour.

But Christmas, after all, is for the children, and we cannot agree with any organization that can dictate a policy such as this.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO
November 11, 1950

Alderman A. McLean Haig, director of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, was appointed a director of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce at its annual convention held in Niagara Falls. Secretary Freeman Burrows and Malcolm Robb represented the Belleville Chamber at the convention.

The student body and faculty of the Ontario School for the Deaf paid another impressive tribute to the memory of Canada's war dead this morning. As the significant hour of 11 o'clock approached, Superintendent W. J. Morrison briefly outlined to the assembled students and listed the purpose of Remembrance Day.

30 YEARS AGO
November 11, 1940

Set against a background of tragic reality, Remembrance Day was observed in Canada to evoke a new solemnity of thought, a deeper realization of the grim horrors of war which has been lacking in large measure from observances during the 22 intervening peacetime years which succeeded the 1918, Armistice. Men and women of every denomination thronged their churches and synagogues to pray for the speedy coming of freedom of worship and thought and action. Church parades brought out men of the Active Forces, the militia and the civic reserve organizations in full force.

40 YEARS AGO
November 11, 1930

If one can judge by local market prices, the cost of living is low. Fresh eggs were selling for 50 cents per dozen; apples were being offered from 20 cents a peck for Alexanders up to 40-60 cents for McIntoshes; butter was 40 cents for a two pound roll.

C. Reid of Belleville has bought the old Strathcona building in Trenton and plans to tear down the structure. The building was formerly the old Strathcona Hotel.

50 YEARS AGO
November, 11, 1920

F. Wallace, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wallace of this city has been appointed Master in Mathematics at the Collegiate Institute at North Bay.

Mr. E. Le Baron has returned home after spending several months in Western Canada. His daughter, Mr. VanCleave Lavoy, Alta., accompanied him to Belleville.

At a meeting of the civic committee it was decided to recommend to the council that two snow ploughs be purchased for city use; and also that the sum of $200 be granted to the WCA to defray expense in repairing the roof at the Home for the Friendless on Moira St. W.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nov. 11, 1970 . . .

The First World War came to an end 52 years ago today — 1918 — at 11 a.m. after the signing of an armistice near Compiegne in France The war, which had lasted 4½ years, cost the Allies 5,111,115 men and Germany and the countries that fought with it 3,386,200. Wounded on the Allied side totalled 12,831,004 and on the German side 8,388,468.

1918—German troops moved into unoccupied France.

1918—Royal Navy Fleet Air Arm attacked Taranto.

1920—Unknown soldier buried in Westminster Abbey and Cenotaph unveiled in Whitehall, London.

1918—Independence of Poland was proclaimed.

1871—The last British garrison left Quebec.

To Elect Officers

TRENTON (Staff) — Election of a new board of directors for the Chamber of Commerce here will take place during the dinner meeting, Nov. 19.

Guest speaker for the evening will be the former evangelist and native broadcaster, Charles Templeton.

A onetime cartoonist, Mr. Templeton achieved considerable renown throughout his career in the mass media, serving as managing editor of the Toronto Daily Star and editor of MacLean's Magazine.

Politically active, he was principal contender in the Liberal Party's provincial leadership contest won by Robert Nixon.

Charles Templeton now works extensively on Toronto television and radio programs sharing the radio show with writer-broadcaster Pierre Berton.

Six directors for the coming year will be elected during the annual Chamber gathering that gets under way at the country club at 7 p.m.

The names of seven individuals have been received as nominees for election to the board of directors: Barry Bot, Public Utilities Commission; Charles Barker, florist; John Cannon, Royal Bank of Canada; David Lewis, realtor; Bruce Karlen, barrister; D. James MacDonald, merchant and Robert Carleton, Bell Canada.

Time for Absolute Past Says Quebec Minister

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebecers had "better get used to the idea" of more police powers if they want to be protected against terrorism and organized crime, Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said Tuesday.

Mr. Choquette told reporters the time is past for people to want "absolute freedom" and they had "better get used to the idea that the police must have more adequate methods of control."

The justice minister had been asked about his idea of having Quebec citizens carry an identification card on objections to it on the grounds that such a measure would be an infringement of the rights of the individual.

He said the unspecified "more adequate methods of control" he mentioned were "not to limit the freedom of individuals" but rather to protect law-abiding citizens and to give them "their full freedom."

Law-abiding citizens had to be protected against "those criminal elements who want to diminish their freedom by crimes in the area of terrorism or organized crime or so on."

A few minutes earlier, Mr. Choquette had said there appears to be no major constitutional obstacles to the identification card idea.

In Ottawa, Justice Minister Turner told a questioner in the Commons Monday he was looking into constitutional aspects of identification cards but a decision on the proposals "must be tempered with other factors."

Canadian

restraints have been relaxed, the central bank wants to maintain control in order to avoid a new burst of economic expansion that would revive price inflation.

The new rate is back down to its level in late 1968, off from a peak of eight per cent in force between July 16, 1969, and last May 11, when anti-inflationary squeeze policies were at their height.

Successive reductions of one-half of one per cent were initiated May 11 and June 1 and Sept. 1.

At the same time, Mr. Rasminsky announced a marginal tightening up of the central bank's lending facility for investment dealers whereby they may obtain cash in a pinch when commercial money markets are quoted.

Known as purchase and resale agreements, the lending facilities require borrowers to put up government securities or other easily-cashable bills and agree to buy them back with interest —a day or a few days later.

The so-called PRA's traditionally were discouraged by the Bank of Canada and rarely used because the interest charges were stiffer than those of commercial banks. In recent months, however, dealers have been getting PRA advances more frequently as short-term interest rates declined.

The formula for central-bank interest charges has been the lesser of the bank rate—4.5 per cent since Sept. 1—or the prevailing rate on three-month government treasury bills plus one-quarter of one per cent. That is currently 5.22 per cent.

That meant in effect that bank rate was the maximum charge and the other formula the minimum for PRA loans.

While the minimum formula is relatively high, dealers are discouraged from seeking central-bank loans. That accords with the government bank's desire to discourage excessive use of PRA's, which could be used to bypass the central bank's efforts to restrain the flow of cash and credit under its anti-inflationary policies of monetary restraint.

However, treasury-bill rates at weekly auctions have plummeted recently to the lowest range since 1967. Three-month bill rates had dropped to under five per cent last week from more than 6.3 per cent six months earlier.

That meant dealers could borrow from the central bank this week at a rate of 5.22 per cent —1.28 points below the maximum bank rate, compared with the 6.77 per cent they had to pay in mid-May, when the bank-rate maximum was only .73 of one per cent higher at 7.5 per cent.

To guard against a further decline in the formula lending rate—thus perhaps weakening the bank's control over cash and credit—Mr. Rasminsky said that henceforth a minimum charge for PRA advances will be established at three-quarters of one per cent below the bank rate. That would narrow the gap between minimum and maximum charges.

Under the new bank rate, the minimum will be 4.35 per cent.

To Lie Beside Daughter

Pomp, Ceremony to Be Absent in Last Rites for de Gaulle

COLOMBEY-LES-DEUX-EGLISES (Reuter) — This tiny French village celebrated Armistice Day today just as though its most illustrious resident were still alive and occupying his familiar place beneath a banner of Joan of Arc.

The body of Charles de Gaulle, dressed in his brigadier-general's uniform and partly covered by the French tricolor, lay in a ground floor parlor at La Boisserie, the country home where he died suddenly Monday night at the age of 79.

In his hands was a rosary given him by Pope Paul and at his feet the Cross of Lorraine—symbol of Free France.

All France mourned the man who devoted his life to saving the country's independence and honor, and the leaders of at least 80 nations were en route to Paris to pay him tribute in a separate memorial service.

The parish priest who conducted today's services condemning the end of the First World War will have a far sadder task Thursday when he officiates at de Gaulle's funeral.

Georges Pompidou, who succeeded de Gaulle as president, will fly here today by helicopter to pay his last respects—but the funeral will be a simple one, in accordance with the general's wishes.

De Gaulle left instructions that there should be no official delegations present, although ordinary people could follow his body to its final resting place—a simple tomb beside the grave of his daughter Anne, who died of tuberculosis in 1948 at the age of 20.

The tomb, topped with a white cross, will bear only the inscription: "Charles de Gaulle 1890 1970." He would have been 80 Nov. 22.

The general died of a burst aneurism, a tiny swelling or tumor in the wall of an artery.

His aides said he already was dead when the doctor and the parish priest arrived. But the priest, Rev. Claude Jaugey, told reporters the former president was still alive when he gave the last sacraments of the Roman Catholic Church.

From all over the country Frenchmen came to Colombey today to pay their final homage to the man who, after leading the Free French in the Second World War, emerged from the political wilderness in 1958 to found the Fifth Republic amid the bitterness of the Algerian war.

Special trains and buses were being arranged to take thousands to Colombey, which has a population of 358.

One train was reserved for the approximately 500 surviving members of the Companions of the Liberation, the order de Gaulle created in 1940 to honor those who rallied to his cause in the darkest days of France's defeat.

His funeral instructions called for only the Companions, the local villagers, the common people and the armed forces to be present with his family at his funeral—no pomp, no officials, no foreign dignitaries.

The armed forces will be represented by 144 men from the army, navy and air force and 20 cadets from St. Cyr.

But there will be no bands, no bugles, no thundering salutes.

Outside the 300-seat church—despite its name, Colombey has only one—the landscape was brightly carpeted with copper autumn leaves, but the villagers themselves were left desolate by the death of their neighbor.

"We have lost a friend," said one.

De Gaulle bought his house here nearly 30 years ago. He loved Colombey and spoke fondly in his memoirs of the town he had walked through the gardens around his austere home.

Liberals, NDP Assail Labor Relations Act Amendment

TORONTO (CP) — A bill to amend the Ontario Labor Relations Act came under bitter attack in the legislature Tuesday.

The day-long assault by New Democratic Party and Liberal members delayed passage of the bill until after today's Remembrance Day recess. Virtually every section was criticized.

The 16 amendments moved by NDP members were voted down and Labor Minister Dalton Bales declined opposition pleas to modify his position in other sections.

"You are an idiot," Ian Deans (NDP—Wentworth) shouted at one point when the minister refused to answer a question.

Called to order, Mr. Deans said: "I withdrew . . . but he said it."

The bill, a major rewriting of Ontario labor legislation, was most sharply criticized for sections concerning certification of bargaining units, accreditation of employers' organizations and provision for strikers to return to work individually before a strike is settled.

All three were denounced by opposition spokesmen as discriminating in favor of employers and against unions.

Donald Deacon (L—York Centre), an investment dealer and president of Canadian Ryerson Bank Ltd., denounced the clause to permit striking employees to reclaim their jobs individually during the first six months of a strike.

He said the clause would encourage strike-breaking and would only prolong labor disputes by prompting an employer to hold out in hopes of crushing the union.

Mr. Bales said the measure was designed to help individual workers in a situation where no agreement was in sight but the union was unwilling to give up.

Mac Makarchuk (NDP—Brantford) said the measure could be used to intimidate employees, particularly at small companies, and would result in picket-line violence.

In one of three divisions during clause-by-clause study, the government defeated an opposition attempt to retain existing regulations governing certification of an employees' bargaining agent.

An amendment by Clint Pilkey (NDP—Oshawa) sought to strike out a proposal requiring a union to sign up 65 per cent of eligible employees in a bargaining unit before obtaining automatic certification. The present act requires 35-per-cent membership.

Mr. Pilkey's amendment also would have deleted a clause in the bill which would permit unions to apply for a certification vote when they obtain 35-per-cent membership. The act now requires 45 per cent.

The 65-per-cent requirement would make automatic certification much more difficult while the lower figure required to apply for a vote was meaningless, Mr. Pilkey said.

He said a union must sign up a number of employees well in excess of the minimum to cover possible challenges or withdrawals. In effect, it would have to enrol 89 per cent of the entire unit to assure itself of reaching the 65-per-cent figure.

Labor Minister Dalton Bales said unions automatically certified with a bare 35-per-cent membership frequently have difficulty arriving at a contract because employers are unconvinced that they represent a majority of the work force.

"There is a stronger relationship if there has been a vote."

NDP Leader Stephen Lewis described the proposal as "class legislation." He noted that the act permits accreditation of an employers' organization with a simple majority of membership within the industry.

Mr. Bales said the situations are not parallel. The two types of organizations were different.

London Board Upheld

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that a board of reference, appointed to investigate termination of a London, Ont., school teacher's contract, has the right to consider the case.

The London board of education had sought an order to prohibit the three-man board from proceeding, alleging it was not properly constituted.

Teacher Terrence Fearn appealed to Education Minister William Davis for the board after his contract was terminated May 14.

'Frail Chains Bring Touch Of Sanity'

BELFAST (CP) — In troubled Northern Ireland, women of all religions have been joining together in an effort to bring peace to their own neighborhoods.

Their "confrontation" tactics are simple. When a riot flares, the women appear, link arms and form a feminine chain between the two factions—both male. They are women of all classes and ages: blue-jeaned teen-agers and grey-haired grandmothers. Protestants and Roman Catholics, working women and housewives.

And the tactic generally works. As the Belfast Telegraph commented recently, "These frail chains bring a touch of sanity to a mad situation." Would-be rioters usually are disconcerted by the female picket line. Edget uncertainly, then disperse.

A recent incident took place in the Unity Flats section of Belfast. Groups of neighborhood youths began stoning each other, then bombarded police when they arrived. Suddenly a group of women appeared and forced their human chain.

"We soon got the boys quieted down," Mary Lockrie, a grocery clerk, said later. "Some of them were annoyed at us—they didn't want the women in the fight.

"We just wanted to stop the trouble because the ever-increasing majority of people here want peace."

The women's actions appear totally spontaneous. There is no organization or movement as such. The women say they are simply fed up with male violence.

"When I heard the women were going out, I went out to join them," said housewife Jenny Elliott. "I don't know whose idea it was. I think everybody had the idea at the same time. In about 10 minutes the trouble had stopped and I went off to do my shopping.

"It's the first time I've done it, but I'll do it again if there is more trouble."

NAILHEAD DESIGN — Nailheads outline this grey flannel tunic costume by Ginala and also edge the cuffs of the pants in military style. Nailheads took the fashion limelight in 1967, then disappeared only to return this fall. (CP Photo)

Accent Interest Centres On Nailhead Trim

NEW YORK (CP) — It's the accents and the proportions that make the fall styling look new, not the length. Merely dropping hems may produce an older, fuddier look and draw more attention to your lack of style than just staying with minis.

At least if you retain the mini length, you can always say you like it and won't be browbeaten by fashion designers into lowering your skirts. But if you just lower the skirt you are in fashion trouble.

The solution offered by both designers and fashion writers is to turn your mini into a tunic and buy a pair of pants. This certainly helps the pocketbook and can tide you over, at least for a short period.

Here are a few other suggestions to show that you are in the fashion know-how. Avoid the costume scarf that was so popular last season, knotted at the neckline or tied over one shoulder. Elevate it. Wrap it around your head, low on the brow, and even wear a hat over it. This is the new scarf look. Later in the season your scarf can return to the traditional use, as fill-in with fall suits or coats.

The long self-scarf worn with a tweed or plain-faced coat is still found in a number of collections. But neither it nor the fringed kerchief scarf were important factors for the fall scene.

In a number of collections the accent interest centred on nailhead trim. Nailheads aren't a new idea. They took the fashion limelight back in the fall of 1967 when nailheads trimmed sleeves and neck-lines and marched around midriffs.

Then with the return of the softer, more feminine look they disappeared. This fall they appear even for evening but as design rather than hardware.

Calvin Klein discreetly studded a long late-day tunic with silver nailheads. And nailheads not only edged the neckline of Jean Leslie's navy wool dress but also were used to create an epaulette effect. Nailheads were also profusely scattered as trim on the vest and satin snake-print shirt of S. T. J.'s pant-suit.

Indeed a number of boleros in several collections are patterned with gentle nailheads. You could make yourself a bolero to go with your lengthened dress and add nailheads. This would attract attention and prove you know your fall fashions. Or you could add nailheads to a wide belt.

This is another popular accent. Belt buckles also are important, usually big and eye-catching. Most real belts have noticeable buckles. Silver is almost outstripping other metals as a leading buckle favorite. It is especially effective with the fall's more subdued colors.

Anne Klein likes wide engraved saddle leather belts for many of her collections and adds oversized plaques for buckles. These are of chased silver and gilt relief work. Kimberly likes two simple silver buckles on the self-belt of a purple wool dress.

Booklet Beneficial To Women

EDMONTON (CP) — The recently revised edition of Laws of Interest to Women of Alberta contains information on the province's sterilization regulations, the new Consumer Affairs Act and the new Criminal Injuries Compensation Act.

The booklet, put out by the Women's Bureau, contains a summary of some of the laws in force in Alberta that may be of particular interest to women.

"The booklet capsulizes differences and similarities from province to province," said Irene MacGregor, bureau director. "We find it is particularly helpful to someone new arriving in Alberta."

The province publishes about 18,000 copies a year, said Mrs. MacGregor. Most of these are distributed in Alberta, although there are a number of requests from groups outside the province as well.

First published in 1962, the booklet has been revised six times. This year's additions mainly concern the two new acts, but information on sterilization and updating of the section on public welfare were added because of the increased number of requests for information on these subjects received at the bureau, Mrs. MacGregor said.

Other major headings include: Citizenship, property and civil rights, matters relating to marriage, welfare of children, labor welfare, courts and general information.

Immigrant Tots Learn The Language

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto's large immigrant population is the chief reason why 10,000 children here are getting an early start in school.

Most of the 10,000 are children of immigrants who understand little or no English. They are attending junior kindergartens to learn the language and enable them to hold their own when they begin regular school classes.

Such programs are offered in 195 public elementary schools and 112 separate schools.

Taxpayers will pay about $2.17 million this year to support the programs, but educationists contend the money is well spent.

Learning English is easiest at the junior kindergarten level, they said. Also separate schools begin teaching oral French in Grade 1, if immigrant children cannot speak English by then, it is difficult to learn yet another language.

Retired Teacher Excels In Floral Paintings

LISTOWEL, Ont. (CP) — Jean Austin has completed 140 paintings of 125 varieties of Ontario wild flowers — and she's just starting.

"There are many more flowers, and then there are what some people consider weeds," she said in an interview.

Miss Austin is a retired teacher. Most of her teaching years were spent in Ottawa, where she was principal of Rockcliffe public school.

Her flower paintings are done in oils on pieces of ¼-inch plywood about five by seven inches. She paints only the flower itself with leaves and bloom or fruit.

"In some cases I have painted both the flower and the berry of the plant.

"I think the grain of the plywood makes a nice natural background."

Miss Austin has arranged the paintings on the wall of her studio in the home she shares with her sister. Each painting is labelled on the back with the flower's scientific and common names.

Her interest in the wild plants is evident in her garden as well. She has grown more than 20 varieties of wild flower plants and ferns.

"Last spring I had more than 200 white trillium blooms along our walk."

Miss Austin studied at the Ontario College of Art, at the Doon School of Fine Arts and at the Institute Allende, in Mexico.

'I've Found My Mittens!'

Children's mittens were among the many items for sale at the tea and bazaar sponsored by St. George's Anglican Guild, on Tuesday afternoon. Little four-year-old Tammy Galpin tries on two different pairs for size and seems quite happy with the results.

St. George's Sponsors Tea, Bazaar

Colorful quilts were the outstanding articles for sale at the bazaar and tea held by the women's auxiliary of St. George's Guild at the hall on Station Street on Tuesday afternoon. There were also a number of mitts which proved popular with customers at the variety table convened by Mrs. A. Howe and Mrs. R. J. Ferguson.

The bake table convened by Mrs. J. W. Garrow held a tempting array of pies, cakes and other goodies and there was a large assortment of candy at the candy table convened by Mrs. W. Sharp.

The main tea table was centred with a large glass bowl of orange and yellow autumn flowers flanked on either side by a pair of red and green candles. The smaller tables were decorated with solitaire flowers in small glass bowls.

At the door Mrs. M. Welch, convener of the bazaar and tea welcomed the large number of guests who kept streaming in while Mrs. F. Martin and Miss L. Towner worked behind the scenes in the kitchen. Mrs. R. B. Wright, Mrs. E. Hickey, Mrs. E. Smith and Mrs. D. Babcock poured tea while Mrs. W. Coleman, Mrs. F. Anderson and Mrs. F. Asay served guests. Mrs. A. Weaver, Mrs. L. Quist and Mrs. McLeod replenished plates and tea pots.

Card Parties Held at Minto

MINTO — The card party sponsored by Tanner LOL was held Friday night with seven tables in play. The winners were: Mrs. Mabel Ray; Mrs. Hugh Jones; Mrs. John Courtney; Howard Wallace; Roger York; Bill Neal and door prize Mrs. Victor York.

Following cards, lunch was served.

A card party was held in Minto Community Centre Thursday night with six tables in play. The winners were: Mrs. Phil Genereau; Mrs. Ed Coklen; Mary Lou Sine; Lindsay Tanner; Phil Genereau; Rose Kirn and door prize, John Courtney.

Following cards, lunch was served.

Ann Landers

Embarrassing Moments At Part Time Job

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 23, happily married and have a beautiful child. My husband makes good money but we still have to stick to a strict budget in order to make ends meet.

Last week I started to work half days for a man in his late 40's. I do secretarial work mostly shorthand and typing. This job appealed me because the man and his wife live only a few blocks from here. I take dictation on their patio and do the typing in my own home.

Something very embarrassing has happened twice in the last four days. I'll try to explain it as best I can. The man dictates in his bathing trunks, which is not usual for Florida. On two occasions when he got up from the lawn chair, his bathing trunks had slipped and did not cover his essentials. I couldn't help but notice. It upset me so much I couldn't get my notes straight. He, of course, was unaware of what had happened both times. His wife was not around.

I love my job but I am unable to ignore such things as this. I can't see myself mentioning it to him, Ann. Please tell me what to do. — EYE FULL.

DEAR EYE: Tell your boss you love the job and want to continue working for him but he must wear trousers or a pool robe in your presence since you feel that bathing trunks are inappropriate attire under the circumstance.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: May I comment on the letter from Mrs. BB — the woman who was mad because the 3-year-old boy next door ran around the yard naked and "cheapened the neighborhood."

As a mother of eight children I can tell you that boys are a lot harder to raise than girls. I had four of each. Every one of my boys used to take off his clothes and run outside whenever my back was turned. The girls never did this.

Our youngest boy was the worst. He could get his clothes off faster than a streak of lightening. We'd be on the way to church, Ann, our son walking a few feet behind (in cold weather, Ann) and when we'd arrive at the church steps we'd discover he was stark naked and his clothes had been dropped piece by piece for blocks.

So tell Mrs. BB that the boy's mother might not be to blame. Kids do peculiar things. — ONE WHO KNOWS.

DEAR ONE: Never having had a boy, I can't say from experience that you are right or wrong. I do have a four-year-old grandson, however, and so far as I know he has always kept his clothes on outside. Thanks for writing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We have three normal, shoe-tearing, peanut-butter-and-jam loving kids but our family is happier than most.

When Dick and I married in June of '56 his hair was just beginning to turn gray. He was only 23 then. I didn't mind his gray hair at all, in fact I always liked it. Dick's mother has had snow white hair for as long as I've know her — about 17 years. She seems to enjoy telling me about Dick's gray hair. Frequently she says such things as, "You must be worrying my son to death. His hair is grayer every time I see him."

Does gray hair have anything to do with worry? I've heard conflicting stories and I'd like to know the truth. — ASH BLONDE.

DEAR BLONDE: Gray hair is caused by glandular secretions which affect the color producing properties of the follicles. Worry has nothing to do with it.

The next time your mother-in-law gives you the needle tell her she is the one who is responsible for Dick's gray hair — not you. Heredity is a principal factor.

Successful Living

To Write as One Speaks

By DORIS CLARK

When it comes to communicating on paper, we are inclined to get self - conscious. For some reason this turns us flowery.

A management consultant, in criticizing the way a business executive is likely to put a letter together says:

"We get very dignified and pompous in our language. We never start or begin a report, we commence; we never help, we endeavor to give assistance; we never inspect, we scrutinize; we never buy, we purchase.

"We never end a man's job, we terminate it; there are never results of our reports, there are repercussions."

Let's all aim for short words, short sentences with clear meanings. Let's try to write like we talk.

* * *

Dear Doris: I believe my niece is a hyperkinetic child. I have read several letters from mothers of these children in your column and wonder if more information can be obtained about this condition and what agency would help. — Auntie.

Dear Auntie: The hyperkinetic child is a bit different from the visual - perceptual handicap, but there is a connection. And they all need individual teaching techniques.

With this muscle problem a child has a hard time sitting still. He is easily distracted — by pictures or sounds, or anything going on around him. Teaching material is shortened to five-minute sessions, with students creeping and moving around while learning.

For example, teacher says, "Today you are going to be an A." The student wears a large A card; others have other letters. They line up to spell out words, thus absorbing the spelling and meaning of words. If they had to sit still and write them down, they'd never make it.

A mental health clinic is the place to get help.

* * *

Dear Doris: I am 15 years old and I am not allowed to go out with boys. I have been seeing a boy friend behind my parents' back. They found out about it and boy did I get it! Now I am not allowed to go anywhere for a month, just because they saw me with him.

The reason I can't go out with boys is because my sister is 17 and she doesn't go out with boys so my father doesn't seem to understand why I want to. Isn't it natural to want to go out on dates? I like this boy very much and I don't care if I get in more trouble to have to see him.

My father told me if I want to go out with him I should just pack up and move out because no daughter of his is going to start to go out at 15. What do I do about this stupid situation? — Troubled

Dear Troubled: You don't keep up the vicious circle, and that's for sure. Your job is to show you are a reliable person, mature for your age, ready for dating. Once you've broken faith with your parents, it isn't easy to earn a second chance.

Your father ought not to suggest that you move back or he might have to eat these words. He is responsible for you until you are at least 16.

Be glad your dad cares what you do, be content with casual contacts with your boy friend, and see if you can weigh up to a boy - girl birthday party when you turn 16.

Ask Doris for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

RAISE FUNDS

LAND'S END, England (IAP) — Fred Caplen, 39, has finished pushing his wife in her wheelchair the length of Britain to raise money for an organization combatting multiple sclerosis, from which she suffers. Caplen and his wife, Edith, 60, once a cook for Sir Winston Churchill, completed the 870-mile trip from John O'Groat's, Scotland, in 36 days.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I'm tired of having you come home late for dinner every night. If you do it again, you'll lose your allowance for the week. You have to learn to be punctual."

A penalty that fits the fault will seem more fair to a child than will an arbitrary punishment. His allowance has nothing to do with the boy's tardiness, but his playtime at the gym does.

Mother: "Be sure to check your watch and start home at 5:30 so you'll be here in time for dinner. If you're late again, you cannot go to the gym the next afternoon.

It's really quite simple, isn't it?

Stuffed Baked Potatoes Prepared in Advance

By MARY MOORE

There are several good reasons for me I agive you this recipe for stuffing baked potatoes, the two major being that they may b sprepared in advance and that they taste excellent. I have given several variations.

STUFF D BAKED POTATOES (serves 6)

6 med-large potatoes
1 cup plus 2 tbsps. milk
¾ cup grated old Cheddar or Edam cheese
1½ tsps. chopped or freeze-dried chives
¾ tsp. salt

Wash and scrub potatoes, trimming out any blemishes. Bake at 99 deg. Fahr. for 60-70 min. or until skin is crisp and inside is very tender.

Cut thin slice from almost entire top of potato and scoop out pulp into a flat-bottomed pan, leaving ¼" wall. Mash pulp until no lumps remain and add all remaining ingredients and beat in well. Refill potato shells, piling filling high. At this stage refrigerate until near mealtime if desired. Reheat at 99 deg. Fahr. for 15-20 min. or until hot and dotted with gold on top. You will notice that these baked potatoes do not call for any butter because it is not necessary with the cheese. Oil in addition t othe cheese.

Hearty Meal for Fall

A simple chore like baking and stuffing potatoes can be a great satisfaction to a cook for she is not only glamorising an ordinary everday vegetable but by Mary Moore's method she can prepare them in advance of mealtime.

add one of the following to the mashed potato before filling the shells: crisp bacon broken into small pieces or and ¼ cup chopped mushrooms (could be sauteed first if desired); finely chopped onion; cooked leftover colorful vegetables seasoned with a little marjoram; ¼ to 1 cup diced cooked meat.

Women's Institutes

CAINSTON-CORBYVILLE, WI

Mrs. Welsh, convenor for historical research showed several film strips about life in the old days during the November meeting of the Cainston-Corbyville WI held in the institute hall on November 3 with 13 members present. She also showed a film on transportation in the past and gave several readings on the theme "Cherish the past — face the future".

The meeting was opened by Mrs. D. Ellsworth, president who also read a poem. Mrs. Ellsworth thanked the women who helped at the past masters' banquet the previous week.

Members were asked to bring gifts to the next meeting for distributing to those in the home for the mentally ill. Reports of standing committees were given by Mrs. Bowers, Mrs. Avery and Mrs. Milton. Mrs. P. Meale gave a report of the first day of the Trent Valley area convention held in Belleville on Oct. 28.

It was decided to send invitations to Mrs. Ralph Silk, WI curator and Mrs. Fred Wellman, district president, to be guests at meetings in the new year. Plans were made to cater for the euchre club in December.

The meeting closed with a poem read by Mrs. Welsh and a social time enjoyed by all.

Dry Summer Blamed for Many Weddings

PONOKA, Alta. (CP) — Dry summers get blamed for a lot of things on the Prairies, but surely one of the most unusual is this item from the Ponoka Herald of 60 years ago:

"A serious state of affairs occurred last week in Ponoka when our lesser of marriage licences ran short of supplies — therefore, no licence, no marriage, no wife.

"Speaking of marriages, it is not surprising that such a condition arose, for assuredly we have been having multitudinous weddings, due no doubt to the dry summers.

Students Will Grade Teachers

GREAT NECK, N.Y. (AP) — Twenty teachers in the two high schools here are to be graded this year by 180 students. The grading is part of a voluntary experimental program in which students and teachers will be trained to evaluate each other. Says Mrs. Zita Arenson, president of the Great Neck Teachers Association: "It isn't a threat. It's a tool to be used jointly to see what's really going on in the classroom."

MEND FIRST

Mending should be done before the clothing is washed, so tears and rips won't get any larger.

Shulman Declares He Was Misquoted

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman said in the legislature Monday he was was misquoted in a news story.

Dr. Shulman (NDP—Toronto High Park) denied he told the legislature Friday that he had received an affidavit from Det. James O'Brien of the Toronto police intelligence division.

His only comment on O'Brien was that the detective "had followed certain individuals" to a meeting at the 300 Club in Toronto.

He also denied saying that Alex Main, manager of the Toronto Building Trades Council, had organized workers with the help of contractors and that Mr. Main belonged to the Labors union.

He said Mr. Main was only an "observer at a meeting" and belonged to "a different union entirely."

Prices Remain Stable

Decline in Food Prices Offsets Dearer Housing

OTTAWA (CP) — A late-summer trend to stabilize Canadian consumer prices persisted through October, despite the biggest monthly jump in housing costs in seven months.

A sharp decline in food prices last month offset the housing advance and an increase in clothing prices, Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Tuesday.

That kept the consumer price index down to 130.3 points, a marginal shift from September's 130.2 and below the July and August ratings of 130.5.

It indicated that prices for a wide range of goods and services generally rose only 2.8 per cent in a year, maintaining the pace of the previous two months. That pace represents a substantial moderation from the runaway annual inflation rate of up to five per cent previously.

Publication of the October price index coincided with mixed indications about how the country's economy is faring after two years of inflation on one hand and mass record anti-inflation manipulations on the other.

The signs confirm that while prices and some credit charges are moderating, productive activity also has cooled out and expectations are uncertain.

Federal authorities are treading a very narrow path as they strainta somewhat to warm up business action while anxious to avoid going too far and generating a revival of inflation.

Specifically:

—The Bank of Canada announced a reduction in its per cent from 6½ per cent in its lending rate, effective Thursday, acknowledging the sharp recent drop in short-term interest rates and the Nov. 1 decline in some rates charged by commercial banks for loans and mortgages.

At the same time, the government bank toughened up slightly by establishing a new minimum rate to investment dealers for cash advances.

—A measurement of industrial production issued by the statistics bureau showed a decline in September by almost one per cent. While the General Motors strike that started Sept. 15 helped generate the decline, the September drop confirmed a downward trend in output since February.

—Unemployment figures to be published Thursday are expected to indicate the slackness in activity. The jobless rate, discounting normal seasonal shifts, hit 6.1 per cent of the labor force in September, the highest since 1961.

—An advance estimate on 1971 investment intentions by major companies on plant and equipment—an indication of the degree of business confidence in economic growth—shows plans for an increase of 11 per cent.

That outlook, published by the industry department, represents a decline from the prospects a year ago for a 1970 advance of 14 per cent in investment.

—The federal prices and income commission has run into snags in efforts to persuade business to extend a current price-restraint program into next year and to woo organized labor into discussing voluntary curbs on pay increases.

Inflications Tuesday were that a proposed meeting with leaders of major business organizations is unlikely to materialize this month, with inability to arrange a convenient time given as the reason.

On the prices front, the commission takes comfort from the over-all moderation of inflation.

However, October's index included a one-month jump of four-fifths of one per cent in the housing component, mainly because of advances in home-ownership and maintenance costs—mortgage rates, new-house prices, municipal taxes, repair bills and furnishings.

That was the biggest monthly advance since a comparable jump last March. The housing index in October stood 5.1 per cent above the price measurement a year earlier, which also was the biggest year-to-year increase recorded since March.

Guyana Wants Share Of Bauxite Industry

GEORGETOWN (AP) — The government of Guyana will begin talks on participation in ownership and control of the Canadian-owned Demerara Bauxite Co. (Demba) Dec. 7, it was announced Tuesday.

Unofficial reports said the government will seek 51 per cent of the shares in the company, to be paid out of future profits along the lines of the Zambia copper takeover deal.

Chief of Liquor Board Wants Drinking Age Cut

TORONTO (CP) — Maj.-Gen. George Kitching, newly-named chief commissioner of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, favors lowering the drinking age to 18 from 21.

Gen. Kitching, whose appointment was announced Tuesday by Premier John Robarts, said in an interview that he thinks "21 is a little late, especially as we know many youngsters have a drink before then."

He promised to "take a darn good look at the age question" after he takes over as commissioner Dec. 1, but added that "there will have to be sufficient noise about it from the public before the government will make any change."

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch recently told the legislature that Ontario has no plans to lower the provincial drinking age.

Gen. Kitching, who will succeed G. Harry Sheppard, chief commissioner for the last seven years, praised last April's change in liquor laws which allowed bars and taverns to stay open until 1 a.m. Sunday instead of closing at 11:30 p.m. Saturday.

"That reflects what people wanted and what had been happening in many establishments anyway.

"Generally, I feel that a fairly free use of liquor lessens alcoholism. When there are too many restrictions on a man's drinking he tends to do too much of it too quickly.

"And too many restrictions also encourage bootlegging."

Gen. Kitching is not in favor of grocery stores selling beer as they do in Quebec.

"If you allowed grocery stores to sell beer—and perhaps liquor —it would put a considerable responsibility on them to enforce the regulations. In some ways a degree of control is necessary."

The LCBO controls the pricing and distribution of liquor in Ontario.

SOLD by FARLEY Mowat. In his latest book, Mr. Mowat tells us of his experiences in the Soviet Union, including visits to regions not usually seen by visitors; the fabulous Diamond mines of Mirney, ruthless herders' tents on the Arctic tundra, and a Siberian champagne, raw fish and homemade banquet in Jakutsk. This is a warm, rather amusing record of Mr. Mowat's travels over 20,000 miles of Siberia...on two visits, first with his wife and later with photographer John deVisser.

SPRINGTIME IN BRITAIN by Edwin Way Teale

In Springtime in Britain, the reader wanders through a land of skylarks and nightingales, bluebells and daffodils. He meets Dartmoor ponies and bullfinching swans. He makes a nostalgic pilgrimage to the dwelling places and countrysside of the literary-minded heroes of Mr. Teale's youth: Hardy, Darwin, Jeffries and other classic writers of the past.

DIETRICH BONHOEFFER by Eberhard Bethge

Dietrich Bonhoeffer was hanged by the Nazis in Flossenburg concentration camp on April 9, 1945. He was 39 years old. Born in Breslau of a family with a distinguished liberal tradition, his life was profoundly affected when the Nazis came to power. Bonhoeffer's personal story is that of the dilemma of thousands of patriotic Germans. It is also the inside story of Germany at war, with all the tragic muddles, betrayals and uncertainties which enabled Hitler to survive.

J. M. BARRIE by Janet Dunbar

Many books have been written about James Barrie and his works. He was rich and famous, the author of a long list of successful plays. Few people knew the lonely, unhappy, guilt-ridden man behind the mask. This book attempts to understand James Barrie in the light of his relationships with four women who influenced his life to a powerful degree: Margaret Ogilvy, Mary Ansell, Sylvia Llewlyn Davies and Cynthia Asquith.

THE CHEMICAL FEAST by Nader Sammer Study Group Report on the Food and Drug Administration

The removal of cyclamates from the sakitet by government action and the voluntary withdrawal from sale of foods containing monosodium glutamate, raise serious questions about how effectively the Food and Drug Administration has been protecting the food supply. The report suggests a number of corrective steps that the agency can, and in fact must make if the American people are to receive the kind of protection they expect.

THE PROPERTY BASKET by Robert Speaight

Mr. Speaight is famous as both author and actor. Although English, he has also spent much time in France and two themes, among many others, run through these pages; a passionate love of Shakespeare and a passionate love of France. There are vivid glimpses of famous people, but just as interesting are the portraits of people less well known to the world at large, and in some cases, hardly known at all.

Senio Gain First Win
Page 11

By Eric Emerson Staff Sportswriter

Sitting here in front of my slightly-worse-for-wear Underwood Five, I was pondering such weighty matters as Southeast Asian involvement, student typhoids and my own contribution to the world of creative writing.

Having decided to open with a somewhat lengthy explanation of the 64 major points in a correct patting stroke, I was struck by roughly 62 distracting thoughts. Actually, I have picked up only two certainties about the not to exact science of dropping a Campbell Flyche into those shot glass excuses for holes.

One is that you get better distance throwing a medicine-ball and the other occurs when your opposition acknowledges, "That's a gimme." You should pick up the ball damn quick.

The phone rang.

"Hello," says I, using my witty way with words.

"Don't, hello me you Avery Brundage," sputtered the normally affable voice of Belleville Minor Hockey Association president, Tom Cavanagh.

After cautioning him that such profanity was unacceptable no matter what the provocation I dropped my next verbal blockbuster.

"What's wrong?"

Hello!", says he.

"Hello?", I parried.

"Hello — my wife keeps hearing hello and it's all your fault."

And then it came to me. "Of course," I replied, "that nice lady who keeps reading lists the side of Loblaws trying to get off my Pinnacle Street loading dock each morning. I'll set my alarm clock earlier tomorrow, I promise."

"No, no, no!", he chided, "This is REALLY serious. You left some minor hockey games out of the sports calendar."

My thought returned to a conversation I had been having with a minor hockey coach the night before, and I began to realize the seriousness of my omission.

"Those kids," soliloquized the harsh mentor. "You can tell them and tell them and tell them, and they just don't listen. I even phoned one boy personally to tell him when our game was and even HE didn't show up."

Can it be that our minor hockey participants won't take the trouble to find out when their game is scheduled, unless it's dropped in their front living room every night?

You're happy right they won't.

Think back to the good old days (around 1958). The kids weren't much different but the system was.

Remember walking those 4,782 icy steps back home in many-fitted "goalposts" that were supposed to be sweaters? Or shovelling off roughly three tons of snow each day or sharing the action with approximately 700 other kids on the pond?

Was the quality of hockey player turned out any better? Hardly.

Speaking from personal experience, I have a rough time holding my own in a peewee house league scrimmage, while the more illustrious of our shiney graduates are seeing spot duty in the Gas House League.

But you enjoyed the action enough to get up next day and start the whole walking and shovelling procedure over again.

Why should junior be guaranteed semi-private usage of the ice surface each week, when he won't even take the trouble to be there on time?

One solution would be to provide ice time correctly used for the organized house league play and let those boys who show up play shinny. The ice time would be there and the initiative would be placed on the players themselves to use it.

For the aspiring Bobby Orrs in the system, the all-star teams could be retained, and even expanded, since shinny control would require only limited supervision, freeing coaches, officials etc. for other duties.

In short, provide the opportunity for those interested in organized hockey to continue playing and stop regimenting the remainder into a system in which they have little interest.

Just a thought.

In the mean time, boys, remember that your coach is really quite an honest individual. Even if you missed those three breakaways last week, he isn't likely to give you a benn skeer on next game's starting time.

Listen to him. Please.

First Game Since Retirement

Fergy Adds 'Fire' to Montreal Roster

Things are hot for the Belleville firefighters — and getting hotter all the time. The smokies know they would be contending with a four - alarm blaze in the person of Rochet Richard when they meet the Montreal Canadian Oldtimers Friday night, but they didn't bank on Fergy Ferguson.

Sports chairman Don Putman announced that a phone call from Montreal this morning, confirmed the fact that "Fergy" will be donning the team blues at rouge for the first time since his retirement.

The pugnacious portsider was even more renowned for his battles with the likes of Gordie Green, Eric Nesterenko and Bobby Hull than for his considerable hockey talents.

Considered the best dependable of any of the Montreal team, his retirement dropped a bombshell on the Canadien camp.

Not that the Smokies can be easily intimidated, but one defensive stalwart did confide that, "I'm going to practise breaking my skate lace every time he steps on the ice."

A match for Ferguson in

JOHN FERGUSON

NHL violence could only be found in the fiery Rocket, who logged 1385 minutes in penalties during his spectacular career.

Both will be fighting for a different cause Friday night, however with the proceeds of the game going to benefit crippled children.

Certainly, just watching Richard alone would be worth the price of admission to the game.

A left - hand shot who possessed tremendous speed from the blue line in, during his younger days and an uncanny knack around the net, he still holds a number of marks that have escaped the ravages of Detroit's Gordie Howe.

Richard wore the "hat" more times than a Forzun usher with 26 three - goal performances to his credit. Among some of his other top marks are a remarkable 82 goals in Stanley Cup playoffs and an eight - point game against the Detroit Red Wings in 1944 (Montreal scored nine goals in the game.)

Certainly the Oldtimers aren't looking for people to put the puck in the net. Besides Ferguson, an authentic 38 - goal man practically every year and Richard, who tallied his 58 goals during the same number of games in 1944, the Habs will feature some other high flyers.

Bernard "Boom Boom" Geoffrion will certainly give firefighter goalie Gerry McNeil something to think about.

Geoffrion counted 30 times in the 1952-53 campaign, an NHL record at the time.

Dickie Moore is another proven point producer. His 96-point output in the '58-59 campaign was an NHL record until Hull, Mikita, Esposito and Orr came along.

These three players, along with defencemen Doug Harvey formed the nucleus of a Canadien team that won a record five consecutive Stanley Cups from 1955-56 to '59-60.

The box office will be open at 8 p.m. Friday night and advance tickets are on sale at Ed Thomas Cigar Store, McKnight Variety and O'Reilly Barber Shop.

O'Brien Dealt To Terriers

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Jim (Obie) O'Brien, most valuable player in the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior A league last year, has been dealt to the league-leading Orillia Flyers for two players and an undisclosed amount of money.

Announcing this Tuesday night, Oakville Oaks manager Earl Were said the Oaks will receive the rights to veteran defenceman George Westfall and to rookie defenceman Larry Gibson.

O'Brien was the league's leading scorer last season and won the Reference Trophy for the most sportsmanlike player.

Nomadic Gabler Finds Himself on Verge of Football Fame

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Wally Gabler's shoulders will be carrying the lion's share of the load Sunday when he directs Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the first game of the Eastern-Football Conference final against Montreal Alouettes.

And it's ironic in view of the nomadic life the 26-year-old Royal Oak, Mich., native has experienced in his short career in the Canadian Football League.

Spurned by the EFC Toronto Argonauts last year, rejected by Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Conference this year, Gabler now can have the last laugh by leading the Ticats into the national final even though the man he replaced has returned to active duty.

Arriving in late September to fill in at quarterback for injured Joe Zuger, Gabler quickly picked up the intricate Hamilton offence and was one of the instruments in the Tiger-Cats' first-place finish, winning four and tying one of their last five games on the schedule.

The scholarly, soft-spoken Gabler is new to playoff pressure in the CFL, but many of his team-mates, including Zuger, are veterans of the campaign. Since Ticats have not missed the final or semi-final since 1960.

The Als, on the other hand, have only a sprinkling of players with playoff experience as Montreal has been in the conference doldrums since 1960.

But the once-listless Als are flying high following their 19-7 win last Saturday in the sudden-death semi-final over Toronto Argonauts.

Centre Doppelt, whose experience with Hamilton for years before he jumped to the National Football League will attend him well in the pressure games, says the outcome of the two-game total-point series will depend on whichever team is the hungriest.

With three Grey Cup victories under his belt as a Ticat, Doppelt knows the Tigers will be formidable opponents when the two teams meet in Montreal's Autostade Sunday at 2 p.m. EST.

"It's not that they're so tough physically. . . . But it's the mental toughness that counts. You can be tough physically but, if you aren't ready—aren't certain you're going to win, you can be pushed around.

"We have a bunch of tough kids here. They just have to get there mentally."

He says Hamilton's tough reputation has been earned and "built into" members standouts as John Barrow and Angelo Mosca with contributing to that picture.

"Those two tackles, man, you don't fool them. And they are good—for a team. They help make the Tiger-Cats what they are."

However, he feels the new look Als can be instilled with that desire to win by years of their own veterans who have experienced playoff pressures in recent years, including playing coach Gene Gaines, Ted Collins, Terry Evanshen and Tom Pullen.

Keeping His Winning Ways

A muddy Sandy Hawley smiles at Toronto's Greenwood racetrack Tuesday after winning five races to surpass the Canadian record of 304 winning rides in a single season. Now with a total of 405 victories in North America, Hawley is just 80 behind the record set in 1953 by Willie Shoemaker. (CP Wirephoto)

Grand Jury Mystery

NFL Clubs Served Subpoenas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A shroud of mystery hangs today over a wave of federal grand jury subpoenas which have been served on more than half of the National Football League's 26 teams.

NFL officials in New York say they have not been informed of any pending federal legal action. But at least 15 NFL clubs were served with summonses by a federal grand jury in Cleveland to appear with their records beginning Nov. 17. And at least nine other clubs said they had not been subpoenaed as of today.

Carl Stoltzbouse, head of the justice department's anti-trust division in Cleveland, refused to comment on the matter and referred all inquiries to Justice department headquarters in Washington.

A spokesman for the department in Washington said:

"We know of no case in the works. However, it could be an individual grand jury action."

There were reports that the federal action involved possible anti-trust violations by the NFL and that the investigation might have been touched off by complaints by Walter Beach, a former defensive back with Cleveland Browns.

But Beach, reached late Tuesday night in New Haven, Conn., denied any involvement.

Summoned to appear before the Grand Jury were Denver Broncos New Orleans Saints, San Francisco 49ers, Detroit Lions, Dallas Cowboys, Cleveland Browns, Minnesota Vikings, Chicago Bears, Baltimore Colts, Pittsburgh Steelers, Cincinnati Bengals, Buffalo Bills, St. Louis Cardinals, Atlanta Falcons and Los Angeles Rams.

At least nine clubs—New York Giants and New York Jets, Philadelphia Eagles, Oakland Raiders, San Diego Chargers, Miami Dolphins, Kansas City Chiefs, Green Bay Packers and Houston Oilers—said no subpoenas had been delivered to them.

There was no word up whether Boston Patriots or Washington Redskins had been served.

Some clubs had specific individuals subpoenaed and others did not.

Jim Finks, general manager of the Vikings, said a U.S. marshal delivered a subpoena instructing the Minnesota club to be represented before the federal grand jury Dec. 7. Finks said he had been ordered to bring "various documents along the lines of contracts, waivers and options."

Namath To Play Next Year

BOSTON (AP) — Joe Namath came to town to promote his new movie career Tuesday but said he has every intention of returning to the football field next season.

"I want to play next year," said the New York Jets quarterback who is currently sidelined by a broken wrist.

"As far as throwing goes, I'll have to see how it is," he added. "If I can't throw the way I should, that would be different. But I don't want to stay away from the game.

World Record Set At Horse Auction

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A B. Hancock Jr. set a world record at auction Tuesday night when he paid $385,000 for Priceless Gen. a seven-year-old broodmare from the Bieber-Jacobs Stable.

Hancock, owner of Claiborne Farm at Paris, Ky., said a decision on the future of the winner of $389,387 would be made later. "After I talk to my partner, William Haggin Perry."

Hancock said he had been prepared to bid only to $400,000 for the star of the Keeneland fall sale of thoroughbred breeding stock. The underbidder, who stopped at $390,000, was N. B. Hunt of Dallas.

Priceless Gen, now in foal to Vaguely Noble, is a half sister to Affectionately, dam of Personality, who won the Preakness, Wood Memorial, Jersey Derby, Woodward Stakes and Jockey Gold Cup.

Second high price was the $230,000 paid by Charles W. Englehard for a nine-year-old filly in foal to Hail to Reason, sire of separate winners in each of racing's Triple Crown events.

Hawley Rides Five Winners

NEW YORK (AP) — If you bet $2 on a longshot in a horse race, said Jimmy The Greek, what would you rather get back—$22 or perhaps $100?

"Of course you'll take the $100," said Jimmy (The Greek) Snyder, well-known Las Vegas odds-maker. "That's why New York's off-track betting is bound to succeed. It will be a real knockdown blow to organized gambling."

The suave Nevada price maker, whose line on athletic contests and political races has become a national institution, came to New York at the invitation of Howard Samuels, millionaire president of the New York City Off-Track Betting Corp.

The city is preparing to set up legal horse parlors around the city and move into competition with bookies, who allegedly pocket millions from illegal gambling operations. The first betting windows are scheduled to open Jan. 11.

The city hopes, after a year or so, to start realizing between $100 million and $400 million a year to be used for education, relief and other benefits.

Jimmy the Greek, dapper in striped shirt and blue suit, joined Samuels in a news conference at the corporation headquarters at which the aims and the problems of the off-track betting project were explored.

The wizard of odds said the project is certain to be a success because the bettor will prefer to make his wager on a legal city parlor than on the sly through a bookmaker.

"It's an education problem," Snyder said. "When people realize they can walk in and make a bet, they will start doing it. Furthermore, they will get interested in horse racing."

Jimmy the Greek said that under the off-track system, the people and not the bookies will make the odds.

"The bookies have a limit of 16 to 1 on the odds they'll pay," he added. "With so many people playing the horses, there will be tremendous overlays, and some horses will pay 20 to 1 up to maybe 100 to 1.

"The bookies won't pay that. But the cityparlors and the tracks will."

Legal Betting to Squeeze Bookies

TORONTO (CP) — Jockey Sandy Hawley rode five winners at Greenwood Racetrack Tuesday on his way to surpassing the Canadian record of 304 winning rides in a single season set in 1966 by Avelino Gomez.

Riding two winners Monday, Hawley had put his Canadian total at 303 and his North American total at 400.

He came back in the second race Tuesday aboard a horse called Ruggedonit to tie Gomez's Canadian record and then went ahead with a victory aboard Palm in the fourth race. Three more victories for the 21 - year - old Oshawa native came with Moody Marty in the fifth race, Roji in the seventh and County Bruce in the eighth.

Now with a total of 405 victories in North America, Hawley is just 80 behind the record set in 1953 by Willie Shoemaker.

Hawley said after hanging up his tack for the day:

"I'm glad to have the Canadian record but what I really want is to beat the North American record."

To make sure he gets the $1 more win he needs to best Shoemaker's mark, Hawley intends to move to Florida tracks when the season winds up here Dec. 5.

Football? Well There Is A Game

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Anyone who still believes football is a spectator sport should participate in Grey Cup week here Nov. 23-26.

All football functions aside, the fans have a tougher schedule than the athletes.

The Junior Board of Trade schedule shows that it all starts slowly on the Monday with an hour-long parade downtown. The only thing doing on Tuesday is a visit to Bick Children's Hospital by the Miss Grey Cup contestants.

On Wednesday, the girls appear at a three-hour skating party in front of City Hall and on Thursday there are a couple of concerts.

Still mostly rested? Then hang on.

Friday, things get going about 8 p.m. and if you hit all the functions it's going to be 3 a.m. Sunday before you sink exhausted into the confetti.

There are several functions Friday at the Royal York Hotel and $4 gets you an all-inclusive ticket. Miss Grey Cup will be crowned between 9 and 9 p.m. and immediately afterward there will be dancing to the Ronnie Scott and H. G. Rankin and his Elastic Band.

Down the hall there's a rock concert and dance featuring The Cat in the Everyday People. These go until 1 a.m. Saturday.

Another rock happening occurs a few blocks away, 8:30 p.m. to 1 a.m., at the St. Lawrence Market. Admission is $3 and featured are Ocean and someone called Brutus.

Too far to go? Pop across the street, from the hotel, then to the Festival Fest in the Oak Room at Union Station—$3 to take in Walter Bernauner and his Umpa Pa Pa Band. They go until 12:30 a.m.

The scene in the Oak Room changes at 1 a.m. and the price drops to $2 and the whole thing is called the Pigskins Hideout and it's a discotheque which doesn't quit until 7 a.m. Saturday.

Out into the sunshine at 7 and right there outside the station is a free outdoor breakfast. But the tables must be cleared by 8 a.m. because the Grey Cup parade goes from 9:15 to 11:30 a.m.

Then it's off to fight the traffic to Canadian National Exhibition stadium for the 1 p.m. kickoff which is the excuse for all this medicasa. The game should end about 4:30 but by the time you're back to your hotel it's probably more like 5:30.

Don't despair, the next series of parties begins at 8:30.

In the Royal York, the Tranquility Base and Mudflet hold forth in the Canadian Room; The Quarrel and the Metro Stompers go in the Concert Hall, and the Bernie Louis orchestra takes over the Ballroom. Windup time—1 a.m.

If you're still circulating, however, the Hog 'n Pa boys go at it from 8:30 to 12:30 in Union Station and when they get through it's the discotheque again until 3 a.m.

But what about football? Well, the teams will be in town no later than Wednesday; there will be workouts and interviews with coaches

The Canadian Football League the nice general managers, the Eastern Football Conference and the Western Football Conference will hold meetings.

And there will be the naming of old-timers to the Hall of Fame and the awarding of cash and trophies to today's heroes

But you can read all all not those things the next day.

McLain and Williams First Meeting 'A Sort of A Love-in'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Denny McLain met his new manager, Ted Williams, for the first time Tuesday since the controversial right-hander was traded from Detroit to Washington and struck up a minor difference in theory in the art of pitching.

McLain said he likes to pitch every fourth day; Williams feels control he prefers pitchers to throw every fifth.

Ted Davis was no indication of a budding McLain-Williams feud as the two baseball greats called to introduce McLain to the Washington press corps. It had all the trappings of a sort of love-in.

Williams started it by saying: "My feeling, after talking to him and discussing his present plans and those of 1971, is that I'm convinced Denny McLain wants to get himself back on the track that made him one of the greatest pitchers in baseball.

"And this manager is going to do everything he can to get Denny on the right track again."

McLain said he "was happy to be in Washington, happy to have a new start and happy to be back in baseball."

Williams opened the discussion about how often McLain would pitch when he said:

"We've already discussed whether he's going to pitch every fourth day or every fifth day."

McLain said Williams has the theory that a pitcher shouldn't pitch every fourth day. "Well, the argument that I can give is that I've always done it and found it worked well for me. I've found that it is best for me, every fourth day. If I can prove it is best for me, I hope he'll go along with it."

Williams replied: "He did it when he won 31 games and he did it when he won 25. But he was with a contending ball club. He had a few easier games than with a club that was not as good.

"I'm certainly impressed with Denny, he's a strong guy, and he's not a pitcher who wastes a lot of pitches. But by his own admission they didn't count pitches in Detroit and he believes he throws from 80 to 100 pitches a game. I'm under the impression that he throws more than that.

"But we'll talk and see," said Williams, with a broad grin.

"I'm all for him throwing every other day if he can do it.

McLain, along with third baseman Don Wert, infielder-outfielder Elliott Maddox and pitcher Norm McCrae, came to Washington in exchange for the left side of Washington's infield-third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez and shortstop Ed Brinkman, and pitchers Joe Coleman and Jim Hannan.

Chicago Cubs Not Too Impressed

CHICAGO (AP) — Pitcher Ferguson Jenkin's reported demand Tuesday for a $100,000 salary from Chicago Cubs drew comment from General Manager John Holland of the National League baseball club that "Fergie's record is very fine to have, but winning a pennant is more important."

Jenkins was quoted in Mitchell's Bay, Ont., as saying: "I'm feeling after talking to him and discussing his present plans and those of 1971, is that I'm convinced Denny McLain

"I'm going to be very firm about it, too, if just think I've had four years of good years in a row and I deserve that kind of contract."

Holland also commented:

"Our answer to that is we don't negotiate with our players through the newspapers, TV or radio. Our negotiating time is January when we send contracts out."

Boog Powell Named League MVP

NEW YORK (AP) — Big Boog Powell, the slugging first baseman who led Baltimore to its third American League championship and second world title in five years, was named the American League's Most Valuable Player for the 1970 baseball season Tuesday.

Maki Gets Rugged Hello On First Trip to Boston

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Wayne Maki has rarely been cited as a wallflower-type hockey player since turning pro with St. Louis in the old Central Pro league in 1963.

His minor pro career in St. Louis and Dallas and a brief stint with Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League showed him to be a dedicated, aggressive performer.

Fourteen months ago, he gained national prominence while playing with St. Louis Blues in an exhibition game at Ottawa.

With one swing of his stick, he fractured the left side of the skull of Ted Green of Boston Bruins. Green, near death for several days, returned to the Boston hockey this year.

Maki demoted shortly after the incident, found his way back into the league this year with Vancouver Canucks and Tuesday night visited Boston Garden for the first time.

The Bruins romped to a 6-3 victory, but it seemed the Boston fans and players had waited a long time for the occasion and the boos that greeted a pass to or trip of Maki along the boards, hammering him severely whenever the opportunity presented itself.

In the only other game played Tuesday, Los Angeles Kings dumped Pittsburgh Penguins 5-1.

Tonight, Montreal Canadiens visit California Golden Seals, Vancouver is at Toronto against the Maple Leafs, New York Rangers will be hosts to Pittsburgh, Philadelphia Flyers move into Chicago against the Black Hawks, and Los Angeles takes on Minnesota North Stars at Bloomington, Minn.

The 26-year-old Maki, a Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., native, survived the pounding but not as the Canucks, who failed to strengthen their fourth-place spot in the NHL's East Division.

The division-leading Bruins, meanwhile, got goals from Phil Esposito, Bobby Orr, Ed Westfall, Johnny Bucyk (his 30th of the season), and John Bucyk even before the Canucks could counter with an attack'ot their own late in the game.

The Kings breezed by Pittsburgh as Bob Pulford rapped in two goals before 8,000 Penguin fans.

Pulford, normally a slow starter while with Toronto Maple Leafs before being traded to the Kings, now has six for the season to share the team lead in that department with Gord Labossiere.

Buffalo Sabres received good news Tuesday with the announcement that Don Marshall, who quit the club during the pre-season training period, has agreed to re-join the East Division cellar-dwellers.

A club spokesman said Marshall, formerly with Montreal and New York, will report Friday but it was still uncertain when the 33-year-old left winger would resume play.

Gaels Hope for Repeat

TORONTO (CP) — Queen's University Golden Gaels hope football will repeat itself this weekend.

The Golden Gaels, champions of the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association, travel to Winnipeg from Kingston to meet the University of Manitoba Bisons Saturday in the Western College Bowl.

Queen's fans have fond memories of the last encounter between the Golden Gaels and the University of Manitoba. It was the 1968 Western College Bowl, and the Golden Gaels triumphed 28-4.

The winner in Winnipeg Saturday will earn the right to play in the College Bowl—the Canadian college football championship game—at Varsity Stadium in Toronto Nov. 21.

The opposition will be either the University of Ottawa Gee Gees or the University of New Brunswick Red Bombers who meet Saturday in the Atlantic Bowl at Halifax.

The Golden Gaels may find the University of Manitoba a little tougher this weekend than the last time ago. The Bisons are the defending national champions.

But the final statistics of the O-QAA released Tuesday show Gaels also must be taken seriously.

Queen's led the O-QAA with six wins and one loss, and the 183 points it collected was the most in the league.

The Golden Gaels, however, gave up 82 points—only third lowest in the six-team league.

If the statistics are a reliable guide, look for the Golden Gaels to emphasize the ground attack Saturday—that's their prime asset.

CALGARY (CP) — The entire offensive backfield of the league champion University of Manitoba Bisons has been selected to the Western Canada Intercollegiate all-star football team.

Seven Bisons filled eight positions on the team chosen by the five head coaches in the league.

Henry Lodewycks, a flanker, and defensive halfback for the Bisons, was the only player named to both the offensive and defensive squads.

Bob Kraemer, leading passer in the league, was chosen quarterback with Bob Toogood, Mike Skyrlo and Dennis Hryceshin running backs.

Bob Keating of the Bisons was at centre and in the defensive backfield with Lodewycks was Roy Parker.

Laurel Is World Horse Race

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — The Washington, D.C., International is a horse race of the world, and today's running underscored that fact.

Eight countries were represented by 18 horses entered in the 1½ mile turf race over 1½ miles on the grass at Laurel.

Bearer of Italy is owned by American Wayne Murjr and his jockey was Carlos Astorga of Chile.

Sonador of Venezuela was bred in Ireland.

Sol de Noche of Uruguay is owned and trained by Mark T. Ops III of the United States and had American Bill Passmore as his rider.

Paul Melon's Fort Marcy, who represented the United States along with Honest Ike Kuck's Fiddle Jale, had a Latin touch in his bid for another International win to go with his 1967 victory. His jockey, Jorge Velasquez, is from Panama.

Ownership or where a horse is bred does not determine what country a horse will represent in the International. This is determined by where a horse is trained.

The field also included Miss Dan II and Bemagency of France, Lowcanacle of England, Cortez of West Germany and Canada's Fanfreluche, owned by Jean-Louis Levesque of Montreal and the only filly in the field.

Junior A Rangers End Losing Streak

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener Rangers snapped a six-game losing streak Tuesday night, defeating London Knights 8-4 in Ontario Hockey Association Junior A action.

In other games, first - place Peterborough Petes downed last-place Oshawa Generals 3-2 and Hamilton Red Wings edged Montreal Junior Canadiens 4-2.

In Kitchener, Tom Cassady paced the victors with two goals while team-mates Larry Robinson, Les Burgess, Ted Scharf and Phil Iwaskiewicz scored one each.

Dennis Ververgaert managed two goals for London. Bob Wright and Don Jones scored the others

In Oshawa, Generals' coach Eddie Reigle had nothing but praise for Petes' goaltender John Garrett, who stopped 18 Oshawa shots in the second period alone.

"He has to be the best around. With a goaltender like that, Peterborough can afford to take chances up front," he said.

In Oshawa, Jim Mahon paced the victors with two goals while Ken Richardson scored the other.

Tim Simpson scored both Oshawa goals.

The Wings' win over Montreal was their sixth consecutive victory at home.

Eddie Gilbert, Rick Kehoe, Owen Jelly and Larry Gould scored one each for the Wings.

Rich Martin and Bolgan Podwysocki replied for Montreal.

Spotlight on Kidnappings Shifts to Quebec City

MONTREAL (CP) — Visible police investigation of the Cross-Laporte kidnappings petered out Tuesday and the spotlight in the cases was expected to shift today to Quebec City where the provincial government's handling of the kidnap crisis was expected to come under fire in the national assembly.

Police said they made no raids and no arrests Tuesday and there were still 41 persons being held in Quebec jails, unchanged since Monday.

But in Quebec City, Premier Robert Bourassa's Liberal government was expected to come under repeated attack for its handling of the case.

At the opening of the session Tuesday, Premier Bourassa promised to give time for all necessary debate today or Thursday for discussion of unrest in Quebec province, particularly since the kidnapping of British diplomat James Cross Oct. 5.

Meanwhile, Justice Minister Jerome Choquette told a news conference that Quebecers will have to "get used to the idea" of more police powers if they want to be protected against terrorism and organized crime.

Mr. Choquette has suggested that Quebecers should be compelled by law to carry identification cards, possibly bearing a photograph and a thumbprint.

Police said Tuesday the secretary-Front de Libération du Québec has widened its propaganda efforts, trying to barter the life of Mr. Cross for increased exposure in the media.

The FLQ has claimed responsibility both for the Cross kidnapping and the kidnap-killing of Pierre Laporte, Quebec labor minister abducted from his home Oct. 10 and strangled to death one week later.

Police said the terrorist group has distributed seven photos of Mr. Cross, who the authorities hope remains alive and well.

Of five prime suspects in the Laporte case, one is in custody — Bernard Lortie, 19-year-old student, testified Saturday at an inquest into the Laporte death that he was one of four men who kidnapped the minister.

It is not known whether Lortie will appear again Thursday when the inquest resumes.

Of the 41 persons reported detained under the War Measures Act, proclaimed Oct. 16, 49 have been arraigned on charges ranging from seditious conspiracy to illegal possession of weapons.

One of the War Measures Act, which gives police power to search and arrest without warrants and to detain suspects for up to 21 days without laying charges, has been criticized by opposition politicians at both the federal and provincial level.

Many critics of the provincial government for asking federal authorities to proclaim the act was suspected from the separatist Parti Québecois and the Union Nationale. Parti Québecois members in particular have been critical of the move.

The Creditistes have supported use of the War Measures Act, expected to be replaced soon by the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, before the Commons now.

Lortie is one of five persons for whom warrants have been issued in connection with the kidnappings. Warrants issued Oct., 23 name him, Jacques Rose, 32, and Pascale Rimard, 23, for conspiracy to kidnap Mr. Laporte.

Warrants issued Oct. 15 name Paul Rose, 27, and Marc Carbonneau, 27, in connection with both the Cross and Laporte abductions.

8th Tyendinaga

8TH TYENDINAGA — Presbyterial executive meeting was held in Roslin Presbyterian Church Wednesday afternoon. Guests were present from Gananoque, Kingston, Belleville, Trenton, Tweed and the surrounding district.

The Women's Missionary Society meeting of the Presbyterian Church, Roslin was held at the home of Mrs. Doris Cross.

National Assembly Will Examine Quebec Crisis

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec national assembly will begin today to examine the current crisis in the province with the Union Nationale party and the Parti Québecois demanding explanations of the Liberal government's actions.

Both the UN and the PQ want Premier Robert Bourassa's government to explain before the assembly why and how it made decisions since the kidnapping Oct. 5 of James Cross, the senior British trade commissioner in Montreal.

A special debate on the crisis is expected to begin either today or Thursday. Premier Bourassa and Justice Minister Jerome Choquette, in particular, will be called upon to explain the government's actions.

In addition, Robert Burns, the PQ house leader, and Camille Laurin, the PQ's official spokesman in the house, have requested on the national assembly agenda paper the tabling of several documents concerning the crisis.

The assembly sat for an hour Tuesday, resuming the session after a summer recess interrupted twice by special meetings to deal with a province-wide construction strike and to put the province's medical care insurance plan into effect Nov. 1 without doctors' approval.

The opposition grilling of the government, expected to begin Tuesday, did not occur. Leaders of all four parties in the assembly had agreed beforehand to suspend regular house procedure, including the daily question period.

Instead, the government presented nine bills, including a consumer protection law and legislation creating a new "super department" of social affairs. Party leaders eulogized Pierre Laporte and Gen. Charles de Gaulle before the house rose.

CUSO To Back Africans

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian University Service Overseas has decided to become involved in a domestic program of ethnocultural and political support for southern African liberation movements, despite opposition from the two executive directors of the voluntary development agency.

At the agency's annual meeting in Lac Beauport, Que., which ended Monday, delegates voted in favor of putting "public and private pressure on the Canadian government and Canadian companies to cease their dealings with South Africa and Portuguese colonialism."

They also approved a CUSO public education program to tell Canadians about the white minority domination of southern Africa and Canada's "involvement" in the maintenance of that situation.

Delegates said these motions were passed by a majority of two-thirds of the approximately 100 delegates present for the vote.

Another resolution received more narrow approval: "That CUSO take the position that the Canadian government recognize the legitimacy of the southern African liberation movements."

Such movements are active in the Portuguese colonies of Guinea-Bissau, Mozambique and Angola, and to a lesser extent in Rhodesia.

CNR Train Is Derailed

CAPREOL, Ont. (CP) — One passenger required hospital treatment when the CNR Super-Continental train, westbound from Montreal to Winnipeg and Vancouver, was derailed early today nine miles east of this town near Sudbury.

The derailment was believed caused by a broken rail.

Donat Brunet, 58, of Winnipeg was treated for chest pains after six coaches and two diesel units left the rails but remained upright.

Michel Laverne, 26, of Grandmère, Que., a sleeping car porter suffered a slight sprain.

The remainder of the 120 passengers and crew on board were picked up by bus and brought to Capreol, where they were placed on another section of the Super-Continental originating in Toronto.

Ian Smith Seeking Agreement

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Prime Minister Ian Smith indicated Tuesday he is prepared to consider changes in Rhodesia's new apartheid style constitution in return for concessions from the British government.

But, he emphasized this could be done only on condition that any changes to the republican constitution were proven to be in the interests of Rhodesia.

It was the first official comment from the Rhodesian side on new contacts between London and Salisbury, announced in London Monday by Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home.

Ryerson Sale Not Affected By Conference with Robarts

TORONTO (CP) — A meeting Tuesday between Premier John Robarts and officials of two publishing firms had no immediate effect on the pending sale of Ryerson Press of Toronto to an American-owned publishing company.

Mr. Robarts met for an hour in his office with officials of McGraw-Hill Co. of Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of McGraw-Hill Corp. of New York, and the United Church of Canada, which agreed last week to sell Ryerson Press for a reported $1 million.

Mr. Robarts called the meeting because announcement of the pending sale has led to public controversy and fears that the Canadian textbook publishing industry will be taken over by Americans.

But none of the parties involved offered specific comment following the meeting, except to say another meeting would be held at a future date.

John Macmillan, president of McGraw-Hill, said the meeting was worthwhile, but declined further comment. Rev. Frank Bridale, Ryerson administrator, refused comment.

David Scollard, sales manager of Ryerson's education division, has charged the firm got into financial hot water because money was siphoned from the company's gross earnings into other United Church programs.

In a letter to The Toronto Telegram Tuesday, he also said that all Canadian parties interested in purchasing Ryerson Press were not given a chance.

"The publishing division had been led to believe that the company would not be sold at least until the end of the calendar year. This would have allowed competitive offers by Canadian groups to be made, as well as possible alternative arrangements to be developed by the government."

Meanwhile a group representing 14 independent Canadian book publishing firms across Canada called Monday for immediate federal legislation to prohibit the sales of Canadian-owned book publishing firms to foreign interests.

The newly-formed Emergency Committee of Canadian Publishers demanded legislation to disallow the pending sale of Ryerson Press and the sale in September of the textbook publishing division of W. J. Gage Ltd. of Toronto to Scott Foresman and Co. of Illinois.

Dominion Introduces Dual Pricing

TORONTO (CP)—Dominion Stores Ltd. of Toronto announced Tuesday it is introducing "dual pricing" as a new tactic in the supermarket price war it touched off last week.

In selected markets, certain products will bear tags indicating both the total price and the price per ounce.

Dominion President T. G. McCormack announced.

Several chains have jumped into the competition since Dominion slashed prices on thousands of items by up to 15 per cent last week.

Consumers groups are keeping a skeptical eye on the battle.

A spokesman for the Ontario Food Council said supermarkets were surveyed during and after a similar price war in Edmonton last year.

"After five weeks of discounting the prices did go back up," the spokesman said.

Foreign Ownership Study Blocked by Liberal MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal MPs Tuesday blocked any immediate Commons committee study of foreign ownership of the Canadian publishing industry.

Motion for such a committee examination was made by Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena), who suggested that the Commons finances committee look into means of maintaining Canadian control of the Canadian publishing industry and report by Dec. 15.

Liberals declined the unanimous consent necessary for Mr. Howard's motion to be accepted.

In the Senate, Senators Harper Frowse (L—Alberta) and Hazen Argue (L—Saskatchewan) moved to establish an immediate inquiry into the sale of Ryerson Press but debate on the motion was adjourned.

Takeover Control Is Urged

TORONTO (CP) — Ian Wahn, Liberal member of Parliament for St. Paul's, called Tuesday for the creation of a federal agency to regulate takeovers of Canadian firms by United States interests.

He said the controversial proposed purchase of Ryerson Press by McGraw-Hill Inc. was indicative of an increasing problem in economic relations between Canada and the U.S.

Mr. Wahn told a Liberal backbencher's luncheon a federal agency to review takeovers could do research on foreign-owned corporations and direct investment in Canadian resources and business.

Initials Open Door To Job

TORONTO (CP) — The director of the Ontario Women's Bureau says women should use only their first names initials on job application forms if they expect trouble from male-minded personnel managers.

Lita-Rose Betcherman told a meeting of industrial editors Tuesday she knew of at least one case where a woman lost a job chance because she put down her full first name rather than an initial.

The woman was turned down but a few days later filled out another application for the same job giving only her initials. She was granted an interview and given the job.

Manitoba Offers Aid

WINNIPEG (CP) — Industry Minister Leonard Evans Tuesday issued an invitation to Canadian publishing houses to "preserve their Canadian identity and ownership by establishing a profitable business venture in Manitoba."

In a news release, Mr. Evans said Manitoba will "bend over backwards to provide a fertile commercial and financial climate" for publishing firms locating here.

Corn Crop Shrinks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The blight-ridden United States corn crop shrank another two per cent during October and now is estimated at 4,110,977,000 bushels, the agriculture department announced Tuesday.

Officials said the new forecast, based on field conditions Nov. 1, represented a 15-per-cent decline from the record crop of more than 4,800 million bushels expected in July.

Most of the reduction is blamed on southern corn leaf blight, a fungus disease that began earlier this year in the Southeast and was spready by the wind into major producing areas of the Midwest corn belt.

National Farm Union Rebuffs Tax Rebates

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives of the National Farmers Union turned up their noses Tuesday at Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough and the Ontario government's offer of educational tax rebates.

After a speech in which Mr. McKeough explained the government's problem, about 150 delegates to a regional meeting of the NFU supported a resolution which called for continuing tax holidays.

The farmers agreed to withhold the education portion of their municipal tax bills in some cases up to 65 per cent of the total bill—until the government removes all educational levies from farm lands but buildings other than farm residences.

The move means many hold-out farmers will still get a 25 per cent rebate on their total 1970 tax bill because the rebates are to be mailed directly to farmers.

Mr. McKeough told the meeting: "If we removed the education tax from the land many of you would still feel the burden. The problem is to get at the total tax burden."

Many other groups in society need tax decisions, Mr. McKeough said, but economic progress and social legislation cost money and it has to be raised through taxation.

Mr. McKeough said some of the rebates should be in the mail by mid-December. In future, he said, the rebates will probably be deducted from the farmers tax bills.

In other business during the two-day regional meeting, the NFU called for withholding action on milk and beef, and discussed a union label for the produce of NFU farm families.

NFU members may withhold industrial milk—used for commercial preparations such as ice cream and milk powder—unless the payment to farmers is raised to $5.58 a hundredweight. The current price is $3.60 plus up to 90 cents a hundredweight, relative to a federal quota system of subsidies.

Mrs. Guy Bolam Denies She Is Amelia Earhart

NEW YORK (AP) — Peppers, grey-haired Mrs. Guy Bolam described Tuesday that she was the famous aviatrix Amelia Earhart, lost over the Pacific in a 1937 round-the-world flight.

She called the book Amelia Earhart Lives by two former Air Force officers, in which they made that claim, a "poorly documented hoax" and "utter nonsense."

The authors, Lt.-Col. Joe Klaas and Maj. Joseph Gervais, claimed in the book that Miss Earhart was actually on a hush-hush mission for the United States government to photograph secret Japanese military installations on the island of Truk.

They said the Japanese shot her down, captured her and kept her a prisoner of Emperor Hirohito in the Imperial Palace in Tokyo until after the Second World War. Then, they said, she reappeared as "Mrs. Bolam."

The authors didn't explain why this never came out when the United States occupied Japan.

They claimed they met Mrs. Bolam at a party for old-time flyers on Long Island in 1965 and decided she was really Miss Earhart.

Mrs. Bolam said it was "a miserable thing to make a pawnow of me and Miss Earhart—who can't defend herself."

She said at a news conference here that she was perfectly willing to have her fingerprints and those of Miss Earhart compared.

Both are on record.

Nude Picture of Queen Brings Austrian Apology

VIENNA (Reuter) — Austria's foreign ministry has expressed regret that a nude painting of Britain's Queen appeared in a newspaper here on Sunday, the British embassy said Tuesday night.

The illustration appeared in the mass circulation Vienna-Express, and showed the British Monarch lying on a couch clad only in a crown and garter showing a comic book to her children.

The painter, 50-year-old Vienna photographer and illustrator Roland Pleterski, told The Express:

"I don't wish to offend anyone. I just paint people I like."

Pleterski had planned to include the illustration of the Queen in a show of his works in the Vienna Unilever Gallery but an embassy spokesman said the gallery has refused to put the illustration of the Queen on show.

A copy of the painting appeared in Tuesday's edition of the West German daily Bild Zeitung.

Oil-eating Bacteria Developed in Florida

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Scientists at Florida State University say they have developed potent strains of a bacteria that gobbles up spilled oil—then quietly dies off.

"We knew that certain types of bacteria have been breaking down oil for millions of years," Prof. Carl Oppenheimer said in an interview Monday.

"So we went out into the environment and looked in likely places where oil had been spilled for a long time and came up with several promising strains."

American Motors Has Loss

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. will suffer "a very substantial loss" for the 1970 fiscal year, the firm's two top executives report.

But AMC Board Chairman Roy D. Chapin, Jr. and President William V. Luneburg told stockholders in a letter that AMC is currently operating at a profit and expects to be in the black the first quarter of 1971.

The company's 1970 fiscal year ended Sept. 30 and its financial status will be announced next Monday after review at the regular meeting of the AMC board of directors, a company spokesman said.

For the first nine months of the calendar year, AMC losses amounted to $39.8 million, or $1.82 a share.

Among the reasons for the 1970 loss, the letter listed a six-week strike last fall, the softening of the U.S. economy, pressure of increasing labor and material costs and special expenses incurred in the acquisition of Jeep Corp. from Kaiser Industries.

Three Die In Mishaps

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Three persons were killed in two head-on collisions within an hour Tuesday afternoon near this community 35 miles northwest of Ottawa.

Paul Ankolos, 58, of Ottawa, died in the first collision, about one mile north of here. The driver of the second car was injured.

About an hour later, Daniel Stevens, 58, of Delta, Ont., and Harry Anderson, 65, of Lyn, Ont., died in a car-truck crash about 23 miles south of town.

There were no passengers in the four vehicles.

Dead Pair Identified

STRATFORD (CP) — Police Tuesday identified a man and a woman found dead in a locked c-stage an Florence Rieht, 69, and Michael Toh, 65.

Police said Mrs. Riehl, mother of eight, had been severely beaten and that both died of gunshot wounds.

Police said two guns were found at the scene.

Man Charged With Holdups

TORONTO (CP) — A man arrested minutes after a downtown Toronto bank holdup Tuesday has been charged with three bank robberies in the last month.

About $2,600 was taken in Tuesday's holdup after a Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce teller was handed a note reading "don't press the alarm or I'll kill you," by a man armed with a pistol.

Detectives carrying shotgun and rifles seized a man, a toy pistol and a satchel with $2,600 in it a few minutes later several blocks away.

Wilfred Rider, 30, of Toronto was charged with Tuesday's robbery and holdups which netted $600 and $1,150 on Oct. 21 and Oct. 9 respectively.

Ontario Motor League

Now is the time for pre-winter car care — some call it "winterization" — to get ready for the certain onslaught of ice and snow, storms and freezing cold in the months ahead.

Much more than just adding anti-freeze and taking "a look at the battery" is wise foresight for drivers in Ontario's unpredictable, fast-changing, sometimes savage climate.

Chances are a full check-up and tune - up now will more than pay for itself in avoidance of more costly repair bills later on. Certainly such will "pay off" in driving peace of mind. Here are just some of the more important "winterization" needs of cars:

Battery — Check and charge if necessary. Check cables for cracks and corrosion.

Cooling System — Drain and flush, installing proper thermostat and anti - freeze. Check radiator and heater hoses. Replace if defective.

Proper Weight Oil — Use 10W oil below 32 degrees and 5W oil below 10 degrees.

Tune Up - Check ignition system, points, condenser, plugs.

Fuller Belts — Inspect, adjust and replace as required.

Carburetor — Check and clean, adjust automatic choke.

Snow Tires — Mount after inspection for cuts and bruises. Check tire chains for worn or broken links.

Many of American Automobile Club executives across the border are strongly in favor of retention and even more widespread wearing of the miniskirt as a boon to traffic safety. They feel that a girl in a miniskirt as a pedestrian is a downright menace because she has a dulling effect upon passing male drivers. "A bored driver is a poor driver", these officials contend. In contrast, a mini or micro-mini worn by a lovely, leggy pedestrian keeps nearby male drivers alert, awake, and even exhilarated. Male drivers, seeing a maxi - skirted pedestrian, invariably thought they were elderly ladies and gave them maxi - mum consideration.

The Ontario Motor League branch in Belleville does not go along with this viewpoint. We believe that mixing girl-watching and driving could be dangerous.

If you're using radial ply tires on your car — or planning to — you might be interested in a recent warning issued by the U.S. Air Force.

The U.S.A.F. recently experienced a fatality where the use of a radial tire on the right front wheel was considered to be a significant factor in the accident. It was suspected that the radial tire held a true track while the conventional tires skidded, causing a head-on crash. The mix of conventional and radial tires is a dangerous practice. Preferably, radial tires should be installed on all four wheels. If two radial tires are used, they should always be on the rear wheels. Radials should never be used on the front wheels with conventional tires on the rear.

"The basic design of radial tires is such that, when you turn the steering wheel, they immediately take up the new heading without the normal side reflection of conventional tires. They hold a true tracking area in the case of radial tires on the front only, in a slight skid situation, the front tires hold a true grip allowing the rear tires to break loose, resulting in a severe skid. The use of one radial tire on the front with conventional tires on the other three wheels is considered a very dangerous practice. In this situation which control would be highly questionable even under ideal road conditions."

Detergents Are Banned

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (AP) — The legislature of eastern Long Island's Suffolk County, population 1.2 million, voted Tuesday to ban sales of all laundry detergents in order to protect the county's drinking water supply.

The ban, which goes into effect March 1, exempted toothpaste, detergent in bar form, dishwasher detergent and shampoos.

Maximum penalty for selling the banned detergents was set at 15 days in jail and a $250 fine. No penalty was set for users who might obtain the detergents outside the county rather than use laundry soap powder.

The legislature vote was 16 to 3 with two members absent.

The compounds barred in Suffolk County have been described as accumulating in cesspools and then seeping back into the drinking water supply.

Suffolk County contains suburban residential communities within easy riding distance of Manhattan, but its eastern tip is about 150 miles from the city and includes the fashionable Hamptons summer resort area.

Three legislators said the other compounds banned here are dissolved in the sewage treatment plants of most cities, but Suffolk County has no sewage treatment plants.

Government's Copper Controls Aided Prices, Harmed Supply

OTTAWA (CP) — Government controls imposed on the Canadian copper industry helped to combat inflation but intensified supply distortions and inequities among producers, the federal prices and income commission says in a special report published Tuesday.

The commission suggests a more ordered pricing-and-supply program, perhaps including some incentive-attraction scheme among producers for their domestic sales along with firmly-established supply quotas.

The commission's report, at more than 12,000 words, the most extensive since the agency was established 15 months ago, is based on a six-month study that included meetings with 38 companies, from miners to manufacturers, and with officials of the Canadian, U.S. and British Columbia governments.

The study grapples with the complexities and fluctuations of multi-priced world markets for copper and the impact of federal interventions in the Canadian market since 1966, culminating early this year in the imposition of export controls on domestic prices and a requirement that all mines in eastern Canada contribute to domestic needs at the fixed price.

The planned increase to 66 cents a pound from 57 cents was cut back to a 59-cent price March 1, substantially lower than the prevailing 65-cent rate in the United States and prices up to 80 cents on world markets. Lately, prices have subsided and the Canadian and U.S. prices are about even.

The commission estimates that Canadian fabrication of copper wires and rods were saved more than $3 million a month by the price rollback.

While stabilization of the domestic refined-copper price helped stem inflation, the report observed "served to accentuate the problems of supply allocation which have existed for several years under this 'fixed-price system' under competition says.

On pricing, the report rejects the widely-fluctuating rates established by the London Metal Exchange on the ground that this lacks the stability of a large-volume, long-term commodity market.

The necessity to impose a system to make sure Canadian users are adequately supplied at a lower domestic price discriminates among producers and discourages the processing of raw copper inside Canada, the report says.

However, a tiered-price system could probably operate more effectively if quantities to be marked domestically were firmly established.

In order to achieve greater equity among producers, "there could be some form of revenue equalization among producers which involved a transfer of revenues from those selling in higher-price markets to those selling in lower-price markets."

Auto Standards Listed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The department of health, education and welfare today published final auto-pollution standards slightly eased from initial proposals in July.

The exhaust-reduction regulations represent a compromise with the auto industry, which argued it did not have time to meet more stringent requirements.

New cars produced next fall must emit 25 per cent less hydrocarbons and 17 per cent less carbon monoxide than 1971-model cars, the department said. The government initially proposed a 25-per-cent reduction for hydrocarbons and 30 per cent for carbon monoxide.

The regulations also reduce to two grams from six per test the allowable evaporation loss of hydrocarbons from gas tanks and carburetors.

Bill Guarding Against Short Weight Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill designed to protect consumers against short measure or weight of goods was given second reading Tuesday in the Senate.

Under the bill, scales and other measuring devices used for trade must be approved by the standards branch of the consumers affairs department.

Senator Daniel Lang (L—Ontario) also told the Senate that the bill lays the foundation for the introduction of the metric system in Canada.

Teams of inspectors would be located across Canada to ensure accuracy of measuring devices.

Belleville Pays Tribute to Fallen of Two Wars

New Generation Marches With Elders In Remembrance

Old Soldiers Do Not Forget

Memories – No; Respect – Yes

Hundreds at Cenotaph For Moving Ceremonies

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

In one of the largest Remembrance Day turnouts in recent years, hundreds of Belleville citizens this morning paid tribute to the memory of world war heroes who gave their lives for Democracy.

Canon R. B. D. Wright, president of the Belleville Ministerial Association in a keynote address at the cenotaph told his listeners that the large turnout, plus present day moves to right social ills showed that Canadians were coming to realize that "eternal vigilance is the price of true freedom."

Veterans of two world wars, along with present day armed forces members from Trenton; the Hasty Pees militia unit and cadets paraded to the cenotaph from the Belleville armouries.

Heading the parade was the Canadian Legion Color Party, followed by the Trenton Air Station kilkie band and veterans of the two world wars.

The proud veterans were followed by the Duke of Edinburgh Army, Navy and Airforce Veterans' kilkie band.

Bringing up the rear were Canadian Armed Forces members from Trenton, the Hasty Pees, the Belleville Sea Cadets and Sea Cadet Band and the Belleville Air Cadets.

But even before the arrival of the parade, the cenotaph grounds were crowded with citizenry both old and young. School children, taking a holiday from classes for Remembrance Day, helped to swell the crowd.

Legion Ewrey Bram Humphreys conducted the Remembrance Day service at the cenotaph with the Salvation Army Band playing the opening anthem and also music for the two well known hymns "O God Our Help" and "Abide With Me" — included in the service.

Trumpeter Jack Gill sounded The Last Post and Reveille, while pipers from the Duke of Edinburgh Unit ANAF pipe band played the Lament.

The invocation was by Rev. Peter Tett; the scripture reading by Rt. Rev. J. A. Carley and the closing prayer by Rev. Charles H. Savage.

Silver Cross Mother, Mrs. W. S. Price, who lost a son during World War II in service with the airforce laid the wreath representing motherhood.

Lee Grills, MP for Hastings laid the federal government wreath, Mayor J. Russell Scott, city wreath.

The parade was organized by the Veterans of Belleville Committee under its chairman Howard L. Eakesh.

Canon Wright said Remembrance Day services were held to pay respect to those who had given their lives in the service of freedom.

But, at the same time, he said, Canadians would be remiss if they did not also take off their hats and coats to work for the future.

He said it was high time that present day evils such as racism, poverty and revolutionary movements such as the FLQ were stamped out.

"We must learn not to consider Indians and Negroes second class citizens," he said, "We must learn to be responsible and interdependent."

The speaker called for more consideration of elderly people and for the elimination of pollution.

Industry, he said, was more concerned about production than people.

Also moral permissiveness must be checked, as well as movements like the FLQ which threaten responsible government.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of true freedom." Canon Wright concluded.

Agricultural Society Offers To Administer Fairgrounds

The Belleville Agricultural Society has offered to assume full administration responsibilities for the Belleville fairgrounds and will submit proposals as to how it would carry this out.

This was the outcome of an Exhibition Park Planning Committee meeting held last night at Ben Sleecker Auditorium when submissions as to the future operation of the grounds were received from the various organizations now using exhibition park.

The meeting generally agreed that the exhibition park could be operated more efficiently if administered by one body, but the agricultural society was the only organization that offered to assume administration.

Organizations making submissions to the park planning committee included the Quinte Curling Club; the Recreation-Areas Committee and the agricultural society.

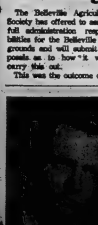
The Quinte Riding and Driving Club, which operates harness racing at the grounds, made no submission, while the board of parks, technically owners of the park, indicated it would like to opt out from the park administration.

"This does not mean the parks board is abdicating or walking out," said parks chairman Aldermen Paul Russell.

"We are not backing out, only saying that we feel there must be a better way of administering exhibition park.

Under the present system of operation the parks board owns the property and looks after maintenance. But the agricultural society, driving and riding club, curling club and lawn bowling club all have vested interests.

The city owns the new Ben Sleecker Auditorium with the agricultural society also contributing towards its cost.



Alderman Arthur Keegan as city representative on the fair board, also made a submission as to how he felt the fairgrounds should be operated.

The meeting voted that there be one board for administration of exhibition park and then went into an informal brainstorming session to discuss the various points for consideration in any agreement.

Points discussed included the availability of grants should the agricultural society be the administrative body; the need for additional land, new cattle and horse barns and improved paddock and grandstand facilities for harness racing.

One of the first considerations in any administrative agreement would be the housing of present leases and the protection of vested interests.

The agricultural society will make its proposal for administration of the fairgrounds at the next meeting of the exhibition park planning committee on Dec. 8.

Water Area Meeting Suggested for Nov. 17

Nov. 17 has been suggested by Ontario Water Resources Commission chairman D. J. Collins as a tentative date for an organizational meeting for the Belleville - Trenton water area board.

The Quinte water area was designated early in August this year following a public hearing in July to determine whether it was in the public interest to define an area for water service.

Plans are to pipe water from Lake Ontario to serve the immediate Quinte area. At the time the water area was designated, Belleville was directed to change its plans for expansion of its water filtration plant and will go ahead with a program to increase water supplies until Lake Ontario water is available.

The OWRC chairman is now requesting that the municipalities concerned give consideration to the establishment of an area board to review future developments and recommend on policy and planning matters.

Mr. Collins is recommending that each council consider naming the elected head of the municipality and the elected head of the public utilities commission to an advisory board.

Mr. Collins strongly recommended the establishment of a water area board "since it is important that area planning of adequate water services be guided by local representatives. . .

"It is the wish of this commission that the water supply program for the Belleville-Trenton area be successful in meeting the present and future demands of the people in the area."

David Frederick Fisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fisher, 42 North Front Street received his Bachelor of Arts degree at ceremonies held at Carleton University, Ottawa on Fri. Nov. 6. Mr. Fisher who is a graduate of Quinte Secondary School is now principal of Bath Public School.

School Trustees Reluctant To Extend Computer Work

Extension of computer services for Hastings county board of education was deferred by trustees Monday as they hesitated to spend the $4,300 necessary to do the job.

Administration requested permission from trustees to put the payroll and personnel systems on the ACT computer now handling all the board's business administration transactions.

Administration is trying to progress to an entirely data-based system of handling all financial affairs, and putting payroll and personnel on the computer was the second step in that direction.

But trustees balked when they found that the resulting greater speed and efficiency would cost them $4,300 more annually, with no resulting reduction in payroll staff.

Payroll is now handled by an ITM computer in Kingston but it is geared to industrial use, and is not flexible enough to do educational work; business administrator Kenneth Wormald told the board.

As a result, all night school and supply teachers' salaries must be calculated manually.

The board employs about 1,300 people, and the payroll is now handled by six people at an annual cost of $7,000 trustees were told.

Mr. Wormald could not promise a saving on payroll staff salaries if the board decided to buy the extra computer services. He suggested the staff would assume additional duties.

Nelson McKibbon remarked that the payroll staff must be reduced by introduction of a computerized payroll system. Otherwise, the move is not efficient and cannot be justified.

The board finally decided to refer the matter to its business administration committee for study.

Intruders A Drag To Many

NEW YORK (AP) — The Intruders, NBC's Tuesday night World Premiere feature, was a sort of western tossed salad that combined horses, fists, a fast-gun lawman shoved by fear and post-American Civil War discrimination against Indians and half-breeds.

The story, set in Madedia, Minn., had the ring of authenticity with one of the monsters the Jesse James-Cole Younger gang roving the countryside. The central figure was Sam Garrison, a sheriff who once was Billy the Kid's nemesis but had lost his nerve.

Lest this be too little for a two-hour story, there was also a brooding young half - Indian, Billy Pye, who was Garrison's deputy, raging at the white man's treatment of his mother's race.

Despite all this, The Intruders crawled along like an overloaded stage coach until about the last half hour. Then came the big shootout between the outlaws and the townfolk, followed by Garrison's show-down with a young hot-head who wanted his badge.

Don Murray played Garrison as if he were an elderly sleepwalker. John Saxon was properly lumpenuous as the Indian.

A few hours after word of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's death was received, NBC opened its early morning Today Show with a film-clip obituary and some reminiscing about the general's Second World War years by David Schoenbrun, former correspondent in Paris.

CBS reorganized its Tuesday night 60 Minutes to include a discussion of de Gaulle by a former U.S. ambassador to France, Charles Bohlen and a former commander of Allied forces in Europe, Gen. Lauris Norstad.

There will be live coverage of the former French president's funeral and memorial services, via satellite from Paris, starting at 4:45 a.m. EST Thursday.

CBS plans to replace Ted Mack and the Original Amateur Hour with the Animal World series when the football season frees that Sunday afternoon spot.

Scottish Singer — CJBQ Personality

Gordon Tocher of Smithfield, an employee of Allied Chemical of Belleville, rounds out the "All-Canadian Star Variety Show" with CJBQ personality Phil Flagler as master of ceremonies. Mr. Tocher, a native of Scotland, began his singing career a year ago when he won on the Ted Mack Talent Show during Belleville Week. In full Scottish regalia, Mr. Tocher has entertained locally and in Toronto with his rich baritone voice, an asset he began developing at an early age. Phil Flagler, sought after on many occasions by clubs and organizations desiring a master of ceremonies, will handle the show on Nov. 14 at the BCI auditorium. Mr. Flagler is heard daily on CJBQ Radio with his afternoon Farm Show. The variety show, sponsored by the Quinte Exhibition Parade Committee, will provide funds for this year's Quinte Santa Claus parade, scheduled for Dec. 5. Tickets for the show, $2 each, are available from McKnight's Variety Store, Ed Thomas Variety, and members of the two parade committees.

Movie Stars on Midis

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Is the midi a flop?

Some fashion experts have detected a distinct lack of enthusiasm on the part of women for the midical skirt.

Yet many stylish women have embraced the midi as some thing new and exciting.

What about the Hollywood stars? I asked some of the most stylish women of films and television what they think of the midi.

Here are their replies:

Lucille Ball: "I don't like the midi. Even if I did like it, I wouldn't wear it on my television show. I play a secretary and I couldn't afford to change my wardrobe to follow fashion. . . ."

Doris Day: "Variety is where it's at. I personally love the midi, but you should wear what you can afford—and enjoy it."

Dyan Cannon: "I adore them. I feel very centaney in them, like I'm going to a party. And men seem to like the ones I wear. When they don't, I'll stop wearing them."

Nancy Wilson: "I think the midis make young girls look old and old girls look horrible!"

Janet Leigh: "I am going to wear midis, pants or long dress with one gaucho for the costume look. Most of the ladies in midis look like they are going to a costume party anyway."

Mitzi Gaynor: "Never have so many argued so much about so little. I'll stick with the mini."

Eva Gabor: "The midi covers a multitude of sins—but I'm no sinner."

Eva Gabor: "I'm a conscientious objector to the stupid long look. I call it Instant Old. Designers hate women. Why else would they devise a dress like the midi?"

Amendments Are Mowed Down In Emergency Powers Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — Amendments left, right and centre were defeated Tuesday as the Commons labored through a clause-by-clause study of the bill to replace the emergency police powers proclaimed by the government 27 days ago under the War Measures Act.

Some amendments were designed to define more precisely the terms of the bill, the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1978, and protect especially against any infringement on freedom of the press.

The debate reached its temperamental peak, however, with a demand by Conservative Jack Horner (Crowfoot) that the government "take off the wisps and permit a free vote on the death penalty for terrorist kidnappings, torture and murder.

The backbencher came in another crossfire of the wording of the French-languages version of the bill and questions about what groups will be outlawed by the legislation.

None of the challenges came close to endangering the majority backing of Justice Minister John Turner as he constantly rose to defend the bill. There were, nonetheless, four defections from the Liberal side—Antonio Thomas (Montreal Maisonneuve), Prosper Boulanger (Montreal Mercier), Fernand Leblanc (Laurier) and Jean Roy (Timmins). Only the next two hours talk on the death penalty amendment.

The amendment was put forward by Gerard Laprise (Creditiste-Abitibi) along with another to provide life imprisonment for sedition.

They were opposed by Mr. Turner on grounds that the crimes were already covered by the Criminal Code and that a partial moratorium on capital punishment does not expire until 1981.

To Mr. Horner, the minister's argument was a cowardly effort to slide the issue under the carpet. Challenging Mr. Turner to permit a free vote, the Prairie Conservative claimed that "maybe nine MPs out of 150 here tonight don't agree with the amendment."

"But everyone here tonight knows his constituents agree with it."

Mr. Boulanger said that although he voted in 1967 to abolish the death penalty except for the murder of policemen and prison guards while on duty, he would support the amendment to show Liberals could vote as they wished. He added that if a man can be hanged for treason under the Criminal Code, "in the present time under which we live today, a man guilty of sedition should also be punished with the ultimate justice."

Martial Asselin (PC—Charlevoix) termed the 1967 vote the biggest mistake of Parliament and protested that "the prime ministers and members of this House are not protected against murderers."

New Democrats Andrew Brewin (Toronto-Greenwood) and Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby) argued that the death penalty was not a deterrent to murder and never had been.

Brought to a vote, the amendment was defeated 72 to 27. Standing in the 264-seat House: Liberals 133, Conservatives 72, NDP 23, Creditiste 13, Independent 1, vacant 2.

Earlier in the day, the House voted 41 to 17 against an amendment by David Lewis (NDP—York South) to strike from the bill wording which he feared might inhibit freedom of the press.

The bill would make it illegal to convey statements "on behalf of or as a representative" of the outlawed Front de Libertation du Quebec.

Mr. Lewis argued the words "on behalf of" could continue to leave in question the position of journalists, publishers, printers, teachers, even student editors, who might report statements from the FLQ.

Fear of possible action since proclamation of the War Measures Act Oct. 16 has had an "inhibiting effect" on Quebec journalists who have received FLQ documents, the NDP deputy leader said.

On a point contradicted by Mr. Turner, he also maintained the RCMP has interfered with the publication of the FLQ manifesto by Montreal newspapers.

Support for the argument came from Conservative House Leader G. W. Baldwin, who said the wording would impose "indirect censorship" on reporters.

Mr. Turner, however, maintained that nothing is preventing Quebec newspapers from printing statements received from the FLQ. But, he added, a newspaper man "has an obligation, probably, to give it to the police first in order he does not put himself in a position where he is obstructing justice in terms of an existing provision of the Criminal Code."

The minister said the wording of the clause in question was designed to take in "anything that extends the seditious conspiracy."

To codify a distinction between what is fair reporting of the facts and what is advocacy of the FLQ would be impossible, he said. "That's what the courts are for."

Further concern about the meaning and scope of the bill was contained in amendments proposed by a young Quebec Liberal, Pierre de Bane (Matane).

Mr. de Bane, apparently under some pressure from within the government, withdrew some of his comments dealing with the French version of the bill which, he said, should be understandable to the people of Quebec.

On another amendment eliminating the provision about which groups might be outlawed by the bill, however, he held on to the end to vote all by himself.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Reader Tells Way To Avoid Suicide

Suicide is a depressing topic. But so is heart disease, cancer, disabling arthritis — or any other threat to the human being. Anything potentially helpful is worth printing. Here is a reader's reply to a suicide note which I printed recently which began, "I hate life. I wait for death."

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: This is for the man in New Jersey who is going to commit suicide after her children are taken care of. Maybe you are lying to yourself. You want to live, but you haven't the courage to do it.

You sit back and are ready to die. Why don't you get up on your two hind feet and fight? Go to another psychologist, or psychiatrist. If they cop out when they hear the word "suicide" walk out and go to another and yet another, until you find one who has the courage to help you find yourself. Such people do exist. I have found one here in California.

Go angry, get out, and exist — don't just sit there feeling sorry for yourself. Relatives can be wrong, and so can psychiatrists.

Don't let people who don't understand ruin your life while you sit by and while about it. I speak from experience. I have been there twice and am out of the depression — I hope, for good.

But if I should slide back again I would pull out all by over again. Like yourself, I wouldn't think of leaving six helpless children behind. When you're dead their burden will turn them into six miserable imitations of human beings. Nice going! You sign your letter as "Lonely, Forget It. Use that head bone, Lady, for something other — like living! Mrs. S.

Another note (in part) from Indianapolis: "Mrs. Nobody — please reconsider. Life is a great gift. True it doesn't always come in a gilded package, but we can rewrap it if we really want to. I was going to end my life with pills that cost me $8.00. A pretty cheap cop out, don't you think? Fight, there is hope. My prayers are with you. You might say one for me, too. — Mrs. F.

Comment: Hopefully, Mrs. Nobody is now Mrs. Somebody. Practically every large city has a suicide prevention center. Perhaps she has already asked for help.

I have one suggestion for such helpful agencies: that they become part of one national organization with one name easily remembered and available. For example, in case of fire I may now be called Lifeline and in another, Save-a-life.

What is a depressed out-of-towner to do when he needs help? Or an in-towner who hasn't heard the name of the agency? I doubt that severely depressed persons will take the time to call the information operator.

Perhaps still remains one of our great national problems.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I like coffee and tea. I drink only one cup of either tea or each every day. My friend tells me such a bad habit will be my undoing. Is it so bad? My question may seem trivial compared with the current cigarette, alcohol and drug problems, but I'd like to maintain top health. — Mrs. G.

Comment: I doubt that taking one cup of tea or coffee daily is a bad habit. No sense in eliminating either to maintain top health. I'll say that you do not suffer from immoderation in your present amount of tea and coffee.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I sleep 10 hours every night and am still very sleepy all day. I can't seem to stay awake. Vitamins don't help. — Mr. H.

Comment: Vitamins aren't a cure-all for every ailment. Have you been to your doctor? He will want to know if you suffer from hypoglycemia, narcolepsy, etc. Proper medication will keep you awake. Sleepiness can be as difficult to bear as sleeplessness.

Sidney J. Harris Asks About Famous Names

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Speaking of names, as I was yesterday, reminded me that many readers have requested another "word-quiz" column, which I haven't done for a long time. Perhaps one dealing with famous names might be interesting:

1. Who were Francois Marie Arouet, Jacques Anatole Thibault, Henri Beyle and Jean Baptiste Poquelin better known as?

2. Before he succeeded to the title, what name did Lord Byron use?

3. Living schoolchild knows that Lewis Carroll was really Charles Dodgson, and Mark Twain was Samuel Clemens, but what were their middle names?

4. What was George Orwell's real name?

5. Which three U.S. Presidents used their middle names instead of their first? And which U.S. Nobel Prize winner for Literature?

6. Under what nom de plume did Edna St. Vincent Millay write some of her early work?

7. What do the initials stand for in P. G. Wodehouse's name?

8. What was the name of the husband who was definitely not afraid of Virginia Woolf?

9. Under what pseudonyms were Jane Eyre and Wuthering Heights first published?

10 Who were Vladimir Ilyich Ulyanov and Joseph Dzhugashvili better known as?

11. What famous political figure took the name of the jailer in the prison he escaped from and used it the rest of his life?

12. What was Oscar Wilde's impressively full name?

13. What author took the pen-name meaning, "the letter one," and now has a city named after him?

Answers:

1. Voltaire, Anatole France, Stendhal, and Moliere.

2. George Gordon.

3. Ludwidge and Langhorne.

4. Eric Blair.

5. (Stephen) Crane (Thomas) Wood-row Wilson, and (John) Calvin Coolidge. (Sinclair) Lewis.

6. Nancy Boyd.

7. Pelham Grenville.

8. Leonard Woolf.

9. Currer, Ellis and Acton Bell.

10. Lenin and Stalin.

11. Trotsky.

12. Oscar Fingal O'Flaherty Wills Wilde.

13. Jonathan Swift, St. Anton Chekhov.

15. Maxim Gorki, whose real name was Aleksei Peshkov; the Russian city in which he was born, Nizhni Novgorod, was renamed Gorki in his honor.

Most Dropouts Later Receive Job Training

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A study completed earlier this year by R. G. Stennett, psychologist with the London board of education, indicates that most high school dropouts receive additional training after leaving school.

The study shows that 63 per cent of the dropouts canvassed received additional training compared to 46 per cent of students who graduated.

Income statistics show dropouts were making an average $78.78 when interviewed compared with only $78.36 for graduates, but the dropouts could have been out of school as long as 17 months. The graduates had been out of school only five months.

The study was made of students enrolled in Grade 9 in the London system in September, 1963, including dropouts who left school either in 1966 or 1968 and those who completed their courses graduating from Grade 12 in 1968.

Graduates studied showed that 197 per cent had held one job while only 59 per cent of the dropouts had one job. By comparison, only two per cent of graduates had had two or three job changes while 23 per cent of the dropouts had two or three changes.

Dr. Stennett draws six conclusions in his report, which he will present to the Ontario Educational Research Council in December. It is one of a series of studies designed to provide an over-all view of educational results in London's secondary schools.

The report shows that 18 per cent of the dropouts returned to school. Of the others receiving additional training, 23 per cent went to night school, 26 per cent attended special schools, 19 per cent received on-the-job training, and 32 per cent received other training.

Stanfield Concludes His Toronto Visit

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield wound up a four-day tour of Toronto Tuesday with question-and-answer sessions at local schools and a helicopter view of the city.

During Mr. Stanfield's tour of Oakwood Collegiate Institute a Grade 13 student got applause from his classmates when he told the Progressive Conservative leader that his party's opposition to invocation of the War Measures Act "wasn't very helpful."

Keith Tse, 18, said the PC questioning did not help the federal government to bring Canada together in a time of peril. Mr. Stanfield said later he was not surprised at the support the youth's views got.

"It reflects the mood that is across the country right now," he said. "Obviously it goes right into our high schools."

Slacks Win Approval

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — About 20 girls sent home from High School of Commerce on Monday for wearing slacks instead of dresses will be back in school today, wearing slacks if they want to.

The school's student council voted Tuesday to allow girls to wear slacks through the winter during a council session called by Lewis Cook, principal, to settle the issue.

Mr. Cook had sent the girls home Monday saying if they wished to return they would have to wear dresses.

"I didn't want to continue to send them home, because that's just what they want," Mr. Cook said.

The girls said they preferred slacks because they are warmer and more comfortable.

Infusion of Federal Funds Likely in Quebec

OTTAWA (CP) — Once the current difficulties in Quebec have settled, sources here say there is likely to be a heavy infusion of federal funds into the province to boost the economy and cut down unemployment.

In the light of recent developments, they say, this is the most logical step for the federal government to follow.

And it will be difficult for the opposition to criticize such spending.

Three debate began Oct. 16 on regulations under the Unemployment Act, and this replacement legislation, opposition spokesmen have repeatedly said that the problem of terrorism will not be solved until the basic economic issues are tackled.

David Lewis, deputy New Democrat leader, said it is the "frustration of the young, the despair of the poor and the hurt of the unemployed" that are causing the present difficulties in Quebec.

"The government must deal with these basic economic and social problems."

Other opposition spokesmen have made similar remarks.

Sources say the government, particularly Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand, is actively considering methods of pulling the Quebec economy with federal funds. Mr. Marchand has wide-ranging spending powers at his disposal.

One federal source said that with the current emphasis on Ottawa's presence in Quebec — now largely in the form of troops and police—it is exceedingly important that the emphasis also be felt in the form of economic and financial assistance.

In reply to questions in the Commons recently, Prime Minister Trudeau said there is only a limited amount that governments can do in the field of economic development and that it is largely a question of private investment.

But the sources say this limited amount could easily involve an expression of confidence—in the form of heavy federal investments. This, they say, could encourage private investors to follow suit.

The Atlantic provinces, where there are predictions of unusually high winter unemployment, would also likely be involved in any broad programs to increase jobs.

No major announcements are expected until "the dust settles," said one source. "But we'll certainly be doing something—and after what opposition members said in the last three weeks no one can accuse us of catering to Quebec."

De Gaulle Lies In Soil of France

Mighty Attend Austere Mass

PARIS (CP) — France said goodbye today to Charles de Gaulle.

In the magnificence of Notre Dame Cathedral, yet with the simplicity he ordained, world leaders joined thousands of Parisians at an austere mass concluded with the Magnificat.

De Gaulle's body was not at this Church of Our Lady, where the tall general once celebrated the liberation of Paris from the legions of Hitler. The body remained at the home village where he lived and died. And there, a few hours later, it was committed to the soil of France.

Great crowds had gathered at the village of Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises, but a simple burial in a country churchyard replaced the military pomp that de Gaulle had rejected for the final ritual.

Nonetheless scores of world leaders made the Notre Dame service the greatest such gathering since the funeral of Dwight D. Eisenhower 18 months ago. And the bells of cathedrals and churches all over France sounded a requiem.

Around the world, admirers of France's greatest leader since Napoleon called at French embassies and consulates to sign condolence books. Officials, diplomats and private citizens attended memorial services in many capitals.

In Paris, the monarchs and the princes, the presidents and the premiers sat on little red plush chairs before the altar of the 800-year-old cathedral for the requiem mass celebrated by the Archbishop of Paris.

De Gaulle's name was pronounced only four times in 45 minutes of prayer for his soul. There was no eulogy, no praising of taps, no symbolic catafalque.

This simplicity bowed to the strong-willed general's wishes, expressed in instructions he wrote in 1952.

About 8,000 people—2,000 of them invited guests—crowded into the Romanesque interior of the cathedral. The high vaulted ceiling and the mighty pillars holding up the glorious stone lace were brightly lit by television lights. The crowd pressed under the galleries, restrained by police, and prayed aloud as the mass was celebrated.

Thousands more filled the surrounding grey streets and the esplanade in front of the cathedral on the Ile de la Cite, in the middle of the Seine. More thousands lined the boulevards through which the official guests travelled to the cathedral.

De Gaulle's people also prayed for him in the simple village church of Colombey-les-Deux-Eglises, where he was to be buried, and 30,000 other towns and villages of France.

U.S. President Nixon, Soviet President Nikolai V. Podgorny, other heads of state and leaders from most of the nations of the world joined French officials in Notre Dame for the requiem mass that was the country's official farewell to de Gaulle.

External Affairs Mitchell Sharp represented Prime Minister Trudeau, and Francois Cartier, Quebec cultural affairs minister, flew in today to attend the memorial service.

Thousands of French men and women gathered for the afternoon burial service at Colombey, the little village in eastern France which de Gaulle chose for his home in 1938. The body lay in a simple wooden coffin in his home there, where the former French president died Monday night of a ruptured main artery.

Blast Kills Eight

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A dynamite explosion which gouged a crater 25 feet deep killed eight members of an oil company seismograph crew near here.

Investigating officers said explosives on a truck being used by the crew apparently were exploded Wednesday by sparks from a high-voltage electric line struck by a drilling tower mounted on the vehicle.

Dynamite is used by seismograph crews to make soundings for oil deposits.

Only one of the victims had been identified several hours after the explosion, at the Pan American Petroleum Corp.'s Bird Creek resting site in northeast Tulsa County.

He was David Ellis, 36, Tulsa, who had been employed by Pan American about five months.

The blast apparently occurred shortly before 7 p.m. and about seven were felt in a wide area. However, it was some time before the extent of the explosion was discovered.

A Tulsa County sheriff's officer said the first persons on the scene were members of a power company crew looking for a broken electrical line.

The truck, being used by the seismograph crew in drilling a test hole in search of oil, a drilling truck and a van also were ripped apart.

Dutch Sea Gives Up War Dead

OTTAWA (CP) — Locked for more than two decades in the water and mud of the Zuider Zee, the planes and bodies of Second World War airmen are gradually coming to light.

Draining of the water has resulted in discovery of 200 planes and 60 airmen's bodies so far, said Lt.-Col. Arie Pieter de Jong, chief of information for The Netherlands air force.

Along with these skeletal reminders of war there have been found still-armed bombs from the lethal paylods headed for Germany.

All are part of the 6,000 planes shot down over Holland during the war. They are being dug up partly to make the land fit for use.

Seventy per cent of the downed aircraft still pointed toward Germany with the bomb loads, though corroded by sea water, still lethal.

South African Delegation Is Under Fire

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — An unprecedented attempt to reject the credentials of the all-white delegation from South Africa was launched in the 127-country General Assembly Wednesday.

The assembly is to vote Friday on the move by 10 African countries, headed by Nigeria and Somalia.

The Africans said the object of the move was to deny approval of the credentials of representatives of a white-minority government that practises apartheid—racial separation—and does not represent the 15 million non-white majority of the country.

Inquest Resumes

MONTREAL (CP) — A coroner's inquest into the Oct. 17 terrorist strangling of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte resumes at 3:30 p.m. EST today in the heavily-guarded Quebec Provincial Police headquarters in east-central Montreal.

Surprise witness when the inquest opened last Saturday was Bernard Lortie, a 19-year-old student who said he and three other men abducted and held Mr. Laporte in a bungalow at nearby St. Hubert.

Lortie, wanted since Oct. 19 for conspiracy in kidnap Mr. Laporte, was arrested Nov. 6 at an apartment near the University of Montreal. Police said later a telephone number found at the St. Hubert bungalow helped them track down Lortie.

Lortie said he helped Paul Rose, 27, Jacques Rose, 23, and Francis Simard, 23, abduct the minister. He had heard of but didn't know Marc Carbonneau, 27, for whom a warrant also has been out since after the Laporte death.

Village Youth Carry Hero To His Grave

COLOMBEY - LES - DEUX — EGLISES (Reuter) — A hotelier's assistant, a farmhand, a cheesemaker and three university students were among the 10 young men chosen as pallbearers for Charles de Gaulle's funeral here today.

Aged between 19 and 22, the bearers are all native sons of Colombey—and the only representatives of their generation in this village of 394 people.

The Common Bond

Scene at Remembrance Day banquet in Belleville last night demonstrates the warmth and endurance of a bond between many Canadians. Even though they're years — and wars — apart John Keeble, 86, left and Anglican Archdeacon A. S. McConnell, have much in common. They're both veterans — John, of the Boer War 70 years ago, Archdeacon McConnell, of World War II. (For details of banquet, see Page 3.)

Number of Jobless Climbs But Rate of Increase Low

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of jobless in Canada rose last month to 413,000 from 398,000 in September, a smaller increase than usual in that month but up substantially from the unemployment count of 314,000 in October, 1969.

Statistics issued jointly today by the federal manpower department and Dominion Bureau of Statistics also show an increase in the number of Canadians with jobs to 7,593,000 in the middle of October from 7,366,000 a month earlier.

Because the increase in the number employed reversed the usual October trend, the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate fell for the first time this year to 6.8 per cent from 6.9 per cent in September.

But that percentage, watched by government authorities as the main guide to jobless patterns, was up from only 5.1 per cent in October, 1969.

The adjusted jobless rate is calculated as the percentage of the total labor force unemployed, with the normal seasonal ups and downs discounted to show the underlying trend. It has moved up steadily from 4.5 per cent last January. In Canada, most economists would regard a rate of three per cent or less as the target.

The rate was 4.8 per cent in June, 4.7 in July and August and 4.9 in September, the highest since early 1961.

In the regions, the adjusted jobless rate rose on the Prairies to 4.7 per cent from 3.1 in September, was unchanged at 8.2 in British Columbia and went down in Eastern Canada.

The rate dropped to 7.6 per cent from 8.4 in the Atlantic region, shifted slightly to 8.8 from 8.9 in Quebec and fell to 4.6 from 5.1 in Ontario.

The report says the explanation for a smaller-than-usual rise in October unemployment lies in small reductions in Ontario and the Atlantic provinces, where the numbers of jobless have increased at that time of year in the recent past.

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — The strike by 2,500 workers at the Northern Electric Co. has become a stalemate, with no conciliation t alks being held to solve the dispute which began Nov. 3. The workers, represented by Local 521 of the United Electrical Workers, have turned down a company proposal of a two-year contract with a seven-per-cent increase in the first year and a four-per-cent increase in the second.

Italy Jails Hijacker

ROME (AP) — Air piracy is not a crime in Italy, but an Italian court has given a five-year sentence to the U.S.-marine who hijacked a TWA jetliner from California to Rome a year ago.

Ralph Minichiello, 21, looked impassive Wednesday night as he was found guilty of kidnapping, assault, and bringing into Italy an "arm of war," the M-1 rifle with which he commandeered the Trans World Airlines craft.

Quebeckers Still Back PM's Act

OTTAWA (CP) — Letters from Quebec pouring into Prime Minister Trudeau's office are still overwhelmingly in favor of the government action of invoking the War Measures Act, a spokesman for the prime minister said Wednesday.

But some Quebec MPs report there is a slight change in mood in their constituencies recently, though they say there is little outright opposition to the government move.

The spokesman for the prime minister said letters from Quebec are coming in at about four or five times the normal rate of mail from that province. The peak was more than 1,000 letters in one day shortly after the act was invoked.

Support continues to be about 98 per cent, the spokesman said.

Naturalists to Mail Robarts 40,000 Tin Cans

TORONTO (CP) — The Federation of Ontario Naturalists is launching a campaign to put 40,000 tin cans on Premier John Robarts's doorstep.

The federation plans to mail 40,000 labels to members and friends and ask them to paste the labels—inscribed with an anti-pollution message—on tin cans and mail them to the premier.

The federation has checked with the post office and found that cans may be mailed as third-class parcel post. Bottles may not.

The object of the campaign is to pressure the province into introducing legislation to ban non-returnable bottles, of British Columbia has done.

RCMP Effectiveness Questioned by Hees

TRENTON (Staff) — Hon. George Hees (MP Prince Edward - Hastings) said last night that "the FLQ (Front de Liberation du Quebec) have probably infiltrated the armed forces and the police".

He added that they had perhaps even infiltrated "into positions where decisions are made".

Mr. Hees made the statements in an address at a Remembrance Day dinner sponsored by Branch 118, Canadian Legion here.

He blamed former minister of trade and commerce contended that the process of terrorism "in other countries leads him to this conclusion.

"People in Canada are realizing the importance of law and order," he said, largely because of the Quebec crisis in October.

"This country has been shaken to the roots" the local parliamentarian explained, adding that he supported Prime Minister Trudeau's invocation of the War Measures Act.

Mr. Hees said it was needed to give "the forces of justice the element of surprise," adding that "the government had no other alternative (than to use War Measures)".

His mentioned charges from some quarters that the War Measures Act spelled a denial of fundamental freedom" he said that, to himself, "the most important freedom is freedom from fear"—contending that the act had given security to this during the crisis.

"We are becoming a little worried now" he said, in view of the fact that the emergency measures have not led to the arrest of the parties directly responsible for the kidnappings of Pierre Laporte and James Cross.

The failure of authorities to mete out justice, he contended, is partly due to the "considerable underlying support for the terrorist organization" in Quebec.

Furthermore, he charged that the Royal Canadian Mounted Police are, in a sense responsible.

Mr. Hees said that Canadians have always felt the organization to be "above reproach" adding that he was now uncertain as to whether it uses "the most modern methods of surveillance and detection".

'Sweats' Song

Congregating on the stage in the Trenton Legion hall auditorium, the town's World War I veterans led their comrades from other wars in a sing-song of, yesterday's melodies. Hon. George Hees (MP Prince Edward-Hastings) joined the old warriors as they led those gathered for the annual Remembrance Day dinner in more than two hours of song.

Debt Owed to War Dead Trenton Gathering Told

TRENTON (Staff) — Civilian and military residents of the town gathered together here yesterday in la united tribute to Canada's war dead.

Crowds gathered along Dundas Street as the cross-town parade of 300 veterans and Canadian Forces from the local military establishment passed, making their way to the cenotaph in Centennial Park.

Members of Branch 118, Canadian Legion, active servicemen, sea and air cadets marched to the accompaniment of the CFB Trenton brass and reed band under the direction of bandmaster, Sgt. A. J. Van Lierop.

At the cenotaph, Rev. Carl M. Bandeschaar, Padre, Branch 118 of the Legion, told the assembly "there are many debts that cannot be repaid" — the one to Canada's fallen soldiers numbering among these.

"War is evil" he said, adding however, that those who died for their country died in goodness, a goodness symbolized by the crosses that stand on their graves.

Noise interrupted the solemn proceedings twice. During the minute of silent tribute a truck rumbled within yards of the Cenotaph as it made its way to the town dump.

A more stirring and appropriate sound followed swiftly, when a Canadian Forces jet thundered through the overcast skies above the bayside park and, in salute to open particular tribute.

During observances here, Mrs. H. Menzie, Silver Cross Mother, laid the wreath of the provincial government.

Mayor Duncan McDonald placed the wreath of the town of Trenton and Brig.-Gen. G. R. A. Coffin that of the Canadian Armed Forces.

Following formal observances at the cenotaph, Brig. General Coffin, chief of support services, Air Transport Command took the salute as the parade passed in review in front of the Municipal Offices.

'Dick Ellis Rink' Proposed Arena Name

Subject to formal approval by city council, the name of a former Belleville alderman and minor sports benefactor will be commemorated in the new $200,000 skating rink on Harder Drive.

A special subcommittee of council, with Alderman Hon. Jean Smith as chairman has recommended that the building be called the "Dick Ellis Rink".

The recommendation will go to council for consideration at its next meeting.

The committee decided against inviting suggested names for the rink from school students, the decision being that it should be named after a deceased resident who was prominent in the community.

Mr. Ellis served on city council in 1968 and '69, and for many years sponsored minor softball and hockey teams in the city.

The new rink is scheduled for completion next February.

Allore Has Floor Next Week

Suspended separate school commissioner Fr. R. Allore will meet with parents and ratepayers at a public meeting Nov. 17 in the lab side of the suspension story.

St. Michael's Auditorium has been rented for the meeting, beginning at 8 p.m.

Mr. Allore will give a speech on "educational responsibility for parents and citizens", followed by an account of the local management crisis.

Following his talk, the meeting will be thrown open for questions from the floor.

The meeting has been organized by the group of Belleville separate school ratepayers who have supported Mr. Allore over the suspension crisis and who have submitted briefs to the local board and to the department of education in Toronto.

No Inquest In Traffic Fatality

No inquest will be held into the death of a Belleville restaurant manager, victim of a fatal hit-run accident on the city's eastern limits last night.

Michael Constantinou, for 18 years manager of Pete's Lunch on East Dundas Street Belleville, died in Belleville General Hospital, was instantly killed in the mishap.

A passenger in his car, Randolph Holyoak, 61, 264 East Dundas Street, and the driver of the other car, John Albert Fair, 20, RR 4, Belleville, were treated for minor injuries and released.

The accident occurred just before midnight on the east-bound lanes of the four-lane stretch of Highway 2 just outside the city.

Today Coroner W. F. Bates said an inquest into the mishap would not be necessary.

Dr. Bates said both cars were examined at the time of the mishap.

Mr. Constantinou arrived in Belleville 18 years ago from Cyprus where he was born, son of Helen and the late Kostas Constantinou.

He was a member of the Greek Orthodox Church.

Besides his mother, he is survived by four brothers Andreas and Antonio, in Britain, and Stavros and Christos in Cyprus.

Resting at the John R Bush Funeral Home, Funeral service will be held Saturday at 2.30 p.m. with interment in Belleville Cemetery.

MASON — In ever loving memory of a dear husband and father, Clarence Mason, who passed away November 12, 1969.
Ago today, and I am contented,
Of a day my heart was contented,
Of a day my heart was contented,
Sadly missed by Ruth, Barbara and Sandy.

JOYCE — In loving memory of a dear wife, Mary Joyce, who died November 12, 1969.
Dearest Mary, you passed away
Just one year ago today,
God knew best, He took you home,
His will be done, we have to obey,
In the silence of the night we kneel,
Your memory is our keepsake,
With God we leave you there,
We will meet our loved one there,
Lovingly remembered by Ken.

A larger than usual turnout marked yesterday's Remembrance Day celebration for Thurlow Township held in the township hall and cenotaph in Consecon.

The service was conducted by Rev. John Morrison of Canniffton Pentecost Church, assisted by Rev. Lester Bigby of Trinity United Church, Roslin.

The scripture was read by Thurlow reeve Horace Casey and deputy reeve Borden Forsythe read the names.

The provincial wreath was laid by Mrs. Lena Akey and Mr. Casey laid the township wreath. Other wreaths were laid by Mrs. Fred Hanser, Vincent Mahar and James Stone.

The last post was played by Manley Mitchell.

House-call Rates Raised by PUC

Belleville Public Utilities Commission announced Tuesday that effective Jan. 1, 1977, rates for connection and disconnection of electrical power and water pipe thawing charges would be increased.

Reconnection of power after regular hours and connection of power for new customers after hours will be increased from $1 to $15.

Disconnection and connection during working hours will be increased from $1 to $3.

Ernest L. Burnham, manager of the PUC explained that the regular charges needed to be increased because of rising costs and increased wages. The overtime charge, while increased 1500 per cent, was still slightly short of the wages demanded under union agreement for after - hours work.

The contract demands a minimum of three hours in wages when a serviceman is called out.

He explained that these charges would only go into effect "if the customer insists in having work done after hours.

"It's better to charge the customer that gets the work done than have it burdened on the system."

Charges for thawing frozen pipes have been increased from $8 per hour to $12 during working hours with the minimum charge increased from $4 to $6. After working hours charges will be $17 per hour, up $5.

Mr. Burnham noted that the PUC did not raise rates last year when the commission wages were increased. However, with new union agreements coming into effect Jan. 1, the increased rates are necessary.

Trainer Appointed

Mrs. Pat Matthews of Kingston has been appointed trainer for obedience classes sponsored by the Belleville and District Kennel Club, it was announced today.

Mrs. Matthews, has been an obedience show judge since 1963 and an obedience trainer since 1962. She also breeds standard poodles and German shepherds.

The local obedience classes are being held every Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Humane Society Shelter, west of Belleville.

Varied Ballet Fare Delights Small Crowd

How many Bellevillians are growing more depressed — and starving to show it — at rain-sodden day follows rain-sodden day.

They should have been at Centennial Secondary School last night.

Inside the school's auditorium, the atmosphere was not only dry, warm and cozy. It was also glittering, exciting, moving.

The reason: Les Grand Ballets Canadiens.

The renowned Quebec ballet company was treating the city to its graceful presence for the first time.

Today, if there are Bellevillians moving with a jauntier stride through their rain-soaked city, it's likely because they participated in that experience.

The same poor weather is believed the major reason that kept attendance at last nights performance below capacity level.

But this didn't affect the warmth of the reception given the company as the audience repeatedly demonstrated its enthusiasm for the artistry of the company.

The production did not stimulate an overall emotional reaction so much as a series of experience.

The contrasts were occasioned by the program's style — a presentation of four separate works instead of a single full-length performance.

The arrangement was highly satisfactory.

The program permitted the audience — introduced to Les Grand Ballets for the first time — to immediately appreciate the artistic range and disciplined versatility of the famed company.

Styles starkly modern contrasted with classical opulence.

Each presentation worked its own select attraction on the audience.

One work was even a capsule definition of this confrontation of style — Hip and Straight.

The work was a meeting ground of styles and creativity, a composite of artistic styles, confronting but never blending the identities of classical and modern dance. Working to effective advantage was its percussion score — written specially for the work by Paul Duplessis.

Choreography in Hip and Straight was by the company's associate artistic director Fernand Nault — whose work was again on display in Symphony of Psalms, a liturgical essay set by Stravinsky.

Nault's choreography called for dancers in rehearsal clothes against a stark background — an effect which heightened the personal impact of the work.

The image of man alone and in prayer was one of the evening's most moving moments.

In sharp contrast was the effervescent Graduation Ball — the comedy masterpiece in classical style set to a delicious selection of Strauss melodies

The other work was Variations for Four — a pas de quatre choreographed in 1957 by Dolin.

A bravura presentation, it is now being danced for the first time by Les Grand Ballets.

Last night's production was sponsored by Allied Chemical, one of Belleville's more - recently - acquired industries.

Military Role Praised At Veterans' Dinner

Gen. Charles de Gaulle laid the foundations of a separated Canada, Belleville war veterans were told last night.

Because of it the former French president died "with a stain on his great name," Archdeacon D. McConnell, wartime padre and now-retired Belleville Anglican pastor, told veterans at their Remembrance Day banquet at Ben Hoecker Auditorium.

Gen. de Gaulle, said the clergyman, despite many achievements, failed "when he came here — and laid the foundations of a separated Canada.

"And it's very hard to forgive a great man like that," said Archdeacon McConnell.

Special t o m , specifically more recent events in Quebec, was a theme repeatedly reflected by speakers at the banquet.

Lee Grills, MP Hastings, noted the role of troops in the emergency to caution against any cuts in the armed forces.

"With the recent events, I think the need of the armed forces has been brought to our attention. Instead of probably abandoning some of our armed forces we should be increasing them," he said.

Lt. Col. F. R. Allen, commanding officer, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, said all Canada's available ground troops were now committed to active duties.

"If we have to provide something further, where are we going to get those troops? I suggest we listen to what Lee Grills said tonight," he said.

The colonel said the Quebec emergency had made Canadians aware of the need for "public recognition and public support" of the armed forces.

It also had given the services a "new sense of purpose," he said.

"Today our troops can say to Canada: Once again you needed us — once again we were ready."

Archdeacon McConnell called the recent terrorism in Quebec "one of the most brutal moments" in Canada's history.

But, he added, "maybe in a sense we've become too smug in our rich and peaceful security. Maybe it took something brutal to bring us to our senses."

But unity, he indicated, must begin at home.

"Unless we have unity in our own family, in our own community, there is the hope of getting unity in Canada!"

Archdeacon McConnell also was critical of the federal government for opening armories to transient youth.

He said he resented the armories being turned into "pads and feeding stations" for those dirty, lazy, immoral, leftist hippies."

Youth too often compares the wars fought by Canada's veterans with the Vietnam conflict," he said.

"When we put on our heroes and our medals . . . they call us warmongers," said the archdeacon. "I wonder have they tried to find out why we went to war?"

Archdeacon McConnell retired last year as pastor of St. Thomas' Church in Belleville, and now lives at Oxford Mills, near Kemptville. While in Belleville he annually delivered the Remembrance Day address at the cenotaph service.

Viewpoints Differ

The great publishing palaver over sale of Ryerson Press to a United States firm continues. To put this subject in better perspective, we commend readers to a letter published recently in The Globe and Mail and which we reprint on this page today.

The furore reminds us of differing historical viewpoints in Canada and the United States. The average American is not likely to be poorly informed about Canada and the same may be true of Canadians vis-a-vis the United States. But informed or not, Canadians and Americans have their own bias on events and it should come as no surprise that historical and contemporary perspectives of the two nations are at odds. Take an event or series of events like the War of 1812 between the Americans and the then fledgling colonial forces of pre-Confederation Canada. In short, between the Americans and the British. Neither side could really claim victory in this affair, but depending on which historical account you read both sides scored successes here and there.

Over at Sackets Harbor, N.Y., for example, the visitor can read plaques and study maps indicating that British naval vessels in those Lake Ontario waters west of Watertown had a bad time at the hands of U.S. men-of-war. Americans visiting Crysler Battlefield Park adjacent to Upper Canada Village, on the other hand, discover that their chaps were roughed up somewhat on this very ground more than 150 years ago.

And so it is to this day. Did Errol Flynn for instance, in Hollywood's version of things, liberate Burma from the Japanese — or was it the British who performed the honors? And what about the differences and rivalries of men like Eisenhower, Montgomery and Patton? The history of the war in Europe has as many differing versions as there were generals and indeed it does the public no harm to read as many accounts as they have time to get through. It is the same with school material, textbooks, whatever. All should be grist to the mill of the true scholar.

FLQ Link?

An Ontario provincial police officer in Westport, investigating the possibility of an abandoned car being linked to which we have seen, is quoted as saying it is not uncommon for stolen cars from Quebec to be abandoned in the area. It is a dubious distinction for such a quiet and attractive part of the world. The car, of French manufacture, was found in a farmer's field off the Bedford Mills Road. It does not seem possible, but could the suspects be holed up in some cottage or cottage around say Devil Lake? The OPP man does not think so, but he admits that the possibility of a FLQ link with the car cannot be overlooked.

Pressure of Events

"Trudeaumania" may still be alive and well in Canada, but it is doubtful if it will ever again surface in the form to which we have been accustomed. The acclaim the Prime Minister has enjoyed is now muted by the gravity of the events of past weeks, and we may long since have witnessed the last kiss upon some pretty cheek. The Prime Minister has aged, so too has the public. Because of what has happened in Quebec, Canadians will never be the same again. Ultimately things will improve and people will be able to relax, but Pierre Trudeau and his contemporaries will be still older, even more mature, by then.

Intrepid Group

Loyalist College's Outward Bound group continues its vigorous way. New Hampshire's Mount Washington (6,200 feet) is its latest conquest, but we wonder if the climbers knew what they were taking on when they started. This is one of the most treacherous climbs on the continent but if it is an annual event with the students, as stated, then they must have been aware of the wind, rain and fog which frequently sweeps the region. Sure enough, they got it on this climb too, with 80 mph winds that forced them to camp midway up the mountain. We are glad they made it, and happy too that such an intrepid group exists in the Quinte area.

'Pensioners Concerned' Plan Coast-to-Coast Tour

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — So why and how are Canada's roughly 1,700,000 old age pensioners — the figure is that of the pensioners list of National Health and Welfare — organizing?

The "why" comes in many shapes. Resentment, or at least questioning of what to so many thousands of worried senior citizens seems to be the precipitation of governments at all levels with the so-called "alienated" young, the drug cultists, the welfare professionals and other stridently vocal pressure groups.

It comes, too, in the form of concern that just possibly — at this point only very tentatively so — out of the federal Government's White Paper on Social Welfare could come a recommendation cutting off the old age pension for those above the still - to - be - drawn "poverty line."

The White Paper is still in the writing, but such a recommendation has been made "by many people and organizations" to the Senate Committee on Poverty, concedes its chairman, Senator David A. Croll. He, for one, does not support it, nor may the Government or Parliament when it gets down to the final and binding point of legislative decision.

Now as to the "how" of pensioners, until now the silent minority, organizing into a political force in Canada.

With Mrs. Cordiel Penfold, 64, as its president, and Reginald Watkins, 67, vice - president, the group calls itself Pensioners Concerned.

President Penfold lives at 37 Randolph Road, Toronto 17.

Currently Mrs. Penfold and Mr. Watkins are starting a Thunder Bay - Winnipeg - Humboldt - Brandon - Regina - Calgary - Red Deer - Edmonton-Penticton - Kelowna - Vancouver - Victoria cross - Canada tour.

Other "Pensioners Concerned" are covering 37 cities and when these speaking and organizational assignments are completed, teams will cover cities and towns in Quebec and the Atlantic Provinces.

The objective, to quote Mrs. Penfold: "Put organized pressure on municipal, provincial and federal governments to take immediate steps to relieve distress among more than 1,000,000 pensioners hurt by inflation and rising taxes."

(How best to do it: Write your MP, Health Minister John Munro and Prime Minister Trudeau — or stand by helplessly — and keep it short.)

Pensioners Concerned wants the federal Government to:

1. Increase income tax exemptions for retired people 65 years of age and over on fixed incomes to $2,000 for single persons and $4,000 for couples.

2. Provide either a negative income tax or supplement to the Old Age Security payment to bring incomes of pensioners to a minimum $3,000 for single and $4,800 for married people.

3. Protect pensioners with an escalator clause in benefits geared to the cost - of - living.

4. Exempt pensioners from whatever capital gains tax comes out of Finance Minister Benson's White Paper.

Of the provincial governments Pensioners Concerned requests:

1. Provision of all health services free to those whose incomes are below $3,000 single, or $4,800 married.

2. Reduce health service costs to the average of group insurance plans in force before Medicare for those whose incomes are above the $3,000 and $4,800 single and married minimums.

3. Extend all health service coverage to all items covered in group plans, including drugs, vaccines, surgery and care in government - approved care homes.

From municipalities Pensioners Concerned asks only one thing:

Exemption, arranged if necessary with the provinces, from education taxes on their owned homes and rented accommodation.

That is the package.

Now, a few more pertinent points:

The Primate's World Relief Fund of the Anglican Church has given $5,000 for the organizational drive.

The pensioners, politically non-partisan and religiously non-denominational, are making moral, and if possible, financial support, too, from the Church of Canada, the Canadian Jewish Foundation, the Mennonite Church and the Roman Catholic Church.

The leaders of Pensioners Concerned already have had preliminary meetings with Health Minister Munro and Finance Minister Benson.

Neither member of the federal Cabinet has as much as hinted that any of the requests are not well justified.

If Mrs. Cordiel Penfold enters your way, and she may, she's a pensioner, talk to her.

She will tell you as she is telling her audiences that the aim of the organization is hoping to do it by campaign is "to get senior citizens out of the 'fixed income' economic discard and back into the human race."

Are the pensioners using old age as a club to beat governments into giving them preferred treatment?

"Dammit," snaps Mrs. Penfold, "we can not help our age any more than can the young."

Essentially what the pensioners are doing is only what Ontario Social and Family Services Minister John Yaremko, Thunder Bay, instructed them to do: "Organize as do socially-active persons and groups who control elections."

Best advice to reach with no postage required, your MP, Health Minister Munro and Prime Minister Trudeau: House of Commons, Ottawa."

But remember, keep it short, and very much to the point.

"The fact that you're completely happy with your job, your wife, the White Paper and the Throne Speech indicates an extreme reluctance to face reality!"

Dr. Potter's Efforts

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

For the sole unselfish purpose of aiding others, few of us would take a stand which we knew would deny us a much desired appointment and the prestige and earning that go with it.

We have such a man in our midst. He went into provincial politics with the avowed intention of attempting to improve the lot of the aged of Ontario. He soon headed the Heakil Committee in the legislature and topped the list of candidates being considered to succeed the incumbent Minister of Health. To attain the post, he obviously had to agree to abandon the programs he was so ardently promoting. When Dr. R. T. (Dick) Potter decided not to forsake the aged not only did it cost him a Cabinet post-but also the chairmanship of the Health Committee? Regardless, he still fights the cause of the aged and has no intention of doing otherwise.

The people of Ontario are deeply indebted to Dr. Potter for all his efforts and sacrifices on their behalf. The way the local populace could give him a small bit of recognition is to name him "Man of the Year" for the years 1970 and 1971.

It is suggested that those who agree should write the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and sponsor him.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

November 12, 1950

Sheila Carrie, Grade 8 pupil of S.S. No. 4 Tyendinaga, was the winner of the South Hastings Educational Association public speaking contest held in Queen Alexandra public school auditorium.

"Nobby" Jones, Bridge St. tobacconist, is dressing people in his window today with a framed front page from the old Daily Intelligencer. Appropriate enough, the page is dated Nov. 11, 1918. At the top of the page, in type the size of which you haven't seen since that time (it stands about 4" high), it says "The War Is Over". In all, there are five headlines on the extra edition, with the next four reading "Germany Has Surrendered", "Complete Victory For The Allies", "Armistice Terms Accepted By Germany", and "Unconditional Surrender The Result". The page itself is a piece of history proclaiming the end of a four-year war that everyone thought was the battle to end all battles.

30 YEARS AGO

November 12, 1940

Seeing a party of strangers walking in the Belleville cemetery grounds Superintendent Arthur Thomas approached them and inquired if there was anything he could do to help them. He was informed that they had entered in the cemetery and to eat their lunch if that were allowable. An interesting conversation followed, from which the superintendent learned that the visitors were no other than the Hon. Herbert Bruce, of Toronto, former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario and now member of the Dominion parliament for Parkdale (Toronto). Dr. Bruce was accompanied by Mrs. Bruce and their two war guests from France. The party was on its way to Ottawa for the session of the Commons. The visitors visited the fine appearance of the cemetery grounds.

40 YEARS AGO

November 12, 1930

It is believed that just about the meanest man in Belleville is around. When it came time to count up the receipts after Poppy Day, in one of the boxes was found two or three pearl buttons, just about the size and shape of a 25 cent piece. It is quite apparent that this openhanded spendthrift did not lose much sleep over his action in the Great War or didn't put up with four years of horror fighting for his home and country. It would be interesting to know just what it was that appealed to his country's defenders to such an extent.

50 YEARS AGO

November 12, 1920

Members of the recently organized Country Club have been negotiating with various available sites along the shores of the Bay of Quinte for the erection of a club house and the laying out of golf links. It is expected a site will be decided upon shortly.

Mrs. G. H. Harris and son Reginald, have returned to Hamilton after visiting friends here.

William Carnew, County Crown Attorney, is attending court in Deseronto.

Publishing Executive Blasts 'Narrow Nationalism'

Canadian Content and Staff Preserved by U.K. Firm

Letter to The Globe and Mail

As a not too long retired president of one of Canada's largest textbook publishers, British owned, I write to try to infuse some reasonable perspective into the present wildly inaccurate, wholly-motivated, and patently nationalistic arguments about foreign dominated publishers foisting their foreign points of view upon Canadian children.

When I joined my firm it was a small British-owned branch of the parent company (located in London, England) just established in Toronto. Even then there were signs of a policy of publishing Canadian books. When I joined the firm there were a few Canadian authors writing both general and school books for the firm, some of whose names are now household words in the world of creative writing and in education. The whole thrust of the firm during the 37 years with them was toward Canadian publishing. When I left over 90 per cent of the total turnover of the firm was in Canadian written, Canadian manufactured, and Canadian distributed textbooks. These Canadian authors were the recipients of the very substantial royalties these firm earned.

I have been long enough in the business to know that the policies of British-owned and American - owned publishing companies in this country — with perhaps a few exceptions — have been modelled upon the same Canadian-books-first policy. During all the time I was with my firm I never had any direction or objection against any of the Canadian school books we published, nor any interference with the publishing policies. These were left to the Canadian directors or managers, as they are today in nearly all instances.

It is therefore simply not true to say that our children are dominated by American-originated textbooks. By far the largest number of textbooks used in elementary and high schools across the country are Canadian. Circular 14 of the Ontario Department of Education contains a long list of by-no-means Canadian originated and Canadian written school material. Many of these books are used in provinces other than Ontario.

It is true that American firms originate expensive research projects in the United States in the fields of mathematics and science particularly, and at the cost of millions of dollars, and it would be foolish of Canadian educators to ignore the progressive research that such American originated projects contain. In many cases Canadian adaptations of these books are made by Canadian educationists, and Canadian editions, printed and distributed here by the U.S. (or sometimes British) owned subsidiaries. In such cases Canadian children benefit from the educational research initiated by both countries, and which we seem unable ourselves to afford. For example very good books in a number of subject areas were researched by the Nuffield Foundation in England and Canadian adaptions of these series are being used in some of the provinces.

It is agents provocateurs like Tim Reid, whose mail blisters him but[illegible] no steam, who indulge in large generalizations that are obviously designed to become political footballs but contain only half-truths.

It is quite true that both American and British capital is behind the ownership of the majority of textbook - publishing firms operating in Canada. But let us be quite clear about one thing — the direction of the publishing program, and specifically if the Canadian publishing program, is in the hands of the Canadian directors and management, not the absentee investors of American and British shareholders, which is what an investor, no matter where he invests his money, nor in what country, expects. But in the vast majority of cases, the knowledge the Canadian directors and managers also share in the profits and the Canadian expert staff get good jobs and excellent remuneration for their efforts; and the cause of education benefits from the creative efforts of writers, teachers, illustrators and manufacturers — all Canadian. Canadian children benefit from the fruits of British and American and foreign sponsored research, as well as from our own.

What kind of narrow nationalism are we envisaging in this country? Do we think we can keep everything we think and do free from the contamination of American and British free enterprise? There is nothing worse than an ingrown economy, run by ingrown politicians, "little Canadians" whose real measure certainly ought to be suspect.

More and more the world has to move toward an internationalist economy, and this is especially true of the book-publishing business. And many feed on, and welcome, the ideas of other countries — whether they be in the field of general literature, or of education.

C. J. Eustace,
Willowdale.

400 Dinners Coming Up

Mrs. Dorothy Rashotte, convener, assisted by Mrs. Mamie Spencer, yesterday supervised preparation of 265 pounds of roast beef for the Remembrance Day banquet for veterans last night at Ben Bleecker Auditorium. About 40 members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Legion cooked the dinner — an annual exercise in mass catering.

Legion Auxiliary Cooks for 400

Cooking on a grand scale is becoming an annual routine for members of the women's auxiliaries of veterans' organizations here.

Yesterday, the Ladies Auxiliary of Branch 99 of the Canadian Legion here prepared a roast beef dinner for 400 people at the Remembrance Day Banquet in Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

The food preparation was an all - day affair, involving about 40 women, three field kitchens borrowed from the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, three propane burners, and the kitchen at the auditorium.

Mrs. Dorothy Rashotte was convener for the banquet, and ordered supplies on a grand scale — 200 pounds of potatoes, 265 pounds of beef, one gallon of horseradish, three cases of canned peas and carrots.

Although items such as the roast beef and the apple pies for dessert were baked beforehand, salads, vegetables, potatoes and gravy had to be prepared at the auditorium. Five big soup pots of gravy were cooked during the afternoon.

Cooking for the banquet alternates each year between the Legion auxiliary and the women's auxiliary of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans.

Last year the women cooked for 350 people, but this year the number rose to 400.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were up sharply in light trading Wednesday as the Toronto stock market posted its best one-day advance in more than a month.

On index, industrials gained 1.27 to 164.65, golds 6.74 to 181.62 and western oils .11 to 194.42. Base metals were down .38 to 91.20.

The advance in industrials was the largest since Oct. 5.

Canada's central bank reduced its bank rate Tuesday to 6 per cent from 6½ per cent, a move generally interpreted to mean monetary conditions are easing.

The reduction followed a cut in the United States Federal Reserve Board's discount rate to 5% per cent from 6 per cent.

Another factor in the advance, say analysts, was an announcement Wednesday by General Motors and The United Auto Workers in Detroit that agreement had been reached on a new contract.

Volume at Toronto was 1.75 million shares, compared with 1.72 million Tuesday.

Gains outnumbered losses 257 to 154 with 294 issues unchanged.

FASHIONS OF TWEED — The softly-tailored three-piece suit was designed by Michel Robichaud for Ankie Sanft of Montreal. Made of grey wool tweed, it features the long-waisted short, balanced by a longer jacket and matching waistcoat. The midi coat by Jacob Crowley of Winnipeg is also in tweed, trimmed with Norwegian blue fox. Both fashions carry the Fashion Canada tag and hefty price tags — the suit is $250 and the coat $160. Successful Living

Canada Fitness Award Necessitates Exercise

By DORIS CLARK

The future belongs to those vigorous enough to live it — and shape it!

Pisto believed this when he wrote that a mathematician or anyone else whose thoughts are much absorbed in intellectual pursuits must allow his body to have due exercise and practise gymnastics.

This great teacher told his classes that there was probably very, very little danger of overthinking, but there might be a vast degree of damage to the body by over-sitting.

In this day of automation, we could easily slide into the "slops of softness".

The Canada Fitness award will be a healthy means of alerting youth to the importance of fitness — a state in which they will function most effectively while at home, work and play. Canada's Health and Welfare.

You will be hearing more about this imaginative program. Read about it, give it your support on behalf of our youth — and Canada's future.

Dear Doris: I will be 14 in three weeks; I am just about fully mature and have two problems.

(1) If you are always talking with boys and going places with them, are you a girl? Is there anything wrong with it?

(2) I want to go with the girls the places they go, like to the school.

There are quite a few boys there, and one time my mother went by and saw them all. I now have to be at 8 p.m. because I am always over there.

What am I supposed to do? Sit around the house while my girl friends are having fun? They think I am a little kid. (I like some boys over there, especially one.) — Not a Hood

Dear Not A: (1) Do you really mean always? If you do, I can understand people getting that impression.

(2) Standing around in a school yard all evening talking to the boys is hardly my idea of a regular full-time evening occupation.

Far better to have your fun with the boys and girls at school, and in sports or school club activities. You won't be a little kid all your life, and meanwhile you won't be risking the mistake of looking cheap. You could get out of your depth pretty easily in the gathering dusk of the schoolyard. Better be glad your parents are setting some limits for you right now.

Dear Doris: At 44, I have developed a large brownish patch beginning on my jaw bone and extending down on my neck; also another larger one on the outside of my arm.

Is there a cream that I can put on these or are they signs of old age that are here to stay? — Patchy

Dear Patchy: Like magistrates, I'm not the culprit—more likely they are connected with internal conditions. They may turn up before or after childbirth or menopause; may disappear as gradually or as suddenly as they come.

Usually they are deep enough to resist ordinary bleaches; so the treatment is cover-up. Several cosmetic houses produce good creams for this.

P.S. I hate to mention it, but certain varieties do seem to flourish — and increase — with age!

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Sometimes I think you've forgotten I ever taught you any manners. I was so ashamed of the way you pushed through the door ahead of Aunt Mary. And you rushed to the table without waiting until the adults were seated."

Son: "I guess I forgot."

Simple everyday courtesies should be so much a habit that they will be practiced almost automatically, even during the awkward teen years.

Rylstone W.I.

RYLSTONE — The first progressive euchre party of the season sponsored by the Rylstone Women's Institute was held in the W.I. hall at Rylstone on Saturday evening.

There were eight tables in play and a number of other games were supplied for the children.

Prize winners for cards were Mrs. Alfred Akins, Mrs. Annie Dutton and Arthur Raycraft and Henry Radcliffe and travelling prizes were won by Clarence Thomson and Jack Watson.

Refreshments were served by the conveners Mrs. Lindsay Anderson and Mrs. Jack Watson assisted by other members.

Male Office Worker Returns as A Woman

TORONTO (CP) — A 24-year-old Toronto office worker flew to New York as a man, but returned as a woman.

Nora Andrews—not her real name—underwent a four-hour operation in New York which changed her sex physically and legally.

"It's like being born again," said Nora, who has spent the last few months learning how to live as a woman.

"It's difficult and confusing to acquire a whole new set of habits, mannerisms and attitudes practically overnight.

"Sometimes I still find myself waiting for a woman to step out of an elevator, opening a door for a woman or getting up when a woman enters the room. I attract a lot of puzzled looks."

Nora practises every day how to walk and move like a woman.

"A man's walk is sloppy and unselfish," she said. "He just lumbers or lopes along, taking large steps. A woman has to walk daintily, taking small steps."

She also practises such manoeuvres as getting out of a chair or bending over to pick up something.

"Because of mini-skirts, you have to be careful."

She said she enjoys the close friendship she finds many women form with one another. But the one type of woman she dislikes is the kind often found in movements such as women's liberation.

"There's a great deal of difference between men and women and I won't support a movement which apparently feels that they're almost alike."

The man-woman relationship also has presented Nora with some problems.

"You discover a lot of things about men that you never realized before. Perhaps the most prominent is that a lot of men are constantly focused on sex—they have a one-track mind.

"Most women have learned over the years how to say no to a man without offending him. I'm working at it right now."

She said she would like to marry some day, but would tell the man about her history beforehand—because she can never have children.

Competition for the Composition of Music

Mrs. R. Bruce Craik, President of the Provincial Chapter of Ontario, IODE, has announced a competition for the composition of music.

An award of $250 is being offered to the winner of the competition in the composition of music for a group of songs in the song cycle for voice and piano, with performance time about ten (10) minutes. The music submitted must not have been previously published and all entries postmarked not later than February 15, 1971.

The competition is open to all residents of Ontario who are not over the age of 25.

Entries will be judged under the supervision of Dr. Godfrey Ridout, Associate Professor, Faculty of Music, University of Toronto.

The name of the winner will be announced at the time of the Annual Meeting of the Provincial Chapter of Ontario, IODE, in April, 1971.

Conditions governing the competition should be obtained before submitting manuscripts and are available from Provincial Chapter of Ontario, IODE, 168 Jackson St. West, Hamilton 10, Ontario.

The music competition is one of several special events being planned to commemorate the 50th anniversary year of the Chapter.

PARENTS WITHOUT PARTNERS

Belle-Trent Chapter of Parents without Partners met at Queen Alexandra School, Thursday evening for their regular meeting. There were nine prospective members out for this meeting, coming from as far away as Campbellford. It is hoped that a new chapter will be formed in Campbellford in the near future.

PWP will be entering a float in the Santa Claus Parade in all the surrounding communities.

An interesting and informative discussion was held after the regular business was disposed with. In the last three months there have been 28 new people out to the meetings. There were 60 who attended the Parent Child Thanksgiving dinner in Belleville and 28 at the Hallowe'en Dance and a small group turned out for Family Bowling Sunday night. This Saturday there will be a get-acquainted dance at the IOOF Hall in Trenton for new and prospective members.

This is an organization for one parent families, raising a family is a big job and even bigger if there is only one alone. Few people realize or think about what makes a person a single parent. 1. death 2. mental illness and 3. alcohol and 4. desertion.

Rumor has it that someone somewhere is giving us a lot of free publicity.

You see, when we built our portable cassette tape recorders, we made sure they'd come in handy.

So, in addition to the simple-to-work cassette tape recorder, we included an FM/AM radio.

In one model, we even put a true FM/stereophonic radio with separate speakers.

In all of them, we put fast forward and fast rewind.

And automatic recording level indicators. Capstan Drive for constant speed and better sound. And almost all of them we built to work on batteries or house current.

So walk into any Panasonic dealer and ask to see one of our many many cassette tape recorders.

Tell our dealer Russell Wingman sent you.

Ann Landers

Forcing A Smile Proves Disastrous

DEAR ANN LANDERS: All of my life people have come up to me and said dumb things like, "Who are you mad at?" "Why don't you smile?" "Cheer up!" This morning I was walking for the bus and a stranger walked up to me and said, "You look as if you've just lost your last friend." I was so annoyed I didn't even answer.

Unfortunately, I happen to have a face that doesn't smile easily. I've been aware of it since childhood. When I was a youngster the kids used to call me "Sour Puss." One day I decided to force myself to smile and it proved disastrous. I caught a glimpse of my reflection in a department store mirror and was horrified. I looked like the village idiot. That day I stopped forcing myself to smile.

So please, Ann, tell your readers not to embarrass people whose faces weren't made for smiling. It doesn't mean we are sad any more than a big grin means a person is happy. — OLD STONEY.

DEAR O.S.: You are right when you say a solemn face is not always the reflection of sadness. A smiling face can be a fooler, as well. Remember the words of a Chinese philosopher, "Americans must be an unhappy people. They laugh so much."

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My widowed mother is driving me up the wall. She will do anything in the world for me — except leave me alone. It is not unusual for Mom to telephone me ten times a day to ask what I am doing. I can't say, "I am not doing anything because you are bothering me." But it would be true.

Mother makes plans for my husband and me and our children. If I tell her we have other plans she feels hurt. My friends who have lost their mothers keep reminding me how lucky I am to have mine. I know I'm lucky but I can't help resenting the way she is suffocating me.

I've been living on nervelpills for two years. My doctor says I must eliminate from my life whatever is bothering me. I know he is right. But how does one eliminate a mother? — CARTHAGE, MO.

DEAR CARTHAGE: Show me a mother who telephones her daughter ten times a day and I will show you a daughter who has been unable to cut the umbilical cord. A mature woman would not tolerate it. You probably need counselling or therapy to unwind from this crippling relationship and I hope you get it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am an 18-year-old boy in love with a girl who is 17. My life has always been quite unhappy for several reasons. My parents fight a lot and I have trouble making friends. This girl is the bright spot of my whole world.

My girl and I are very honest with each other. She told me when we started to go together several months ago that she thought she was in love with a boy last year and she lost her virginity. I can understand how a girl can make a mistake like that and I don't hold it against her. The problem is I love this girl more than I can express in words and I want to show my feelings for her in a complete, physical way. She says "nothing doing." I love her, Ann, and I'd even marry her if I had to. It makes me mad that she went to bed with a rat who was only messing around, and she refuses to go to bed with me —a guy who is really sincere. Will you help me? — HONEST ABE.

DEAR ABE: Not on your tintype, Buster. You must be a new reader. I'm working the other side of the street.

Variations for Apple Pie Using Crazy Crust

By MARY MOORE

It is well known that writers have to have "sources" for their information. My "sources" are you. On Oct. 9 I asked you for the recipes for Crazy Crust and dozens of you sent it to me. Letters are still arriving. Thank you everybody.

I made an Apple Pie with the Crazy Crust recipe and discovered that it was not only crazy but easy and good.

APPLE PIE WITH CRAZY CRUST WITH VARIATIONS

Crust:

1 cup sifted but unsifted all-purpose flour or pastry flour
2 tbsps. sugar
1 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
¾ cup water
3-3 cup shortening (room temperature; not oil)
1 egg

FILLING:

One 19-oz. can apple pie filling (or cherry pie filling or mold mincemeat)
1 tbsp. lemon juice
½ tsp. cinnamon

Note: If you use cherry pie filling do not add lemon juice and cinnamon.

Into beater bowl measure all crust ingredients and beat on "low" for 1 min. then increase speed to "med." and beat 3 min., stopping machine and

Combine filling ingredients and carefully spoon over central portion of crust being careful not to disturb it. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. at centre of oven about 30-35 min. Be sure not to burn the bottom of the pie crust for it contains sugar and needs watching. We served our apple pie with old Cheddar cheese.

This "pie" is remarkably easy to make and recommended for a cooking lesson for children and teen-agers.

Eight Mayors Next Year

There will be no municipal elections in Belleville this year, but in 1971 the city will have no less than eight mayors — the one officially in office and seven "mayor of the week" appointees from city wards of Hastings.

This year each of the city's secondary schools — Belleville Collegiate, Moira, Quinte, Centennial and Nicholson Catholic College — all named a mayor of the week.

Next year Albert College and Loyalist College will also be included in the program.

Mayor J. Russell Scott Monday said he would be happy to co-operate with the Rotary-club-sponsored project.

Is Labor Too Rich To Participate?

Are community labor groups suffering from the very success of organized labor in securing its goal: Affluence?

The question, touched with irony, was posed the Quinte District Labor Council Monday as it sought to fill vacancies on its executive for 1970-71.

The lethargic response of the general attendance to holding office prompted criticism from some QDLC members.

But Berry Noakes, veteran labor organizer and Canadian Labor Congress district representative from Peterborough, explained it this way:

Once, people participated in labor movements at the threat of their jobs.

Later, such activities became respectable. Now, its members have worked their way "into a position of affluence."

"That very position of affluence is one of the reasons why you don't have people at the meetings anymore," he said.

The labor movement is a social movement and "works for other people," said Mr. Noakes. But, it's one of the "facts of life that people don't turn out for working meetings.

But the significance of labor councils should be impressed upon local union members which they represent.

That significance has been a parallel development of the economic progress achieved by the labor movement.

"I used to come into this community at one time when the labor council didn't mean that much," said Mr. Noakes, snapping his fingers. "This council is an important body in this community now."

Along with involvement in community issues, labor councils now also are being given more responsibility by organized labor, he said.

"The labor council is going to have a great deal more influence on your local union affairs than you even think (at the present time," he said.

Joseph Wilson, retiring QDLC treasurer, from Campbellford, said it was time for union members in Trenton and Belleville to participate more fully in the council's meetings.

"I can't see for one minute why these people don't attend these meetings," he said.

Robert Andrus was renamed QDLC president at last night's meeting.

Other officers: Reginald Loader, William Lafferty, vice - presidents; Daisy Laflure, recording secretary; Harvey Scott, sergeant - at - arms; Carl Wannamaker, Claude Westlake, James Wiseman, executive members.

The posts of treasurer and three other executive members will be filled later.

It's Just Routine For Old Hunter

More than 60 years of deer hunting hasn't dulled the enthusiasm for the annual trip to the woods for 74-year-old Wesley Reid of Carrollton.

And despite his age it is seldom that the Carrollton nimrod has come home without his share of venison.

This year was no exception. After only a part day in the woods at his former family homestead in Limerick township, the Carrollton hunter is again successful.

In the company of two grandsons, Mr. Reid left for the hunt early Tuesday morning and at 3 p.m. he was back in Carrollton with his deer.

The Carrollton hunter shot his first deer as a lad of 10, but after more than 60 years he is still eager for the hunt.

The three-man party got one deer yesterday and will return to the woods in an effort to make one apiece.

Board to Discuss Sale of Publisher

Sale of Ryerson Press to McGraw - Hill Co. Ltd. will be discussed at the next meeting of Hastings County board of education Nov. 30 in Trenton.

Trustee Mrs. Jean Hotchkison of Trenton introduced a notice of motion at the board meeting Monday night to put the subject on the agenda.

She asked that the board go on record as "deploring the sale of the Canadian-owned publishing company and the possible effect of the sale on textbook publication."

"It seems too bad that we will soon have no source of Canadian textbooks for our schools," she commented.

Although several Canadian book publishers remain in existence, Ryerson before its sale was believed to be the last of the wholly-Canadian-owned textbook publishers left.

Textbooks for Canadian schools are also published in Canada by Canadian subsidiaries of English and American firms.

Jack Fraser presents the two greatest names in Canadian fashion: "Shipley Shipley"

Each year our enthusiasm for Shipley design and value is redoubled. And, again, the Shipley collection for this fall presents what Jack Fraser feels is the most tasteful version of contemporary styling you'll find. As usual, Shipley fabrics and tailoring are equal to that normally found in garments costing much more.

On the left: the Shipley suit. Very big on small stripes this year. Lapels and shoulders gently widened, waist nicely narrowed, pants flatteringly flared. Beautifully tailored as is usual with Shipley.

— Double breasted: $105 — Single breasted: $100

On the right: the Shipley Blazer. Perhaps the most useful jacket you can buy. We're pushing the traditional navy blue, as well as dark bronze and gold. But available in many other colours and lots of stripes.

Even Government Treasuries Affected by Strike at GM

DETROIT (AP) — The strike by the United Auto Workers against General Motors appears to have made its most noticeable and immediate dent in the pocketbooks of the corporate giant and the organization which represents its labor force.

But each day the world's largest manufacturing concern is shut down the strike takes an increasing toll on workers, auto dealers, companies that supply goods and services to GM and government treasuries that rely on the firm for tax revenues.

UAW and GM reached tentative agreement on a new national contract Wednesday, but the company is not expected to be turning out cars at its normal clip until Dec. 1 at the earliest.

During the strike which began Sept. 15, the UAW used up all its $120 million strike fund on weekly subsistence payments to about 394,000 union members.

GM lost $77 million for the third quarter, which included the first two weeks of the strike. This was GM's first quarterly loss since 1946, and it is expected to show more red ink in the fourth quarter.

Steel companies, railways, trucking firms and airlines were among the industries hardest hit by the strike. State and local tax collectors also suffered. The strike became a political issue in Michigan, the state hardest hit by the shutdown.

When Republican Gov. William G. Milliken announced just before the Nov. 3 election which he won—that budget cuts would have to be made because of lax taxes traceable to the strike, his Democratic opponent charged the governor with poor planning.

Glenn Allen, Michigan's budget director, said the strike has cost the state about $25 million in reduced sales tax collections and about $25 million in increased welfare costs.

An Oct. 29 report to Milliken said the cities of Detroit, Flint, Grand Rapids, Pontiac, Saginaw, Lansing and Highland Park had lost in the first month of the strike a total of nearly $1.5 million in city income tax revenues.

Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp., which sells about 23 per cent of its output to auto firms, announced layoffs for 4,000 workers . . . Kelsey-Hayes of Detroit, a major supplier of auto wheels, laid off 1,200 at its Detroit firm . . . The F. J. Boutell Driveway Co. of Flint, Mich., laid off 600, including 250 truck drivers . . . The Grand Trunk Western Railroad laid off 800 workers as auto shipping orders fell off . . . Firestone Tire Co. laid off 1,500 or 16 per cent of its work force as the orders from Detroit fell . . . and so it went.

GM spokesmen said the firm was losing about $90 million a day in sales during the strike, while workers lost $14 million daily in wages and the 30,000 firms which supply GM with parts lost about $40 million a day in sales.

Women's Labor Head to Play It Tough

TORONTO (CP) — The woman in charge of enforcing the new Women's Equal Employment Opportunity Act in Ontario has indicated she will take a hard line toward employers seeking exemption from the act.

Dr. Lita-Rose Betcherman, director of the women's bureau for the provincial department of labor, has said exemptions will be granted on an individual basis only.

"Requests for exemptions on the ground that this job has always been done by a man will be looked at with a very cold eye," she told a chapter of the Canadian Industrial Editors' Association.

The act, which comes into force Dec. 1, prohibits discrimination in employment on the basis of sex or marital status and provides for maternity leave for women workers.

She said the bureau will grant exemptions from the act's provisions in individual cases if a certain woman is not strong enough to do a specific job or if a particular married women is not mobile enough for a job requiring travelling.

Dr. Betcherman said, however, that the assumption women are not physically strong enough for many industrial jobs is outdated. She said many women working in factories during the Second World War and were physically able to do their jobs.

She also said women no longer work just until they get married. About 40 per cent of the one million women workers in Ontario support themselves and their families.

Dorothy Martin, executive director of the Federation of Women Teachers' Associations, said in an interview she would resist any attempt to have teachers exempted from the act's maternity-leave provisions.

The act provides up to 12 weeks of maternity leave for women who work for an employer employing 25 or more persons.

Anson Taylor, director of education for the Metropolitan Toronto borough of Scarborough, said recently he would ask the Ontario Association of Education Officials to approve a resolution asking that teachers be exempted from the maternity-leave provisions.

Dr. Betcherman said an exemption would not be granted on the grounds that a certain school employs fewer than 25 teachers. The total number of teachers employed by the board would be the deciding factor.

Trudeau Plays Safe, Stays Home

LONDON (CP) — The Guardian says that considerations of security, resulting from the presence of radical Quebec students in Paris, ranked among the reasons why Prime Minister Trudeau decided against attending today's memorial service in the French capital for Charles de Gaulle.

"The Canadian prime minister will be represented by his foreign minister, Mitchell Sharp, which is correct enough if you assume that Trudeau is unable to leave Canada at this time of internal stress," the London newspaper says.

But The Guardian suggests that as was the case with de Gaulle, the Canadian leader "neither forgives nor forgets."

"And he cannot expunge those four words spoken on Canadian soil three years ago, 'vive le Quebec libre.'"

The slogan, shouted by the general during his visit to Montreal for Expo 67, was "anathema" to Trudeau, The Guardian continues in its personality column, Miscellany.

"The logic for Trudeau, then, is that it would be hypocrisy to mourn at Notre Dame," says the paper.

"But argument No. 2, presented by the RCMP, was the clincher.

"The Mounties warned the prime minister that the Sorbonne was alive with Quebec students, many of whom are Maoists or FLQ, or both.

"If they decided to abduct him, they might well get their man before the Mounties got a look-in.

"Pierre Elliott says hono."

Canadians Remember Armistice

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The sound of rifle shots and bugles echoed across Canada Wednesday as the country honored her dead in two world wars.

Government offices, many businesses and schools closed for the day, as services were held to commemorate the 119,000 Canadians killed.

At the Cenotaph in Ottawa about 10,000 looked on as Canadian leaders placed wreaths at the monument. Despite overcast skies, it was the largest crowd in recent years.

Gov.-Gen. Michener, Prime Minister Trudeau and Mrs. Mary Meech of North Sydney, N.S., placed wreaths at the foot of the war memorial in Confederation Square.

Mrs. Meech represented Canadian motherhood. She lost two sons in the Second World War.

Three teen-age girls, representing Canadian youth, participated in the Ottawa ceremony.

Other youths participated in less-traditional ways. Including a group of Ottawa students who listened to recorded music from the Woodstock Festival at they gathered on the University of Ottawa campus. The casually-dressed students said they were also there to remember the dead of Vietnam.

PREFERS MEN

HONOLULU (AP) — Johanna Wilcox, Hawaii's first registered woman voter, has never voted for a female candidate because, she says, "I think men are more level-headed." Mrs. Wilcox, 78, also opposes giving 18-year-olds voting privileges, believing they lack political maturity. She was the first of 18,000 women placed on Hawaii's voting rolls within a two-week period half a century ago.

Weekend Tag Days For Parade

Friday and Saturday are tag days for the Quinte Santa Claus Parade, forming up for a circuit of the downtown area on Dec. 5.

Organ grinders, clowns, Keystone Kops and members of the committee will be on hand to receive donations to help finance the parade, considered one of the most important of the year.

A committee official announced this morning that "we've had 20 floats signed up already."

"Proceeds, of course, will depend on good weather," commented the official.

"In the past the parade has received as high as $1,600; as low as $800.

"And, of course," he chuckled, "Santa will be there. The fire department is presently refurbishing his sled for the parade. Santa will have treats for all the children."

The committee requests anyone interested in being a tagger on Friday or Saturday to contact Ken Ross at 962-5496.

At 80, Unionist Who Defied Murder Inc. Looks for New Battle

MONTREAL (CP) — Hesward Shane, 80, is looking for another battle.

The organizer and National director of the 25,000-member International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union wants to organize some 10,000 workers in Montreal's lingerie, knitwear and children's wear industries.

In 51 years of union organizing Mr. Shane has faced threats on his life from New York's Murder Inc., attacks by goons, arrest and scores campaigns.

He has also fought "sweatshop conditions" in Canada's garment industry and won for some of the 17,000 Montreal union members hourly wages now almost equal to weekly earnings in 1934.

He's not about to let old age slow him down.

A testimonial dinner will be held for him Saturday night, to be attended by scores of government and labor leaders. He virtually reached the top of the Canadian labor movement as general vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress.

In an interview, he talked about the work still to be done to give collective bargaining power and job security to about 10,000 Montreal garment workers.

Workers in the industry, 95 per cent of them women and many of them immigrants, still get paid on a piece-work basis rather than a weekly salary.

Mr. Shane's parents immigrated to Philadelphia in 1906 among the wave of Russian Jews escaping anti-semitic pogroms in the Ukraine.

In 1916 he joined the ILGWU as a cloak operator and a year later was asked by the president to organize workers in New York.

There, he had to fight employers who were under the thumb of gruesome rackets with hired goons.

One day, Mr. Shane was telling about 100 people in his office about the union when a girl called from the outer office saying "Little Augie wants to see you."

"I knew who he was—Murder Inc.—but said I was busy with a union meeting.

"Then he knocked at my office door. We tried to ignore it at first but when it got too loud so I opened the door a little bit and he stuck his foot in.

"He began to tell me a story about what he can do to me—cut me up in little pieces, shoot me dead and so on."

Mr. Shane says he opened the door wide so there were plenty of witnesses and called the union's secretary-treasurer while the hood repeated his threats.

Soon after, the police called Little Augie into the station and "asked him if he wanted to be charged with attempted murder now or actual murder afterwards."

"The rackets got scared and we didn't hear from them again for a while."

After organizing drives in Toronto and Chicago from 1929 to 1931, Mr. Shane was brought to Montreal.

He remembers arriving in the cold and grey depression winter of 1934 and the even bleaker conditions of garment workers.

They worked from 7 a.m. or 8 a.m. to midnight in a "busy season," but more than 50 per cent of them had to accept charity to live.

Young girls, forced to the big city from their small hometowns because there was no work there, sat row after row at long tables under weak 25-watt bulbs over whirring machines.

They got 15 cents a dress, a maximum wage of between $7 and $12.50 a week was rarely paid.

Mr. Shane convinced 119 of the 121 male cutters in the industry to go on strike for $5 more a week.

In five days in the height of the season, the cutters had added the $5 to their $18-a-week wage and the ILGWU had a foothold.

Low Key Role Urged For Police

TORONTO (CP) — The Metropolitan Toronto police department should adopt a "low profile" and seek to increase contact between individual policemen and citizens, says a report released Wednesday by the centre of criminology at the University of Toronto.

The principal author of the report, which received financing from the Ontario government and the Ford Foundation, was Malcolm C. Courtis, senior research assistant in the centre since 1967.

The report says the problem of police-public relations "has been generally misconstrued" and that the Toronto public "were not markedly hostile to the police."

The report recommends that the police avoid any general program aimed at making the public more favorable toward the police because this might have the effect of polarizing public opinion.

Among the report's recommendations is a suggestion that the department recruit an "ethnically and culturally varied force." However, the report notes this policy could lead to demands on recruitment and management which might not be possible to meet.

Amnesia Victim Identified

TORONTO (CP) — A girl in the Hospital for Sick Children here suffering from amnesia for the last nine days has been identified as Rose Anne Hebert, a 16-year-old resident of Saint John, N.B.

She was identified Wednesday night by her brother Leon of Ottawa, who recognized her from photos distributed by police.

Rose Anne "woke up" Nov. 1 behind the Windsor Hotel in Fredericton, N.B., not knowing who or where she was.

She called herself Sandy because she liked the name. She also liked the name Toronto and lovesaid a brother who lived here. Failed hitch-hiked to visit him, she told police.

Luxurious Yacht

Ocean Spirit, shown shortly after launching at Poole, on England's southern coast, is described as the world's biggest glass-fibre sailing yacht. The yacht features accommodation for 16 people, a raised sun-deck lounge, space heating, air conditioning and a kitchen resembling something out of an executive-type home. (CB Photo)

World Wheat Champ Repeats

TORONTO (CP) — Harold E. Hansen of Calgary, was chosen world wheat champion for the third consecutive year Wednesday during field crop judging before the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair, which opens Friday.

His winning entry was a Chinook variety.

Reserve champion was G. H. Hedrick of Carbon, Alta., also for a Chinook variety.

Tom Rhatigan of Edmonton was chosen world champion in oats judgings for his Victory variety. He also held the title in 1968.

Runner-up in the oats class was W. J. Yellowlees of Ennismore, Ont., last year's champion.

Gaston Vanvaes of Aylmer, Ont., topped the tobacco judgings with a Cutter entry to become world tobacco champion for the second year in a row.

The 1969 winner, Jamie Atkins of Port Burwell, Ont., was reserve champion.

Alex J. Blackiel and Co. of Millhead, Tarland, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, topped the barley competition with a Saltai variety to become world champion in that class. Runner-up was C. H. Hoyles Ltd. of Spalding, England.

Last year's winners were Davidson Bros. of Stouffville, Ont.

Soybean and ear corn championships went to Floyd Elmer of Lewisville, Ind. Runners-up in those classes were R. H. Wilson of St. Thomas and D. S. Patterson of Cochocton, Ohio, respectively.

Mr. Hines also won the 1968 and 1969 soybean championships. The 1969 ear corn title went to John Harbine of Russelville, Ind.

Frank Hendy of Goodwood, Ont., was the rye competition for a Tetra Petkus entry. In 1969 he won the championship with Stanley Peasby of Claremont, Ont.

Mr. Patterson, reserve champion in the ear corn judgings, took the world hay championships with his Second Cut variety. Runner-up was the Rolling Rock Farms of Ligonier, Pa., champions in 1967 and 1968.

The 1969 hay champion was Russell Dallas of Brucefield, Ont.

Israeli Stamps Considered Holy

TEL AVIV (AP) — Thousands of Israeli stamps with the Hebrew word for God—Jehovah—written minutely across them, have been withdrawn from circulation after orthodox religious Jews complained that to lick, or to cancel them, would be blasphemous.

Postal officials said the 15-agora (four-cent) stamp, depicting the Torah, great synagogue, may have to lie in vaults forever because their destruction would be forbidden in religious eyes.

Auto Union Chiefs Meet

DETROIT (AP) — Representatives of 306,000 striking General Motors workers meet today to decide whether to accept or reject a new three-year contract tentatively agreed on by bargainers for the corporation and the United Auto Workers.

If the 250-member GM council of the UAW accepts the proposed pact, it will be put before union members for a vote.

Rejection of the pact by the council would send the union's negotiators back to the bargaining table and would almost definitely push the eight-week long strike into 1972.

The bargainers went for the Canadian UAW division said it expects that negotiations for settlement of its Chrysler master agreement will begin Friday in Toronto. The UAW represents 22,100 Canadian GM workers.

Dennis McDermott, head of the Canadian section of the union, has scheduled a meeting of his committee for today, a union spokesman said.

Although a UAW council never has rejected a national contract, drafted at the bargaining table, a few notes of dissatisfaction over the proposed agreement reached Wednesday have been sounded.

Jack Wagner, president of a giant Buick local in Flint, Mich., and author of a union demand for retirement at $500 a month after 30 years of service regardless of age, said he is unhappy that union compromised on the pension plan.

Details of the contract have been withheld until after the council's meeting, but bargaining table sources said the proposed pact contained these items:

—A return to an unlimited cost-of-living allowance which moves wages up or down with quarterly changes in the consumer price index. The union agreed to a capping on the allowance in the 1967 Big Three contracts and made a return to the unlimited formula a top demand this year.

—A first-year wage increase ranging from 49 to 61 cents an hour depending on the worker's job pay scale. The union had sought a boost starting at 71.5 cents and the company's last offer stacked at 38 cents. The average hourly wage in the industry under the old contracts was $4.62. Auto-makers estimate that fringe benefits cost them an additional $1.75 hourly.

—Retirement for workers with 30 years of service on pension of $500 a month at age 58 in the first year of the contract, age 56 in the second year and possibly age 55 in the third year. Under the current contract a worker retiring at age 55 after 30 years of service would get a maximum of $144 monthly.

UAW President Leonard Woodcock emphasized that Wednesday's agreement covers only national issues in the United States.

A spokesman said Canadian issues not cleared by the proposal for U.S. workers include cost-of-living increases and pensions. The cost of living has been created at a different rate in Canada and Canadian laws on government pensions will require different contract clauses.

The spokesman said the union expects a "very early proposal from GM" when talks begin in Toronto.

GM officials have said that even if ratification—a process which can take two weeks—proceeds smoothly, the earliest the company can expect to resume production is Dec. 1 because of the time needed to restart the corporation's far-flung operations after the long shutdown.

Spokesmen for General Motors said the firm has been losing about $80 million a day in sales during the strike, with workers losing $14 million daily in wages and firms which supply GM with parts lost about $40 million daily in sales.

The General Motors settlement has implications for far more workers than the UAW-represented GM employees.

The pact, if ratified, will be used as a pattern for new contracts at Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp. and American Motors Corp. Contracts at Ford and Chrysler expired Sept. 14—at the same time as at GM—and the AMC agreement ran out Oct. 15. Workers at all three firms have stayed on the job without contracts pending the outcome of the GM talks.

Poverty Committee Senators Got Out Among Poor People

TORONTO (CP) — Last year, Senator Herbert Sparrow changed from a neatly-pressed business suit into baggy pants and shuffled aimlessly through Vancouver's skid road district for a look at life on the other side of the tracks.

Senator Sparrow, a farmer-businessman from Saskatchewan with a chain of takeout restaurants, is a member of the Senate poverty committee. He says the experience "was an eye opener."

Senator Chesley Carter of Newfoundland and Muriel Fergusson of New Brunswick are also members of the poverty committee. The three come from widely differing backgrounds but they hold a common belief—the welfare system must be changed, drastically.

They talked of their experiences while serving on the committee in interviews published today by The Globe and Mail.

The Saskatchewan senator started out with $5 cents in his pocket. Along the way he bought a bottle of bay rum—a shaving lotion with volatile alcoholic content that is a favorite of the West Coast city's down-and-outers.

He said in an interview he didn't like the taste, but drank some anyway. It cost him 50 cents. With the remaining dollar, Senator Sparrow bought two cigarettes, and sat smoking and talking with some of the people who know all about poverty.

They were withdrawn. They feel unwanted, rejected. The biggest single problem is alcoholism, but some can be salvaged. I found the experience a real eye-opener."

Despite the deep feeling of despair the experience left him with, Senator Sparrow said the worst conditions he saw anywhere were in two jails in Prince Edward Island.

Conditions were so bad that he described the jails as "an indication of a sick, sick society."

The 68-year-old senator from North Battleford, Sask., said the biggest hurdle in beating poverty is the attitude towards the problem held by most Canadians.

If hard times appeal to Canadians, the people must be told that it is cheaper in the long run to pay money to get a man off welfare than keep him on the rest of his life.

Senator Carter is 58 and an educational psychologist. He sees the schools as a major tool in the fight against poverty—as well as a millstone around the necks of the poor.

"The educational system contributes to poverty and this applies right across the country," he said. "It tends to answer why some people fall in life."

Schools must stress communication because the lack of it is a symptom of poverty, said the Newfoundland senator.

"Some workers can't communicate with the people they're trying to help and the poor can't communicate with them.

"The children are bewildered because the parents aren't interested in education.

"Even the teachers won't teach if slum areas because they feel there is a loss of prestige and because the children are poorly disciplined."

Senator Fergusson, from Fredericton, was one of the first poverty committee members to break away from formal sessions to see the poor first hand.

She went twice to visit people in the slums of Halifax and to hear to-room complaints about governmental economical bound.

Mrs. Fergusson said she was told by friends before she joined the committee that there was no real poverty in Canada, and "I was appalled when we started our cross-country tour and people yelled at us."

A longtime fighter for equal pay for equal work, she said children with working mothers have a 50-50 chance of wedding the poor, because women earn less money.

"It makes me mad that they don't get equal pay for the same work as men. It costs as much for a woman to feed her family, to buy them clothes, as it does a man."

Rochester Puzzled Are Bombers Leflists, Nazis?

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — In the first hours of Columbus Day, Oct. 12, five closely-timed dynamite bombs exploded at a federal building and a county building, a pair of Negro churches and a union official's home.

Rochester was a prosperous and, until the bombs, peaceful city of 330,000. Why the violence?

Fifteen days later, terrorists struck again. Dynamite bombs exploded at two synagogues.

Another synagogue, another bombing three days after election day, Nov. 3. This time a fuse 4 type device exploded shortly after 1 a.m., blowing two holes in the rear of Temple Beth Am in suburban Brockport.

Some people see the bombings, especially of the churches and synagogues, as the work of neo-Nazi rightists. Others, mindful of leaflet extremists implicated in bombings of government buildings elsewhere in the United States, feel a radical element may be trying to bring revolution to Rochester.

Most residents view Rochester as a stable, orderly community that has one of the lowest unemployment rates and best-paid work forces in the country.

However, there has been over recent years an influx of minority groups, especially Negroes and Puerto Ricans, into the city, with an attendant exodus of whites into the suburbs.

Whites now are an estimated 80,000 blacks and more than 15,000 Spanish-speaking residents in the city, most concentrated in the deteriorating North Side. Rochester's present population of 330,000 is a decline from 332,000 in 1950.

Bernard R. Gifford, 37-year-old president of F.I.G.H.T., a black community-action group, is among those who theorize that the bombings were the work of right-wing terrorists.

Unlike most public officials and other residents, Gifford says he doesn't think strong fascist movement in Rochester.

"You find a lot of racist literature here, like the kind you'd find in Mississippi—laws are plotting to take over the world, there's a conspiracy between them and blacks and so forth," he said.

Quinte COSSA Hopes Were Carried Out Wednesday Despite the Efforts of Paul Hall

Gambles Fail in Saints 1-0 Senior COSSA Loss

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

PETERSBOROUGH — The senior COSSA football championship could easily have been referred to as the IF Bowl.

If Quinte had went for a field goal on one of the several times that they were within range . . .

If the field had been dry . . .

If the Saints hadn't been hit with three costly penalties in the fourth quarter . . .

If, if, if.

It was the type of game where even the winning coach was second guessing himself.

"I have to admit that after we got close to their goal line twice and didn't score, that six points would have looked awfully big — we have a good place kicker too admitted a smiling Wayne Gilroy after his Sir Thomas A. Stewart Griffins edged the Quinte Saints 1-0.

"Of course you're going to second guess yourself after a 1-0 loss", admitted a resigned Jack Sisson. "we gambled and lost."

The Saints biggest gamble came in the first half when quarterback Rick Meagher scrambled to the opposing 11-yard line on a broken pass play.

Quinte failed to go over for a major score on three consecutive plays and the defending COSSA champs took over on downs.

The Griffins lost a gamble of their own near the end of the first half. Paul Hall's punt hit blocker Rick Graham giving Sir Thomas A. Stewart possession of the ball on Quinte's 16-yard line. The Saint defence rose to the occasion however, by stopping a third - and - goal gamble on the two - yard line, as quarterback Jim Reilly fumbled the snap and was tackled immediately.

Turnovers played a key part in the game as both defences consistently seemed to come up with the big play.

The winners held twice on third down and short yardage in the second half when the Saints threatened to break the 0-0 deadlock.

Steve Whalen thwarted a Peterborough drive in the third quarter by recovering a fumble on his own 21 yard line, while the ensuing Saint march ended as Rick Meagher coughed up the ball on the Stewart 22.

Three penalties in the final quarter aided the Griffins as they moved the ball to the Quinte 35-yard line, but a safety blitz by Terry Meagher, who played the game despite a badly sprained ankle, forced them to punt.

Jay Reichardt booted the ball to the back of the end zone for what proved to be the deciding point.

The Saints had a chance to tie the game in the dying minutes when corner linebacker Larry Skolikse broke through to block a Reichardt punt.

Two passes by Rick Meagher slipped through the arms of his receivers, however, and the winners stopped a screen pass off punt formation for no gain, allowing them to run out the clock.

Fullback Paul Hall was the only runner able to move the ball consistently on the muddy Thomas A. Stewart gridiron, picking up most of his yardage on off-tackle plays.

Bill Kirkham also played well filling in for running back Rick Graham, who was shifted to defence.

Inside linebacker Bob Hartney was a standout for the COSSA champions.

The game took only one hour and 40 minutes to complete.

Lions Get COSSA Revenge In 16-12 Win Over Moira

By ALAN TEEWORTH

The Adam Scott Lions yesterday took the Junior COSSA title as they beat the Moira Trojans 16-12 at Moira. It was the first loss after 18 consecutive wins by the Trojans.

Scott coach Pete Haensel emphasized "We really wanted to win this one, after last year's loss by the same team."

And the Lions showed this with their enthusiasm after the game.

The outstanding player in the game for the Lions was clearly halfback Doug Young, who, with his outside running picked up 126 yards on 19 carries, most of it coming in the second half.

Cam Patterson opened the scoring for the Scott crew when quarterback Graham Morley tossed him a screen pass. Patterson then tromped 85 yards for the major. Young caught a pass after the Lions faked a kick for the extra points.

Moira had their chances, however to tie the score on numerous occasions but the Lions defense held from in tight. On the last offensive set of the first half Moira had their best opportunity.

Starting on their own 26-yard line they drove to the 17 yard line of Adam Scott. Ead Cliff Ralph uncorked in the end zone had a perfect pass slip away in the rain. Two plays later Pete Stalikovich ran the ball to the 2-yard line before time ran out. The teams went till the dressing rooms at half - time with the Lions ahead 8-0.

Late in the 3rd period Dave Rutherford picked up Moira's first points as he romped 73 yards behind the blocking of ends John Loder and Cliff Ralph for the 6 pointer. The convert was not successful.

Doug Young put the game all but out of reach when he caught a screen pass from Morley to complete a 73 yard pass-run play. Young caught his second conversion pass as the Lions caught the Trojans wide open on the same fake as they tried on their first score.

Moira did fight back, though and Pete Stalikovich finally broke through from the 1 yard line after a series of drives were halted by Scott. The convert was no good, putting the game out of reach for the Trojans.

Pete Stalikovich and Dave Rutherford were the outstanding offensive players for the Moira squad, gaining 143 and 121 yards respectively. John Loder provided many key looks for the losers.

Doug Young was the standout for Adam Scott offensively while end Terry Dekkarsh was good in his blocking efforts. Left guard Greg Allen was outstanding on the offensive line of Scott.

Looking Back?

Moira standout back Dave Rutherford views the action in yesterday's COSSA junior title game played at the Belleville school. The Adam Scott Lions avenged a loss to Moira in the 1969 championship match by downing the Trojans 16-12.

Seals Set Club Winning Record by Beating Canadiens 2-0

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Frank Selke Jr., general manager of California Golden Seals, foresaw a golden future for his team one night early this season after the Seals had blanked Buffalo Sabres 4-0.

The club was Oakland Seals at the time and the event took place during the National Hockey League's pre-season exhibition schedule.

But the immediate future was dismal for the financially-plagued West-Coast club and a rather bleak picture was painted amid rumors of a possible move to more lucrative centres.

A change in name didn't help. Even brilliant home ice performs had little effect on the Seals plunge to the NHL's West Division cellar with only two ties to show in their first nine games.

Suddenly, the tides have changed and the new-look Seals are currently the hottest NHL property, wrecking their next four starts—a club record.

Their latest victims, Montreal Canadiens, fell 2-0 as goaltender Gary Smith registered California's first shutout of the season.

While their resurgence has yet to get them out of last place, the Seals are within two points of sixth-place Pittsburgh Penguins and within four of Los Angeles Kings and Minnesota North Stars, tied in fourth.

The North Stars tripped Los Angeles 3-1, Pittsburgh battled New York Rangers to a 3-3 tie, Chicago Black Hawks drubbed Philadelphia Flyers 7-1 and Vancouver Canucks dropped Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2 in other scheduled games.

The only game tonight has Detroit Red Wings visiting St. Louis Blues.

DENNIS HULL

At Oakland, the Canadiens, outshot 16 to 5 in the first period, applied pressure of their own late in the game in an effort to salvage some respect.

But goals by Gary Jarrett, his fourth of the year, and rookie Ernie Hicke stood up as Smith shut the door despite a concerted Montreal effort.

The loss dropped Montreal into third place in the East Division behind New York.

Minnesota capitalized on a power-play for the first time this year and the occasion seemed to spur them to victory on the strength of first-period goals by Jean-Paul Parise and Jude Drouin at Bloomington, Minn.

The North Stars, who had failed on 41 previous tries this year to take advantage of the manpower edge, finally had their efforts rewarded with Drouin pulling the trigger 31 seconds after the Kings' Ross Lonsberry went off for hooking.

BOBBY HULL

The Penguins were hard-pressed for their tie with third-period goals by Jean Pronovost and Wally Boyer enabling them to overcome a 3-1 Rangers lead in New York. Goals by Dave Balon and Ted Irvine 82 seconds apart in the second period had given the New Yorkers their two-goal cushion.

The Hull brothers, Bobby and Dennis, scored two each as the Black Hawks blistered the Flyers to pad their West Division lead to four points over Philadelphia and St. Louis.

Bobby Hull's second goal at 13:39 of the second period sent Flyers' goalie Bernie Parent to the bench in favor of Doug Favell.

The two teams were on the ice just seven seconds before the game's first and only brawl developed with Chicago's Keith Magnuson scoring a lopsided victory over Earl Heiskala in the main event.

Both players were assessed minor and major penalties, but Heiskala decked by a right-hand punch, required 12 stitches to close a wound on his lip.

It was the same old story in Toronto where the Leafs dropped their third game of the season to the new franchise from Vancouver. Third period goals by Ronnie Palement, Barry Wilkins and Ray Cullen's second of the game snapped a 1-1 tie.

The Canucks had scored 5-3 said 3-3 wins over Toronto at Vancouver and, with a 4-1 exhibition victory earlier, appear to have the Leafs' number at this stage of the schedule.

Ned Harkness Under Fire as Rookie Detroit Coach

DETROIT (AP) — It took an awful lot of soul searching before Ned Harkness decided to quit coaching college hockey after 12 years to become coach of Detroit Red Wings.

But already, with the National Hockey League season just five weeks old, the 42-year-old "rookie" has been tabbed by one local newspaper as being on the way out.

Despite the sudden criticism, Sid Abel, the team's general manager, told one reporter Wednesday: "Ned is the coach and will be the coach. Our problem has been that the team hasn't really jelled yet, but it has been showing signs that it can win."

Detroit, going into tonight's game in St. Louis, has a 4-8-2 record for fifth-place in the seven-team NHL East Division.

Harkness has been under fire by a local sportswriter since Sunday's 3-3 tie with Pittsburgh. Bill Brennan, hockey writer for the Detroit News, had several stories of criticism, including one in which he said: "If the Detroit Red Wings are to salvage anything of this National Hockey League season then a coaching change must be made."

Sunday night before the criticism broke in the paper Harkness sat calmly behind his office desk and spoke of his new job with the Wings.

"I like it very much," he said. "Mr. Bruce Norris I believe is the finest owner in the NHL. If I didn't believe that I wouldn't be here."

Brennan's criticisms indicated that Norris could easily fire Hartness since he fired coach Bill Gadsby last season, without warning, moments before a game.

Harkness said it was very difficult for him to leave Ithaca, N.Y., where he lived while coaching Cornell University for six years. Before that he coached the Rensellaer Polytechnic Institute hockey team for 11 seasons and his over-all record coaching college hockey is an amazing 339-125-9.

What differences are there coaching in the NHL after college?

"The biggest difference is the length of the schedule," said Harkness, who also coached lacrosse teams at RPI and Cornell.

"The NHL schedule is three times as long. You don't get extended practice here because you're playing all the time. In college we could work for three or four days on our problems. . . ."

Ferguson, Habs to Talk But Return Not Sure

MONTREAL (CP) — John Ferguson said Wednesday night he will meet today with Sam Pollock, general manager of Montreal Canadiens, with an "open mind" toward his possible return to hockey.

"I have an open mind and if the conditions are right, I wouldn't be opposed to playing hockey again," said Ferguson, who retired from active National Hockey League competition last month to enter the clothing business.

Asked if the chances he would make a comeback were any better than the 50-50 proposition he termed it two days ago, Ferguson said:

"No, but I'll listen to Sam and see what he has to say. Conditions . . . well, let's just leave it at that."

If the conditions are favorable, Ferguson said he would head into an intense conditioning course immediately and rejoin the Canadiens "in perhaps three weeks."

Ferguson met with his partners, Nelson Stoll and George Gottlieb for 90 minutes Wednesday night on his return from Laurel, Md., where he attended the Washington D.C. International horse race.

"We went over the pros and cons," said Ferguson. "The only thing that's changed from a month ago is that I have an open mind. It was closed then. I was definitely retiring."

Formula for Riders

Harris' Solution Puts Him on the Spot

CALGARY (CP) — To defeat Saskatchewan Roughriders in the Western Football Conference playoffs, Calgary Stampeders "have to contain their rushing attack" and pester quarterback Ron Lancaster.

That is the opinion of middle linebacker Wayne Harris, a 10-year Calgary veteran and a Canadian Football League all-star since 1964.

His theory will be put to the test Saturday afternoon when the teams clash in Regina in the first game of the best-of-three western final. The game, at 2 p.m. CST (3 p.m. EST) will be televised over the CBC national network. The second game is scheduled for Calgary next Wednesday.

The Stampeders advanced to the final with a 16-9 win last week over second-place Edmonton Eskimos.

"We can't make any mistakes against that club and expect to win," said Harris, named Canada's outstanding lineman in 1965 and 1968.

"We'll have to stop their running game as much as possible and try not to let Lancaster get too much time to throw the ball."

Lancaster, who this year became a four-time winner of the WFC's most valuable player award, "can pick it more apart and is excellent at reading a blitz," says Harris.

"We won't blitz him too often because he can beat you with a screen pass or another play.

"Lancaster has eyes in the back of his head."

The Roughriders, seeking their eighth consecutive win, led the CFL in rushing with 2,572 yards while playing several games without all-star fullback George Reed. Calgary was third with 2,238 yards, 76 behind British Columbia Lions.

"They've (Roughriders) always been basically a strong running team," says the 32-year-old Harris.

Saskatchewan took first place in the West for the third straight year with 14 wins and two defeats. The Roughriders defeated the Stampeders 21-17 and 21-14 in Calgary, but lost 30-9 at home in the first game of the season between the clubs.

"Everyone thought they would be weaker this year, including myself," Harris said, "but they sure proved us wrong."

The main reason, I believe, for their success is a nucleus of veterans and excellent coaching."

Harris, from the University of Arkansas, has been a WFC all-star since joining the Stampeders in 1961. His quickness and strong legs "which help in tackling" are two of his main assets.

Considered small for a middle linebacker at 205 pounds, he said he has "never really considered" playing out his option and trying out for a team in the National Football League.

"Personally I've always felt I could play in the NFL . . . No one believed I could play college or professional football in the CFL but I did."

Comparisons Give Stamps Edge Except in Wins

TORONTO (CP) — If the Western Football Conference final was a total-point system, Calgary Stampeders might be considered favorites on the basis of a statistical comparison compiled by the Canadian Football League.

The figures show the Stamps outscored Saskatchewan Roughriders 51-42 in their three regular-season games while leading their playoff rivals in both the rushing and passing departments.

But while the Stamps won the first encounter 30-9, the Roughies beat them 21-17 and 21-14 in the other two and took the WFC title with 14 wins and two losses while Calgary came third with a nine-and-seven record.

That makes the Roughies the favorites to win the best-of-three Western playoff which starts with the first game Saturday in Regina.

The CFL also issued a comparison on Wednesday showing Montreal Alouettes with a slight edge over Hamilton Tiger-Cats. Those teams meet in the Eastern Conference two-game, total-point final with the first game Sunday in Montreal.

Hugh McKinnis, the sensational rookie running back for the Stampeders, picked up 252 yards, more than half Calgary's total of 462 yards rushing against Saskatchewan in the three games.

Halfback Steve Molnar had the most success running against the Calgary defence. He picked up 113 of the Roughies' 283 total yards.

Calgary quarterbacks Jerry Keeling and Larry Lawrence completed 48 of 82 pass attempts for 633 yards and McKinnis also completed one for another 49 yards.

Ron Lancaster completed 37 of 72 attempts for 437 yards against the Stamps while backup quarterbacks Don Weiss and Gary Lane connected on four more for another 44 yards.

The Calgary defence picked off four of Lancaster's passes while Saskatchewan swiped two from Keeling and one from Lawrence.

Saskatchewan punter Al Ford held a 40.2-yard average in 33 kicks against Calgary while the Stamps' Ron Stewart had a 38.1 average in 19 kicks.

In the East, the Alouettes outscored the Ticats 88-58 in their three season games but each took one victory and their last contest ended 18-18.

Moses Denson collected 185 of the Als' 465 yards rushing against Hamilton which gained only 368 yards on the ground.

Montreal's Sonny Wade, with 29 of 70 passes completed for 397 yards, was backed up by Tony Passandrite with another 12 of 26 for 220 yards. Each had two passes intercepted by the Ticats.

Veteran Joe Zuger, appearing in two games against the Als, completed 25 of 48 passes attempted for 323 yards and gave up three interceptions.

In the other game, newcomer Wally Gabler completed 13 of 30 for 153 yards and had two picked off by the Montreal defenders. Backup quarterback John Eckman was good on five of 11 attempts for 161 yards.

Zuger maintained a 43.5-yard punting average against the Als until he was sidelined by a broken arm more than a month ago. He returns from the injury list today.

Wade had a 40.4 average against Hamilton.

Ticat defenders recovered six fumbled footballs while the Als got only two from Hamilton.

Ticats Promise New Wrinkles

HAMILTON (CP) — Coach Joe Restic said Wednesday Hamilton Tiger-Cats scurry-type offence will have a few new wrinkles added when the Ticats meet Montreal Alouettes Sunday in the first game of the Eastern Football Conference final.

He said the club's offensive alignment will include "things they won't recognize" and that the over-all attack unit has "really been moving" behind crisp blocking.

Restic feels the Als biggest asset will be the running of Moses Denson, who he considers "one of the best in the Canadian Football League."

However, the Ticats should solve the Montreal passing game that worked so well in the semi-final against Toronto last weekend, he said.

Louis Picks Bob Foster

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Joe Louis, former world heavyweight champion, predicted Wednesday that Bob Foster, world light heavyweight titleholder, will defeat heavyweight champion Joe Frazier in their fight at Detroit Nov. 18.

Namath Dolls For Cuddly Gals

NEW YORK (AP) — Now, girls, your wish can come true—you can take Joe Namath home and cuddle him.

You can stroke his long, coal-black hair. You can run a finger down his Roman nose. You can even button up his leather jacket and take off his leather boots.

How?

Just pick him up at a department store or order him through a mail order catalogue.

He costs only $4.99 in a white No. 12 New York Jets uniform complete with helmet, underwear, jersey, pants, shoes, socks, a pennant and a football.

He comes complete with fully jointed arms, and legs, a turn-about body and 12 changes of clothing available at $3 a set.

"I think he's gorgeous," said brunette actress Marcia Forbes after being exposed to a battery of miniature Joes in all their assorted finery.

"The kids, the teen-agers, are clamoring for the dolls as much as, the older women," said a buyer for a Manhattan store. "Even the grandmothers are asking for them."

Sacharuk Case Could Go to Court

CALGARY (CP) — A Canadian Amateur Hockey Association ruling that restricts a player to an Ontario club could force legal action, the president of the Western Canada Hockey League said Tuesday night.

Ron Butlin was commenting on the CAHA's ruling in Ottawa Tuesday that Lawrence Sacharuk must play with Niagara Falls Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A circuit instead of Saskatoon Blades of the WCHL.

Sacharuk, a Saskatoon native, went to the Flyers last year and sought his release this season to play for Saskatoon. Niagara Falls refused the release and Sacharuk's appeal to the CAHA was turned down.

Butlin would only say the case is not closed yet and would not comment further on a situation Tuesday that Lawrence Sacharuk must play with Niagara Falls Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A circuit instead of Saskatoon Blades of the WCHL.

Jackie McLeod said Sacharuk's parents want to settle the issue in court and said this probably is the next course of action.

Russian Girl Unbelievable

Gymnastics Tournament Dominated by Two Foreign Athletes

WINNIPEG (CP) — The six competing countries got down to serious business Wednesday and by the end of the day the world invitational gymnastics tournament had become the personal property of two athletes.

Gold fishe of two athletes.

Ljudmila Turischeva, Russia's female world champion, and Japan's Teruichi Okamura each pocksted four gold medals. Including those for the individual over-all championships.

Miss Turischeva, 18, had gold-medal performances on the uneven bars, vault horse and in the over-all individual competition, and helped her Russian team-mates capture the women's team award.

A crowd of nearly 3,500 could scarcely believe it when her uneven bars score of Tuesday was announced—8.90 of a possible 10. But Miss Turisheva made believers out of everyone when she repeated the 9.90 performance Wednesday.

Team-mates Zinaida Voronina and Larisa Petrik finished second and third respectively in the uneven bars then switched placings in the vaulting.

No Canadians made it to the finals with the only U.S. women, Adele Cleaves and Kim Chase in the vaulting and Joan Moore in the uneven bars, all finishing fourth.

Okamura, a 22-year-old college student, won the floor exercise ahead of silver medallist Georgy Bogdenov of the Soviet Union and Yuichi Usdo of Japan and John Crosby of the U.S. who tied for the bronze medal.

Okamura shared the rings gold medal with Mikhail Voronin of Russia, a former world champion.

Milos Vratic of Yugoslavia, the youngster selected by his country to succeed eight-time world pommel horse champion Miroslav Cerar, won the event with a technical final round that enabled him to edge Voronin.

Earlier in the day, Okamura warmed up for the finals by recording the best scores in the three afternoon preliminaries on the parallel bars, horizontal bar and vault.

His points earned him the over-all individual male gold medal, dropping first-day leader Voronin to second.

In the team competition, the Japanese edged the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia.

The Russian women were never threatened as a team. The surprise was the second-place finish of the U.S. girls who nipped the Japanese. Canada placed fourth.

Canada's best individual showing was by Jennifer Dickson of Toronto who finished fifth over-all, tied for sixth on the balance beam, seventh on both the vault and uneven bars and eighth in the floor exercise.

Andra Simard of Montreal was the best Canadian male, taking ninth spot over-all.

The three-day competition ends tonight.

A and O Prove Potent Punch

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mr. A and the Big O are proving a potent 1-2 punch for the Milwaukee Bucks in the National Basketball Association.

Mr. A, otherwise Lew Alcindor, scored 44 points and the Big O., the nickname for Oscar Robertson, added 26 for a combined 70-point performance in leading the Bucks to their seventh straight victory Wednesday night by 123-113 over Boston.

In other games Philadelphia beat Baltimore 119-107, Los Angeles shaded Detroit 117-113, Buffalo overcame Atlanta 131-118, Phoenix tripped Portland 114-100 and San Diego bumbled Cincinnati 127-120.

Equestrian Team Short Top Riders

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian equestrian team enters this year's Royal Horse Show here Friday short two of its top riders and with several of its best mounts sidelined with injuries.

Named to the team Wednesday were Jim Elder of Aurora, Ont., Barbara Simpson of Calgary, Moffat Dunlop of Newmarket, Ont., and Torchy Millar of Ste. Marguerite, Que.

Missing from the lineup were Jim Day of Oakville, Ont., 1967 Pan American Games gold medallist and a member of Canada's 1968 Olympic gold medal team, and Tom Gayford of Gormley, Ont., captain of the Canadian equestrian team in a succession of international competitions during the last 10 years.

Elder will ride Beefeater, Pieces of Eight and Argyl in the Royal Horse Show. Miss Simpson will appear on Australis, Magnor and Blacjac.

Dunlop has Grand Nouvel and Intrepid while Millar will be aboard Pistol Pete and Le Dauphin.

"We've had more freak accidents with our horses this year than I can ever remember," said Dunlop. The Canadian casualties include four of the best horses in international competition today: Canadian Club, The Immigrant, Shoeman and Lights Out.

Most of the injuries occurred during an eight-week tour of Europe this summer. Hardest hit was Elder, who had three of his top horses sidelined.

World Cup Golf Facing Handicaps

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Rain, wind, cold and an Argentina general strike faced the 43 national teams playing in today's opening of the World Cup golf tournament.

As if that weren't enough, the players also were complaining about the greens on the 6,700-yard Jockey Club course for the four-day, 72-hole journey.

"It would be easier to putt on a concrete floor", joked Lee Trevino of the United States after shooting a respectable 69 in Wednesday's pro-am preliminary.

Canadians entered in the field are Al Balding Jr. of Toronto and Bob Cox Jr. of Vancouver.

A cold rain, lashed by high winds, started shortly after the wind-up of the pro-am tournament. Today's forecast was for rain and temperatures in the 50s.

Officials, however, said it would have to be a lot worse before the tournament would be cancelled.

A 36-hour general strike called by the country's labor federation to protest the Argentine government's economic policies also was scheduled to begin today.

Of the 43 teams, the United States, Argentina, England and Australia were the pre-tournament favorites.

Big Rushing Game Gives Regina Rams 5th Win for West

REGINA (CP) — Regina Rams combined tough blocking and hard running to defeat Burlington Cee Dees, Braves 30-8 Wednesday in the sudden-death Canadian junior football championship final and stretch to five years the string of western wins.

"Offensive blocking was the whole key to the game," said Rams coach Gordon Currie of the Western Canada junior football champion. Good line play opened holes through which Rick Ackerman and Don Schmidt rushed for big gains against the Braves.

Fullback Ackerman carried 23 times for 191 yards and two touchdowns and Schmidt rushed 20 times for 117 yards and two touchdowns as the Rams relied heavily on the ground attack to overpower the Eastern Canada representatives before a crowd of 10,500.

Braves, with Dave Lawson at quarterback for the first half and Jay Graydon for the second, hit the scoreboard first with a five-yard touchdown run by George Zaborsky, who proved Burlington's most effective runner with 58 yards gained on eight carries.

But a convert by Ian Sunter and a third-quarter 68-yard single by Adrian Taylor ended the scoring for Burlington.

Henry Schubach took a 21-yard touchdown pass in the fourth quarter from Mike Hill, who relieved starting quarterback Barry Polowick briefly, and Dave Sedgley got another on a five-yard run. Ray Manz booted three converts.

In the fourth quarter, Burlington's defence stiffened and the Rams score 20 points.

The Rams started the string of western wins in 1966 when they beat Montreal Notre Dame de Grace to win the Leader-Post Trophy, awarded annually to the top junior team in Canada. Edmonton Wildcats took the cup in 1967 and Saskatoon Hilltops won in 1968 and 1969.

Burlington lost to Edmonton three years ago. Coached by former Canadian Football League quarterback Bernie Custis, they ran up a 15-game winning streak this year and averaged nearly 44 points a game offensively, while giving up an average 4.2 to opponents.

Braves defeated NDG Maple Leafs 22-13 in the Eastern Canada final to enter the Canadian playoff, while Rams battled past Winnipeg Hawkeyes, Vancouver Velotamas and Edmonton Huskies to represent the West.

Annual UN Debate On China Scheduled

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The General Assembly starts a much-awaited debate today that should give, before it is over in about 10 days, an indication how long it will take to gain the admittance of Communist China to the 127-country world organization.

The debate is on the annual Albanian resolution calling for the admission of the Communist mainland Chinese government and the expulsion of the Nationalist Chinese government of Formosa.

Few doubt that by the time the debate and voting on two resolutions are over, the Communists still will be the outs and the Nationalists the ins.

But there also are few who doubt that Canadian and Italian recognition of the Communist Chinese has started a process that eventually will lead to the admittance of the Peking regime.

The question is when.

Preliminary indications are that the vote on the Albanian resolution will be close.

American sources, still opposed to admittance of the Communist Chinese although there are indications the U.S. is softening its stand, hope the Albanian resolution will be defeated by one or two votes.

But either countries see the possibility of a majority voting in favor of the Albanian proposal, with some countries joining Canada and Italy in changing their votes from negative or abstention to one of support.

There is no question, however, that the annual American-sponsored resolution saying that the admittance of the Communist Chinese is an "important question" needing a two-thirds majority will be approved.

In past years Canada has supported the important question resolution. But this year its old stand has been under review and as late as Wednesday night the cabinet had announced no decision.

Key Ride in Horse Race Made by Flying Taxi Driver

LAUREL, Md. (AP) — The key ride in the United States' victory in the 19th running of the Washington, D.C., International horse race was the one jockey Jorge Velasquez took in a taxi.

"I have no confidence in the horse and the horse feels it," Elliott Burch, trainer of winner Fort Marcy had said before the $150,000 race at Laurel Saturday.

But, except for a cabbie, Velasquez would not have a chance to display that winning confidence.

"He was flying. I'm going to give him a good ride," Velasquez said of the cabbie who got him to Laurel race course one minute before a steward's deadline that would have prevented him from riding and cost him $10,000, his percentage of the first money of $100 000.

Fort Marcy, a six-year-old gelding owned by Paul Mellon, won the 1½-mile International over a soft turf course in the rain by a length over Miss Dan II, a three-year filly from France.

The winner, giving the United States its ninth International victory and first since he won in 1967, took the lead on the final turn and whipped Miss Dan by a length in the plow time in 2:42 4-5.

Bacaco of Italy was third, another five lengths back and a nose in front of the other U.S. representative, Edward B. Keck's Fiddle Isle.

Canada's Frazebuche, owned by Jean-Louis Levesque of Montreal and ridden by Hon. Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B., finished seventh.

If the race was slow, the Velasquez cab ride from Baltimore's Friendship International Airport to Laurel wasn't—15 miles in less than 15 minutes.

Velasquez and Turcotte sat at New York's Laguardia Airport for an hour and 15 minutes before weather permitted their plane to take off.

Once they landed in Baltimore, the unknown cabbie took over and delivered the jockeys to Laurel about 3:10 p.m. EST, 32 minutes before the race and 20 minutes before the stewards' deadline for their arrival.

Turcotte said he waited until Wednesday to come to Laurel because he had to take his two children to a hospital to have their tonsils out. Velasquez said he waited because he didn't anticipate any difficulties.

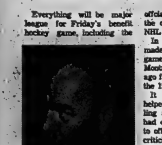
Fort Marcy's second International victory brought his earnings to $1,943,233 and put him eighth on the all-time earnings list.

Sent off at the even-money favorite by the crowd of 39,764, Fort Marcy returned $4.20, 3.2 and $2.60. Miss Dan II paid $6.80 and $4.80 and outsider Bucaco was $7.40 to win.

Completing the order of finish after Fiddle Isle, were Lavmarocco of England, Comador of Venezuela, Fraulechohe, Cortes II of West Germany, Sol de Noche of Uruguay and Beaugecey of France.

Velasquez never got a chance to tip the cabbie. Unknown to Velasquez, a friend of Turcotte's paid the fare and the cabbie did not wait until the end of the race.

Former NHL Ref Should Provide Colorful 'Storey'



Everything will be major league for Friday's benefit hockey game, including the officiating which will be left in the capable hands of former NHL referee Red Storey.

In fact the colorful official made his return to the game long a game involving many of the Montreal Oldtimers as Chicago fans stapled a near riot in the 1959 playoffs.

It was Doug Harvey, who helped coal things off by levelling a Black Hawk fan who had climbed over the boards to offer some rather physical criticism of Storey's capabilities.

Dollard St. Laurent another oldtimer who will be seeing Friday night action was also in the game as a member of the Chicago team which clipped Montreal's string of five consecutive Stanley Cups.

Storey will be dropping the opening puck at 4 p.p.m. faceoff between Frank Selke Sr. and fire chief Leo Culhane.

Wings Take Lead In Central League

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fort Worth Wings took over sole possession of first place in the Central Hockey League Wednesday night by blanking Tulsa Oilers 5-0 while defending champion Omaha Knights were losing bombed 7-3 by Dallas Black Hawks.

Oklahoma City Blazers defeated Kansas City Blues 3-1 in other action, maintaining Oklahoma City's hold on third place in the seven-team league.

Al Fort Worth, Ron Walters fired two goals to help Wings' goalie Don McLeod record his first shutout of the season. Doc Martin, Ross Perkins and Herb Buser accounted for the other goals in Fort Worth's rout of the Oilers.

After a scoreless first period, the Wings scored twice in the second period and added a cushion of three more in the third.

The home-ice victory for Dallas was unexpected. Omaha lifted the Black Hawks into fourth place with a two-point edge over Kansas City and Tulsa. Dallas-Ville Wranglers, idle Wednesday, are in the circuit cellar.

Dallas' victory dropped the Knights into second place, two points back of Fort Worth.

Paced by Don Gordon's two-goal performance, the Hawks opened up a 3-1 first-period lead, wickoned it with two unanswered goals in the second period and split four goals with Omaha in the third.

Dave Hudson, Darryl Maggs, Don Lashuk, Blake Bond and Terry Caffrey were the other Dallas marksmen. Gerry Ouellette led the Knights with a pair of goals. Andre Dupont getting the other

Mulroneys Blank Wellington

Mulroney's Novice Minors unleashed a 30 - shot barrage on their Wellington opposition last night to take an 8-0 minor hockey win.

Don Cook and Garth Scully shared the netminding chores facing eight shots between them.

Billy Rowe counted a hat trick for the winners, while Mark Cowan was good for two goals and three assists. Wayne Deighton (2) and Peter Prudente were the other goalgetters.

Sugar-powered Battery Built By Queen's Chemistry Student

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — It may be possible to walk into a hardware store next spring and buy sugar-powered batteries, if the research of a Queen's University chemistry student progresses as expected.

Richard Keeler, 19, has invented such a battery and said in an interview that it is "perhaps as close as six months" to a marketable product.

A native of Toronto, Richard said the first product made available through his research may be a low-voltage power pack for radios and small domestic appliances.

If that venture is successful, the concept of the sugar-powered battery could be applied elsewhere and on a bigger scale.

Richard says the day could come when his invention might prove useful in medicine, supplying the power to a heart-regulator pacemaker. Or it could power electric automobiles.

The whiz-kid-at-chemistry student takes his research seriously and is determined to see the results of his work made available to the public.

Honeywell Ltd., has been formed to develop his invention. Its president is Richard's father, Thomas C. Keeler, an engineer.

Electrocell Ltd. has provided funds to two groups helping Richard with his research. One is a group of chemists at McMaster University in Hamilton and the other is comprised of fellow students at Queen's.

Richard's interest in sugar-powered batteries started, when he was just 16 and a Grade 12 student in Toronto.

He wondered why a battery cell, which he describes as a "unit of controlled combustion," could not be powered by sugar. After all, that is essentially what goes on in the human body.

He conducted his early experiments on fuel cells, with crude equipment such as flower pots and peanut butter jars.

The research has produced a flashlight-sized pack with five times the duration of flash batteries. When it needs more fuel, glucose or dextrose in liquid form is poured in.

Richard is hesitant to claim that electronics and transportation could be revolutionized by his research, although he says, "We dream of that occasionally."

Sydney J. Harris Says

Reformers Pull, Don't Lift

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large:

A "middle - of - the - roader" is someone whose interests don't happen to be threatened at this particular time.

* * *

Many people who like to consider themselves "democratic" do so in order to look up and say, "I am as good as you are"; but many fewer do so in order to look down and say, "You are as good as I am." (In Theodore Parker's fine formulation of what "democratic should really mean.)

* * *

It's only an illusion to imagine that we have a shortage of physicians — what we have is a frightful shortage of psychiatrists, for more than half the patients are taking up their physicians' time with complaints that properly can be attended to only by a psychiatrist.

* * *

Out for the 10 p.m. walk with the other dog owners. I recalled Karl Capek's wry remark: "If dogs could talk, perhaps we'd find it just as hard to get along with them as we do with people."

* * *

The poor who are unhappy are consoled by observing the unhappiness of many of the rich; but the rich who are unhappy are bereft of even that meagre consolation.

Most men who want to "reform" something are content to stand above it and pull, rather than get underneath it and lift.

* * *

Watching a young couple gyrate on the dance floor a good two feet apart, I reflected that the disappearance of old-time "close" dancing is a loss in more ways than one, and Mockey's comment that "dancing is wonderful training for girls — it's the first way they learn to guess what a man is going to do before he does it."

* * *

The trouble with revolutions, of all directions, is that they merely shift, and concentrate power, they don't disperse it; for the only revolution worth having is one that disperses power to the broadest possible basis, which liberalism honors in theory but totally violates in practice.

* * *

When people worship, they generally worship the God of religion rather than the Lord of creation (Who are often competing deities).

* * *

Veterans returning from Southeast Asia to find no jobs awaiting them may well wonder how much we are spending to "bolster the economy" of South Vietnam.

* * *

Speaking of war, it was H. G. Wells who coined the infamously popular phrase, "The war to end war," as a way of drumming up enthusiasm for World War One — and his expressed sense of guilt for this may have been a factor in driving him insane in his last years.

Damage Enough

OTTAWA (CP) — The wife of a Nepean Township councillor who pleaded guilty to a charge of assault after her husband shot at the leg had Oct. 4 has drawn a suspended sentence.

Passing sentence on Barbara Friesen, 33, Tuesday, Judge Thomas Keane said: "There is already been damage enough to the family through publicity."

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For November 13

Your birthday today: Your coming year tends to bring emotional maturity; if you have already achieved it, this will be a satisfying time of strong, creative experience, of triumphage by coping with personal limitations. Material ventures are hard to pred into more profitable forms. There is much work to do now, including some you have not yet learned how to do — get busy. Today's natives are tenacious, have few other features attributed to Scorpio.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your emotions influence your decisions today, particularly when dealing with unfamiliar people. News you hear is incomplete — wait for more of the story.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Inconveniences and minor mischances strengthen the superstition about Friday the 13th. Mutually these qualities have nothing to do with our man-made calendar, but with the relations between our planet the sun and moon, and the other planets. Just play it safe.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You have a streak of unpredictability—now you attract others who are more unpredictable than you. Ask intelligent questions as most of the resistance has no basis.

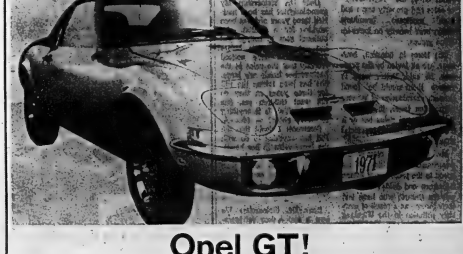
CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Think first about how well you are doing, then proceed carefully to improve matters; rely mainly on your own resources and energy. Travel is not favored now.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Strong imagination serves you well in creative experimentation, but can mislead you in business transactions. Get expert advice to back your judgment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Your tendency to focus on comparative details saves you from loss, but failure to take the big view causes future uncertainty; bleed the advice of more experienced people.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Legal moves, negotiations become sidetracked. Information received is almost certainly incomplete. Play everything simple, relax early.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Keep right on persuading people to see things your way. Experiments, changes of method are not favored now. The correct shawl includes serious thought, prayer.



SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): You are caught in the middle of conflicting emotional pressures; walk a clear path to follow. Muddle through, with as little comment as possible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your way of setting things up runs counter to most opinions, and today you find this out. Argument will get you nowhere—find out the reasons.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Nobody really wishes to be difficult, but today at least some of this influence is at work. Romantic impulses are strong but unrealistic.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Go right through the day with your remarks. A consistent approach to regular chores will bring enough result, while new ventures run into confusion.

Colleges Plan Study Centre

OTTAWA (CP) — Delegates from community colleges across the country voted 119 to 3, Wednesday to form an association to serve as an information and research centre and promote liaison among their institutions.

The vote followed more than two years of preparatory work by a committee of the Canadian Association for Adult Education to establish an organization that would deal primarily with the problems and needs of the colleges.

Delegates to the three-day meeting, which ends today, rejected the committee's proposal for an association with the power "to speak on issues and policies affecting colleges and their mission," on the grounds that the objectives and functions of colleges vary in different provinces.

They also turned down a proposed association function that would have seen it develop guides on curricula, administration and faculty qualifications and admission standards.

Instead, on the urging of a strong Quebec delegation, they limited its scope to information, liaison and research.

Dr. J. Roby Kidd, chairman of the adult education department at the Ontario Institute of Studies in Education, old a conference dinner meeting that community colleges must continue to be concerned about training people for jobs but they should also help adults to continue learning on their own.

Delegates from approximately 90 of the country's 126 community colleges attended. They represented schools in all 10 provinces.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Our 11 - year - old son who is very active athletically complained about a pain in his knee. Without paying too much attention to it we let him continue to play. When it persisted for a couple of weeks, we took him to our doctor who diagnosed it as Osgood - Schlatter's disease.

Since this boy lives for sports and is very good at most of them for a boy his age, he was really heartbroken when he was told he would have to rest his legs for perhaps a year.

Both knees had small bumps about one inch below the knee cap, and were quite painful. After a few months of rest, most of the swelling disappeared. He played some basketball and tennis this summer and went out for football later. But after a couple of days the swellings and pain got quite bad again. So we had him drop football. To ease his mental pain we let him stay on as equipment manager for the grade school team.

A few weeks ago this same thing showed up on one knee of our 13 - year - old daughter. Since this hit our children, we have been hearing of many similar cases. What do you think of sports for such children? — Mr. K.

Comment: As you say, Osgood - Schlatter's disease is more common that some people think. When it strikes preteens and teenagers one of the basic forms of treatment is to prescribe rest for the extremity — and not subject it to sports or overexertion.

In many patients, the affected limb is put in complete rest for months in a cast. We do not know what causes the disease. It is an inflammation of the tibia (leg bone) near the knee. Complete rest enables the normal circulation in the bone to restore itself and return to normal.

Meanwhile, Mr. K., I suggest that you allow neither your son nor daughter to engage in sports. At least not until your physician gives them permission to do so.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is wearing the clothes of a cancer (of the stomach) victim safe if they have been professionally dry - cleaned? — Mrs. Z.

Comment: Yes. Cancer is not contagious.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My granddaughter has been married three years and has been working for a dentist. Her husband goes to college and has one more year before graduation. I have noticed recently that the veins in the back of her hands are large. She has been taking the Pill for three years as they do not want children yet. She seems healthy. Is it anything to worry about? — Mrs. A.

Comment: I doubt that the Pill has anything to do with the large veins in her hands. Just as some people have a larger (healthy) nose than others, so some have larger (healthy) veins that stand out.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: We own a two - door refrigerator-freezer and keep it well-filled at all times because it is difficult for me to go to the store often to buy fresh items. Some of the foods have been unused for many months. Once the refrigerator had to be repaired and was out of function for over 48 hours. Another time, during a storm, it was again out of use for over two days. Now I'm afraid to use the foods. What do you advise? — Mrs. G.

Comment: A good rule is, "When in doubt, foods go out." But sometimes this can be quite expensive and unnecessary. Why not get the opinions of the electric light company and of your own doctor before you discard your meats and fish and other edibles? Play safe, but don't be too compulsive about throwing everything away.

Tax Base Mutilated Says Lewis

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario New Democrat Leader Stephen Lewis said Wednesday the provincial government is mutilating the province's tax base and impeding genuine tax reform with a "truly pernicious affair" of tax rebates to property-owners, farmers and low-income pensioners.

Mr. Lewis, described a recently announced plan to rebate to farmers 25 per cent of their school taxes as a desperate effort by the provincial Conservatives to retrieve public favor.

He said it is an extension of the rebate to home-owners introduced as a vote-getting device prior to the 1968 provincial elections.

Mr. Lewis told a meeting of 125 party members from an Ottawa area that the provincial government claims the tax refunds offset the "regressivity" of sales and property taxes and high medicare premiums which bear heavily on lower-income groups.

The taxes in question, however, are all levied by the province, he said. Better ways to reduce them would be found through examination of present corporation taxes, the possibility of a capital gains tax or a c h a n g e in federal-provincial sharing of income-tax revenue...

Mr. Lewis also blamed the government for failing to respond to the problems of Indian fishermen and guides in Northwestern Ontario who have lost their income as a result of mercury pollution in the Wabigoon River, Indians on the White Dog-Islington r e s e r v e had sought $23,000 to buy saws and other forestry equipment to fell a woodcutting contract but so far Queen's Park has failed to react, he said.

Fewer Than Third Of School Texts Published Here

OTTAWA (CP) — Fewer than a third of all school texts used in Canada are published in Canada, say representatives of the Canadian Teachers Federation.

The federation so far has not taken a stand in the controversy about whether a major school text publishing house, Ryerson Press, should be sold by the United Church of Canada to the American-controlled publishing house McGraw-Hill of Canada Ltd.

But the federation, which represents about 200,000 elementary and secondary school teachers in Canada, has long amount of Canadian content in school programs.

Federation spokesmen said in an interview that the western provinces now are in an especially difficult position because they get the spill-over of textbooks from other markets, both American and Canadian.

They also say that the problem with textbooks goes deeper than just where the books are published. They make these points:

—School texts written in this country are aimed mainly at the large markets in Ontario and Quebec, at the expense of other areas of Canada.

—Most texts written in the U.S. are aimed at a national market, meaning they meet "lowest common denominator" standards of the varying state education systems and avoid issues that might be objected to in some geographic areas.

Norman Goble, federation secretary-general, says it is hard to assess how much the use of American texts is affecting Canadian students, since teachers and administrators organizing Canadian school programs tend to act as a buffer.

He says a change in present conditions may not be possible without some form of government aid but at the same time suggests that, in an era of rapid change, "we may be too wedded to the idea of the book," especially long-lasting hard-cover ones.

"I'd like to see a situation where books are available for reference but are not a major teaching instrument," he said.

Report Says Publishers To Blame for Problems

TORONTO (CP) — The Telegram says a report to be tabled in the Commons this month claims that a lack of agreement among Canadian publishers has caused many of the industry's problems.

The newspaper says the report criticizes the publishers of books and periodicals for not putting up a united front and lobbying for any legislation they feel is necessary.

The Telegram says the report claims the Canadian publishing industry has adequate resources and does not need the government financial help it says it does.

The paper says the study was conducted over a six-month period by a Toronto firm of chartered accountants, Ernst and Ernst, for the federal department of industry, trade and commerce which received the results last Thursday.

Church Colleges Say Old Prejudices Survive

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's church-related colleges say provincial government reluctance to recognize them as fully-academic institutions is based largely on "old fears and prejudices" that have little place in modern Canada.

The comment was in a brief prepared for submission today to the commission on post-secondary education in Ontario. The church-operated colleges and theological institutions ask for full financial support of their teaching function.

The commission, appointed last year to make recommendations for higher education in Ontario for the next 20 years, made no mention of church-related colleges in its interim report published Monday.

The colleges include Waterloo Lutheran University and affiliated or federated colleges of the Universities of Toronto, Ottawa, Waterloo and Western Ontario, London, and of Laurentian University, Sudbury.

They are Roman Catholic, United Church of Canada, Anglican or Mennonite. Together they claim a total of 11,362 graduate and undergraduate students—11 per cent of the province's university enrolment.

The brief says the church-related colleges are not sectarian institutions dominated by churches, but bona fide academic schools overseen by academic senates.

"In all cases—except for Waterloo Lutheran University which has its own senate—the church colleges are governed by the senates of the provincially-operated universities.

"These senates are academic bodies, not sectarian," says the brief. "By 1969-70 church control or dictation is non-existent as to faculty, students or subject matter."

The colleges are open to all students regardless of religion also to those with no religion at all.

"We submit there is no longer any reason for denying equality of treatment to the theological colleges on grounds that may once have been valid."

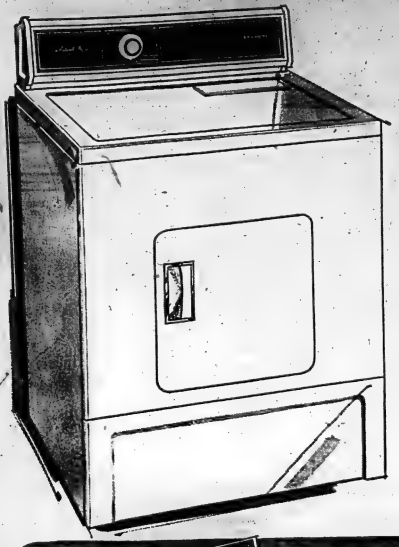
Quieter Aircraft Essential

MONTREAL (CP) — The future of supersonic aircraft could become bleak unless engine sound levels are made quieter than those of current sub-sonic aircraft, a Canadian department of transport official said today.

T. M. McGrath, chief of airport services and properties, said the greatest impediment to airport development is noise.

"Unless the problem is solved, the future of commercial aviation may well be challenged as witness the strong anti-SST opinion developing in the U.S. and Europe," he told the convention of the Airport Operators Council International.

"Unless the SST can be quietened, and I mean made a great deal quieter than present generation aircraft, we may well witness the killing of this technological advance by ordinary people standing guard to their environment."



He said noise was a primary factor in the transport department's decision to locate the new Montreal airport at Ste. Scholastique, 32 miles northwest of the city.

The airport itself will occupy 18,000 acres but "we have filed expropriations of 85,000 acres of land . . . to make sure the new airport will have no noise problems with nearby communities.

British Drug Checks Cancer

LONDON (AP) — A British scientist reported Wednesday the discovery of a drug he said controls the spread of cancer in mice.

"We are not saying it is a breakthrough but it is an advance," said Dr. K. Hellmann, a department head at the Imperial Cancer Research Fund laboratories in London.

He told the British Press Association that the drug has been used to prevent the formation of secondary cancer—most often the ones that kill—from a primary cancer in mice.

Now, Hellmann added, the drug is being tried on human patients in London, Glasgow and Belfast. But he cautioned that the results will not be known for some time.

The drug is known as bis-diamino-dipitrazine, or ICRF 159.

Bertrand Gets Impression Quebec Trails After Ottawa

QUEBEC (CP) — Continued questions by opposition parties of the Liberal government's handling of the Cross-Laporte affair will highlight activity in the Quebec national assembly today.

An emergency debate on government steps in the first major crisis of its six-month-old life began Wednesday with Opposition Leader Jean-Jacques Bertrand voicing the impression that Quebec was "trailing along behind Ottawa."

Mr. Bertrand will resume his talk at 3 p.m. today when the assembly sits again, to be followed by Camil Samson, head of the 13-man Ralliement Creditiste party, and Camille Laurin, spokesman for the seven-member Parti Quebecois.

Premier Robert Bourassa will speak after the three opposition leaders.

Treading lightly, Mr. Bertrand gave the Bourassa government the "benefit of the doubt" to its actions since the kidnapping Oct. 5 of British diplomat James Cross.

But he demanded all the facts:

How can the government show that a state of "apprehended insurrection" existed in Quebec before the federal War Measures Act was invoked in Ottawa Oct. 16?

How much did Ottawa influence Justice Minister Jerome Choquette's statements Oct. 10 in which he rejected the terrorist kidnappers' demands for the release of 23 convicted or accused terrorists?

Had Ottawa or Quebec taken the "initiatives and responsibilities in negotiations with the Front de Liberation du Quebec for the release of Mr. Cross and Pierre Laporte, Quebec labor minister kidnapped Oct. 10 and murdered a week later?

Had the Quebec government abdicated any of its responsibilities to the federal government which invoked the War Measures Act—"a radical, drastic measure?"

"I do not judge," the former premier said. "I do not criticize."

"I want to know officially from the prime minister, who had the initiative, and why we and the news media has the impression the government was not governing, that the Quebec government was trailing along behind Ottawa."

A more forceful questioning of the government's action is expected to come from the Parti Quebecois, highly critical of widened police powers under the War Measures Act.

Will Broadcast FLQ News

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre Pascau, public affairs director of the French-language radio station CKLM, said today the station will no longer yield to "indirect pressure" not to broadcast news of any communication received by them from the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

He said the station did not intend to broadcast the content of any statements—which would be contrary to the War Measures Act which prohibits advocacy of the aims of the outlawed FLQ—but only "to mention them, to report on them."

Robarts on Resignation Rumor

When I Make Decisions I Will Announce Them

TORONTO (CP) — Premier John Robarts said today that after nine years in office he often considers "what my future might be," but that he will make his own announcement of retirement plans when he is ready.

Mr. Robarts, replying to Liberal Leader Robert Nixon, told the legislature "it would be an absolute fallacy to say I don't sometimes consider what my future might be. And I don't deal in fallacies."

However, "I have to make my own decisions and when I do, I will announce them."

Mr. Nixon, referring to rumors that the premier would announce his resignation before Christmas, asked Mr. Robarts to "set the worried minds of your supporters at rest."

"There should be greater concern over the future leadership of the Liberal party," said Allan Lawrence, minister of mines and northern affairs.

His remark was a reference to rumors that some Liberals are dissatisfied with the leadership of Mr. Nixon and the performance of his caucus in the house.

Mr. Robarts said "the swirls of rumors wreath themselves around one" all the time where political leadership is concerned.

He thought the latest rumors might have been stimulated when he was absent from the house Thursday "because I didn't feel well."

He assured the house that an early-morning cabinet meeting today had nothing to do with the Progressive Conservative leadership but was called to make sure all business is tidied up before the legislature ends some time today.

"There have been no secret meetings, no laying of plans," he said.

Heath Will Confer With Trudeau Soon

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Heath will confer with Prime Minister Trudeau at Ottawa next month, diplomatic sources disclosed today.

Heath will stop off at Ottawa at the time he also visits Washington to hold talks with President Nixon. A detailed announcement is to be made later today.

This will be Heath's first meeting with Trudeau since the British leader took office last June and a long list of issues is likely to be discussed, informants said.

Bay of Bengal Tidal Wave May Have Killed Thousands

DACCA, Pakistan (Reuter) — A tidal wave, apparently started by a hurricane, has hit the island of Dubla in the Bay of Bengal and may have washed away several thousand Hindu pilgrims there, usually reliable reports said today.

Authorities of the Khulna district which administers Dubla, expressed concern about the fate of 72,000 pilgrims performing religious rites on the island, the reports said.

The hurricane also was feared to have caused serious damage to other offshore islands and to Khulna, Chittagong and Cox's Bazar.

Communications were disrupted and no further information was immediately available.

Canada Backs China in UN But Without Sales Pitch

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada said today it supports the admission of Communist China to the 127-member world organization as soon as it is clear that such a step is the wish of a "significant proportion of the membership."

The announcement was made in the General Assembly today in a brief speech by Canadian Ambassador Yvon Beaulne that said little that could be considered as a sales pitch for Communist membership.

Beaulne, speaking on the second day of the annual China debate, said Canada will support the Albanian resolution calling for the admission of the Communist Chinese and expulsion of the Nationalists.

And he said that Canada will continue past to support the American-sponsored resolution that says admission of China is an important question requiring a two-thirds majority for passage.

Beaulne said: "One of the most important developments in Canadian external relations in recent years has been our agreement with the People's Republic of China on mutual recognition and the establishment of diplomatic relations, effective Oct. 13.

"The Canadian government believes that the government of the Peoples Republic of China should occupy the seat of China in the UN. We look forward especially to the day when the People's Republic will be seated in this assembly and the Security Council."

He also said that the exclusion of Communist China over the years has "hampered the UN in fulfilling its role as a centre for harmonizing the action of nations."

Canada, he said would support the resolution to seat China this year but if, in the judgment of Canada, "continued support of such a resolution could in the future frustrate the will of the General Assembly, my government will change its position."

The decision on the important question came after a review by the cabinet.

Kidnapping Discussed

Leon Balcer's Niece Furnished Hideout

Sudden Change Came

MONTREAL (CP) — Lise Balcer, 21, hails from a respected Quebec family. Her uncle, Leon Balcer, was solicitor-general and transport minister in the Diefenbaker administration. Her father died 12 years ago of wounds suffered in the Second World War.

How is it that a girl with this background was arrested the day after the War Measures Act was invoked, then charged with membership in the clandestine Front de Liberation du Quebec?

"We don't know where it started, or when," said her mother Thursday. M.P. Balcer was shopping when she heard a radio report that Lise, in jail since Oct. 17, was a witness at the inquest into the death of Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte.

Lise testified that she lived for a time with kidnap suspect Paul Rose at the bungalow in St.-Hubert where Mr. Laporte was held by his abductors and is believed to have been strangled.

"You see a change in them suddenly, but you don't know what it is," Mrs. Balcer said of her daughter.

"I've had nothing to do with her for three years. She left home. You can't control them."

Raven-haired Lise, wearing a green army shirt, sleeves rolled up and tails hanging, had a prison pallor Thursday after nearly a month in jail and looked heavy, although she identified clearly and sometimes with irony and bite.

In testimony she said she met Paul Rose at the Maison du Pêcheur, a hippie hostel in Percé, in the summer of 1969. Residents of the resort town tried to drive the youths who gathered there away.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Cloud covers most of Ontario this morning. Some light rain and drizzle persists in extreme eastern Ontario associated with a low moving northeast up the Atlantic coast. Light snow is falling over the upper lakes. A large cell of high pressure over northwestern Ontario is expected to slowly move eastward over the next 36 hours bringing colder air over all regions by Saturday. Cold northwesterly winds will add to the chill as an Arctic high pushes slowly south. The above-normal temperatures of the last few days over the region will gradually drop back to near normal readings Saturday.

Opposing Abduction She Left in August

By GERARD McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP) — The almost casual nature of the Pierre Laporte kidnapping was further illustrated Thursday as Lise Balcer, 21-year-old niece of a former federal cabinet minister, testified at an inquest into the slaying last month of the Quebec labor minister.

Miss Balcer, arrested under the War Measures Act Oct. 17 and charged last week with membership in the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec, told the inquest how she helped rent the house where Mr. Laporte was held and later listened to the suspected kidnappers discuss the abduction.

"We started talking very superficially — a hunt kidnapping someone," she said. "We all talked about it.

"We, wanted to liberate the political prisoners like all the kidnappers had done before," she added, apparently referring to South American abductions.

"No names were mentioned but it was agreed it would have to be someone important.

"Anyway, there are lots of important people in Quebec."

One is her uncle, Leon Balcer, former member of Parliament who was first solicitor-general, then transport minister in the 1957-63 government of John Diefenbaker.

Miss Balcer said she "wasn't for" a kidnapping so she left the St. Hubert house in August and went to Percé.

The inquest was adjourned until next Friday. It began last Saturday with startling testimony by Bernard Lortie, 21, who described himself and three other men as the ones who kidnapped Mr. Laporte Oct. 10.

Lortie named brothers Paul Rose, 27, and Jacques Rose, 23, and Francis Simard as the other kidnappers.

Miss Balcer said she posed as Paul Rose's wife earlier this year to rent the bungalow under the names Mr. and Mrs. Paul Blais.

She told of buying furniture for the house, rented under an assumed name, from stores such as Woolco, adding sardonically, with a comedian's timing: "On credit."

She said that during the five months she lived at the house, the Rose brothers, Lortie, Simard and Claude Norency, arrested during the summer near Percé, Que., discussed kidnapping.

"They talked about bringing someone into the house in a trunk," she said. "They would have needed a pretty big trunk. Anyway, that's the way they talked."

She said the house hadn't been rented for the specific purpose of kidnapping.

She and two other witnesses charged as FLQ members — Jean-Luc Arene, 21, who acted like a celebrity in the witness box, and Normand Turgeon, who said he was weak from a six-day "hunger strike" — all referred often to the Maison du Pecheur at Perce in identifying photos of various persons for the court.

Miss Balcer said she had spent a lot of time last year with the Roses in Perce at the bars like hippie compound 100 yards from Perce Rock at the tip of the Gaspe peninsula.

She and 23 other youths were arrested there in August and charged with illegally entering a private fishing camp. Miss Balcer and Turgeon also were charged with assault. All were released on bail.

The bars-commune, a headache to the tourist resort for the last two summers, went up in flames in late September.

Miss Balcer said she returned from the Gaspe in late September and she was with Arene when they met Paul Rose in a parking lot, lending him some money. She hadn't seen Rose since, she testified.

She said she didn't return again to the Armstrong Street bungalow where Mr. Laporte was held.

Complaints Hogwash - - Agnew

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice-president Spiro T. Agnew has dismissed as hogwash complaints about Republican campaign tactics. If any mistake was made, he said, it was "that we undersold our message."

Agnew, the administration's hard-line campaigner, said Republicans nationally accomplished their overriding and critical election-day objective by improving President Nixon's "precarious position in the United States Senate."

The vice-president, talking to a fund-raising dinner Thursday night, said Nixon will be two to four votes better off in the new Senate, and that "is a parliamentary revolution."

Effect of Bramalea Strike Could Be Felt in Belleville

Work stoppages at Northern Electric's Belleville plant could result from any prolonged strike at the company's Bramalea factory.

Such production halts could bring layoffs next month, a company spokesman indicated today.

Women Injured In Crash

TRENTON - (Staff) — Two local women are in Memorial Hospital here today following a single car accident Thursday morning.

Mrs. Audrey Harvey, 34, driver of the vehicle, and Mrs. Patricia Donnelly, 31, a passenger, received multiple lacerations in the mid-morning mishap.

The two residents of RR 2 Carrying Place were injured when the car left County Road 64 between Brighton and Carrying Place, hitting a hydro pole.

Damage to the automobile was $900, Brighton detachment OPP are investigating.

The warning came in the wake of a massive layoff threat at Northern Electric's Montreal operations.

Thursday, the company posted notices at its two Montreal plants informing 14,000 employees that about 6,500 may be laid off before Christmas because of the continuing Bramalea strike.

The Montreal plants need switching equipment from the strike-bound Ontario facility for production of telephone and communications systems.

All Northern Electric plants have various degrees of interdependence, R. J. Carey, personnel manager at the Belleville works said today.

"At Belleville, we normally obtain some supplies from the struck plant . . . and other supplies from various works which might be affected by a prolonged strike.

Mr. Caverly said by "judicious use" of current supplies stocked by the Belleville operation, the company is "attempting to balance the workload and maintain full production" at the plant.

"However, a prolonged strike would eventually cause work stoppages here — as in other locations.

"Some employees could be affected during the month of December," said Mr. Caverly.

There was no estimate of the number of employees who could be hit by such stoppages.

The Belleville plant currently employs just under 1,000.

About 3,500 workers—members of the United Electrical Workers — struck Nov. 3 at company wage increases of seven per cent the first year and four per cent the second year.

The union is seeking a 15 per cent increase on an 18-month contract.

Plan Approval Recommended

The Belleville and Suburban Planning Board last night recommended approval of two draft plans for subdivision, one plan entered by J. L. Farrell Construction, the other by Maurice H. Rollins Construction Ltd.

The Farrell subdivision plan is located on the east side of North Park Street approximately 600 feet south of the hydro tower line that crosses North Park Street.

This plan consists of 69 single family building lots and one multiple family lot. Submitted originally in March of 1968, plans were delayed until plans were completed for the exact location of a trunk sewer to drain part of the northwest Belleville area, crossing the proposed subdivision to the northerly side.

Submitted to the Advisory Committee on May 28, 1970, the BSPB suggested various amendments to the plan. The plan was restudied and redrafted to include the recommendations of the Advisory Committee. Verbal agreement was received for provision of a satisfactory grade treatment of certain lots.

The Rollins subdivision plan is located on the east side of North Park Street immediately south of the Farrell draft plan.

This plan contains 14 single family lots and two multi - family lots.

The Advisory Committee met on Nov. 10 to consider the draft plan, offering such suggestions as the inclusion of street names which will meet with the approval of the planning board and that certain revisions on the draft plan be complied with.

The approval of the planning board on these draft plans will be forwarded to city council and the minister of Municipal Affairs.

Turkey Bingo To Aid Group

Over the next six weeks it is the turkey season and this year the Belleville branch of the Mental Health Association could be our beneficiary.

Scheduled for Dec. 4 at St. Thomas Parish Hall is a pot luck supper and turkey bingo, with proceeds from the evening being turned over to the local organization.

Sponsoring the evening will be the Belleville Progressive Conservative Association.

KGH Forced to Carry Heavy Abortion Load

A Kingston gynecologist says an unfair burden is being put on Kingston General Hospital facilities because other area hospitals have no abortion committees.

Dr. L. R. Clow told a group of Kingston doctors this week that KGH is the only hospital in the district with an abortion committee set up under new federal regulations permitting therapeutic abortions.

There is no abortion committee at Hotel Dieu Hospital in Kingston, or at hospitals in Belleville, Picton or Brockville. This increases KGH's case load, he said.

Kingston General is virtually providing abortions on demand, Mr. Clow said.

This September, 21 therapeutic abortions were performed at KGH, compared with 24 in the first four months of 1970 and 24 in the next four months. The total number for 1969 was 71.

Under the amendments to the criminal code of 1969, therapeutic abortions may be performed if a hospital committee of at least three persons says the woman's health is endangered.

The KGH committee is comprised of the head of the department of obstetrics and gynecology, the head of the department of medicine and the head of the department of psychiatry.

"We have a rule, my colleagues and I, under age 17 we do it, over 40 we do it," said Mr. Clow.

Most of the women who apply for therapeutic abortions are married.

Even under the new law, local doctors must perform themselves to give an abortion to a married woman who cannot afford more children or to a woman who has a strong possibility of bearing a deformed child, said Mr. Clow. Doctors must find a medical reason, such as a heart condition or varicose veins, to do the abortions.

Dr. Clow said he thought the decision to have a therapeutic abortion should be one made by the doctor and the patient together, not by the law. The hospital won't consider doing an abortion once a woman is over 18 weeks pregnant.

Dr. Clow criticized the system of abortion committees, which requires at least three people on the committee, none of whom may perform abortions. Thus a hospital must have four doctors, three for the committee and one to perform the operation, before an abortion can be performed legally.

Ski School Registrants Limited This Season

This year's sponsorship by the Belleville Recreation and Arena Committee of all instruction at the Oak Hills Ski Club should be limited to approximately the number taking part last year.

This is the feeling of committee members who yesterday turned down a proposal by the recreation director that provision be made for participation of up to 175 skiers for the 1971 season.

Last year 173 persons took part in the Saturday morning ski instruction at the Oak Hills at a net cost of $300 to the recreation commission.

This year's proposed program for 275 skiers would have had a net cost of $1,650 to the committee.

The committee directed that arrangements be made for the hiring of four school buses to provide transportation for a maximum of about 170 skiers. Fees will be increased from $3 single and $6 family to $5 single and $10 family.

Hunter's Body Is Recovered

No inquest will be held into the drowning of a young Brampton man whose body was found Thursday at Point Petrie — near the spot where his boat capsized Tuesday.

Provincial police divers recovered the body of Crandell Frail, 19, Thursday morning after a two-day search of the Lake Ontario shoreline.

He disappeared shortly after he and his cousin, Robert Frail, 20, were thrown in the lake when their punt overturned while retrieving ducks they had shot.

Robert Frail clung to the upturned craft for about an hour, before being rescued by local fishermen.

Rain, Rain Going to Stay

It's been wet in Belleville and surrounding area the past four days and the duty forecaster of CFB Trenton has optimistically predicted that it could get even wetter before the second half of next week.

The forecaster said that rain was forecast for Monday and Tuesday and that today would continue to have periods of rain.

This current rain fest began Tuesday when .61 inches fell on the Quinte area.

Yesterday saw this week's biggest downpouring of all when 1.04 inches fell on the city. Today so far rain has been described as just a "trace" by the duty forecaster.

Normal rainfall for the month of November is 2.69 inches and already, only 13 days 1.99 inches fall.

Temperatures have also been uncommonly warm with throughout most of this month well above November's normal.

Normal temperature for this month registers at a low of 30 and high of 46. This year minimums have registered as high as the 60s and as low as the 30s although most overnight temperatures have been in 40s and 50s.

One day this month the mercury rose as high as 63 degrees. Last night's low, as an example, was 50 degrees.

But as far as temperatures are concerned, the time for changing has arrived as winter temperatures will arrive in Belleville by tomorrow.

The duty forecaster described Saturday's weather as cloudy, windy and colder, for which November is traditionally known.

Highs and lows in the next three or four days will fluctuate between the low 30s and the high 40s.

Tonight's low will be in the 30s and the high tomorrow will not move above 40 degrees.

Anti-pollution Committee To Be Formed

The first citizens' anti-pollution committee in Belleville will be organized next Monday.

A meeting of all persons interested in such a project has been called for 8 p.m. at the Canadian Legion Hall, on Pinnacle Street. Robert Andrus, Quinte District Labor Council president said today.

Formation of such a committee was one of the aims of a recent anti - pollution seminar held by the council and Loyalist College.

Concert to Trace Musical History

The story of America's musical comedy will be presented in song Nov. 16 at BCI auditorium in one of the events of the Community Concerts series.

DOROTHY WARENSKJOLD

Dorothy Warenskjold's Musical Theatre, comprised of the soprano and an eight - voice vocal ensemble, will perform a synopsis version of the opera Faust, and a post - intermission program. From Minstrel to Musical. The latter includes special arrangements of selections by Stephen Foster, Gilbert and Sullivan, Strauss, Victor Herbert, Rudolf Friml, Sigmund Romberg, and recent Broadway musical composers such as Rodgers and Hammerstein and Lerner and Loewe.

"The presentation is a kind of musical cavalcade, covering more than a century of music and outlining the development of the American musical — an indigenous art form.

Miss Warenskjold, a native of California, is a lyric soprano who has appeared with opera companies in San Francisco, Chicago, San Antonio, Pittsburgh and Seattle.

Memberships in the Community Concert Association will be available at the door before Monday night's concert.

Stray Shot Hits Car

Careless hunters can be a threat to motorists on the highway!

This can be attested to by a Tweed couple, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Spencer, who last week had a stray bullet rip through a side window of their auto.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer were driving south on Highway 41 a short distance north of Kaladar when the bullet struck the window on the driver's side and apparently ricocheted into the woods along the roadway.

Just Testing

Joyce Aikman, left, and Marlene Prudhomme, run test on equipment at Belleville General Hospital ambulance dispatch centre. Monday, the operation becomes a real thing when until it takes over Belleville area ambulance calls and operates mutual aid emergency scheme for Quinte district.

All Area Ambulances To Be Co-ordinated

Starting Monday, the numbers are 962-3443 and 962-3444.

By dialing them, Belleville-are residents will contact the Quinte district's first standardized emergency service.

Centre of the operation is Belleville General Hospital where a radio dispatch unit maintains contact with all ambulances in the Quinte counties.

Instituted by the Emergency Health Services division of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, the operation will handle all ambulance calls in the immediate area.

But its scope takes in the entire district incorporating all private ambulance services in a mutual aid scheme.

As such, it gives new mobility to a fleet of 12 ambulances now serving an area from Brighton to Napanee, north from Lake Ontario to Sharon.

The scheme is part of the standardization of emergency services in the province, explains Fred Skelton, EHS communications officer now supervising final technical touches to the BGH installation.

By monitoring ambulance calls in the area, the dispatch centre keeps constant track of all emergency vehicle locations.

This links all units into a backup service, where ambulances can be rapidly positioned or moved to assist in any unexpected situation.

Technical key to new mobility is a transmitter positioned on the provincial police radio tower on the summit of the Oak Hills south of Stirling.

It's a vantage point with radio coverage over a wide area — throwing a powerful signal into the hilly north country.

For ambulance operators, the new electronic link also is a crucial emergency aid.

They are in instant communication with an aid-dispatch base in the event of mishap or breakdown on the job.

Should an emergency patient develop complications en-route to hospital, a doctor's advice is only a call away, says Mr. Skelton.

In such circumstances, the ambulance call is relayed to the hospital's emergency department. There a doctor, diagnosing the symptoms broadcast from the vehicle can direct the ambulance attendant in the treatment necessary.

If a doctor is not immediately available at the emergency unit, the contact can be made by telephone between the physician's home and the vehicle.

Direct radio contact — providing an on-the-spot analysis of a distress situation — also ensures faster mobilization of waiting hospital resources.

Information on the number — and possible condition — of patients can be transmitted to the hospital while ambulances are still enroute.

The new service also inserts Belleville into an emergency provincial network. (Ingoldsby dispatch—centre neighbors are Kingston on the east, Oshawa on the west.)

This makes it a critical contact point for ambulances journeying with patients to major medical centres.

In the event of complications — either medical or mechanical — the BGH centre is a vital emergency standby service.

In Belleville, the city's two private ambulance services—Lasalle and City Ambulance—still provide the units to be despatched on local calls.

The proportion of calls given each company is based on past volume handled by the independent operator, says Mr. Skelton.

However, he adds, this rotation is subject to "a proviso" that if an emergency demands the nearest ambulance is despatched.

The BGH centre is manned by four operators, rotating on duty round-the-clock.

They not only are qualified as radio operators up to federal government standards, they also have been trained in first aid and medical terminology, says the EHS official.

Encounter with Bear Costs Trustee $400

A northern trustee's life is fraught with many hazards—all part of his job of representing ratepayers in one of Ontario's largest and longest counties.

He faces long trips to board meetings over winter rutted roads — and things that go bump in the night.

Trustee F. John Follis of Bancroft, now $400 poorer as a result of an incident two weeks ago on Highway 62, can testify to that.

He was returning to Bancroft from a board building committee meeting in Belleville — his 183rd round trip on board business since his election in December, 1966.

"A premonition suddenly hit me at Bannockburn that this would be the night I would hit a deer," recounts Mr. Follis.

Instead, about halfway between Bannockburn and Millbridge, Mr. Follis was brought to an abrupt halt when a bear loped in front of his car.

Both the beast, estimated later to weigh 350 pounds, and Mr. Follis' car died instantly — but the trustee was taking no chances.

He remained inside the car until Walter Watson, OLS, of Belleville and his survey crew happened along the road and came to his rescue.

They towed the pair to a garage and removed the carcass of the bear from the highway before it could trip up another motorist.

Madoc OPP investigated, Lands and Forests disposed of the animal, and mechanics took charge of Mr. Follis' heavily damaged car. He proceeded to Bancroft in stitches at the public school graduation.

The trustee has no bearskin rug to remind him of the collision. A nature lover, he was shaken by the incident.

"I couldn't bear to look at the poor thing," he said.

Bush Announces His Candidacy

Jack Bush, reeve of Sidney Township for the past two years, has officially announced that he intends to seek nomination for another two-year term.

The official announcement was received this morning by The Intelligencer. Nomination day is Nov. 25, elections to be held on Dec. 7.

Reeve Bush, an 11-year veteran on Sidney Township council, serving as deputy reeve between 1964 and 1968, is a graduate of Stirling High School and owner of Riverside Construction.

He is now serving on the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board, is chairman of the Hastings County Home for the Aged Committee, serves on the Canada Manpower Committee (dealing with unemployment and manpower problems in Belleville and the surrounding area), is chairman of the Information Committee of the Lower Trent Conservation area, and is chairman of the committee to head up the proposed Quinte Planning Area.

A strong worker for the proposed Quinte Area Water and Sewer Board, Mr. Bush advocates the importance of both area boards.

"They are much needed in this area . . . a very important move . . . not only to provide services in an orderly fashion, but they tie in with industrial growth," he asserted.

Mr. Bush stated that he had a "really good council, and I'm pleased with the co-operation as well as that of the township staff."

A supporter of minor hockey, Reeve Bush sponsors a Riverside Construction peewee team in Stirling and a midget team in Frankford.

Married, he and his wife Joanne, and their six children live at RR 3, Frankford.

In Fourth Place

To coin a phrase from Prime Minister Trudeau, there may be some more "bleeding hearts" in Canada today. Not in connection with that security matter which is of such pressing concern in the country today, but rather the word from Washington that Canada has slipped to fourth place among the world's most prosperous peoples.

We used to kid ourselves that only the United States was ahead in the economic stakes, but there was never any hard and fast certainty about this and there were all those mean suggestions that Sweden was actually up there in second place.

Indeed, that is the way it is, according to the world Bank (known officially as the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development). To make matters worse, Canada has been displaced from third place by Switzerland. The countries' per-capita gross national product is listed as follows: United States $3,980; Sweden $3,635; Switzerland $3,490 and Canada $3,480.

Could it be that in Sweden's cradle-to-the-grave welfare state there is no poverty, as there is in Canada. Yet if such a system discourages individual effort, as is generally supposed, why is it that the Swedes produce more per capita than does free-enterprise in Canada?

And what about income questioned by strikes? In Sweden, management and labor most regularly to iron out matters affecting wages and working conditions. As a result strikes are few. There is collective bargaining in Canada, but demands by labor of late have been well-nigh insatiable and the result is seen in the many work stoppages that have plagued the country.

When Canadians speak of "standard of living" they are thinking primarily of the material aspect. But "quality of life," another phrase heard often today, is another thing altogether. We were reminded of this while watching the CBC's This Land program Wednesday night. It had to do with Bragg's Island, Newfoundland, its handful of residents and the fishing from which they earned a bare living. In material terms that is what impressed us more was their resourcefulness, their habit of hard daily work, their love of this remote home by the sea, and their faith.

Costly Leak

These strangely mild November days have been broken by a return to rainy conditions. This will be little comfort to Toronto's executive committee which the other day was told it could cost $400,000 to stop the leaks in the roof of City Hall.

Yes, City Hall, which as Alderman Frederick Beavis has noted is supposed to be the most modern in Canada. How with its leaky roof (resulting in ruined floors and carpets) it is, in the alderman's words, becoming a joke across the country.

To Toronto of course it is no joke. It is little use having one of the most modern places of administrative real estate anywhere, but embarrassing if at the same time it is structurally unsound.

Belleville has some experiences of buildings with structural defects too and it does make one pause and wonder if more care is not necessary in putting things together these days.

What Next?

Imagine the CBC and The Globe and Mail (neither of which can be described as hostile to the left-wing viewpoint today) being accused of propagating a Canadian brand of McCarthyism.

Yes, the broadcasting media and the newspaper have been accorded this accolade (if it may be described thus) by the Ottawa correspondent of the Soviet newspaper. We did not catch its name as put out by the CBC, but it seems the Soviet scribe's wrath was aroused by the CBC's cancellation of the program "Lenin's Legacy" and by The Globe and Mail's references to an anti-Lenin exhibition in Toronto which revealed some of the more repressive aspects of the beginnings of Communism.

If this is McCarthyism what should we expect next from the Soviet Press?

Television: A Look at Positive and Negative Forces

By MARTIN ESSLIN (head of BBC Radio Drama) in Unesco Features

Walking through any town or village in Britain on a summer evening when the windows are open, one can see the bluish sheen of the television screen in almost any house. It is therefore possible, if one knows which programs are being broadcast on the three available channels, to know what at that moment is occupying the minds of the people inside the houses.

Indeed, if we regard the continuous stream of thought and emotion which constitutes a human being's conscious mental processes as the most private sphere of his individuality, we might express the effect of this mass communications medium by saying that it gives a number of hours a day —in the United Kingdom between two and two and a half hours —his century man switches his mind from private to collective consciousness. It is a staggering and, in the literal sense of the word, awful thought. The whole considerations are based on figures for television viewing in Britain, where more than 95 per cent of all households possess a set. While other countries may not yet have reached this state of saturation, the likelihood that they, eventually will be universally high, almost to the point of certainty.

Three different channels are available in Britain; in some countries, like the United States up to 18 or more channels are available to viewers. Television in the United States is operated by private enterprise and supported by advertising. In contrast to most countries where it is a public monopoly operated by an agency of the government. Taking the U.S. as an example, it would appear that commercial television, offering more channels, provides the viewer with much more variety. Paradoxically, this is not the case.

The availability of more channels in a commercially operated system, seems rather to restrict than to increase the choice for the viewer. This is true because market research is used to determine what kind of program appeals to the maximum number of viewers at a given time. As a result, there are the same kinds of programs on all channels — situation - comedy series next to other situation-comedy series, Western against Western, football against football. This tends to result in even greater uniformity in the type and level of material offered than in the British or German systems where only three (for the three channels are planned to provide genuine alternatives: serious against light material, arts against sports, intellectually demanding against popular fare.

What is significant is that to the audience as a whole, television is basically a medium of relaxation and entertainment. It is inevitable, therefore, that the distinction between the real and the artificial tends to become blurred, at least sub-consciously. But the critical consequence of this is that even by those who are quite clear in their minds as to what is reality and what is fiction, the ultimate qualitative judgement — was this good or bad television? — is made on the basis of entertainment values. Thus it may happen — indeed will happen almost inevitably — that the real soldiers dying in Viet-Nam will be judged as either more-or-less moving, absorbing, stereotoing than the actors in the war play, and the politician by whether his performance was entertaining as that of the comedian.

The increasing theatricalisation of public life and politics, the selection of candidates by their faces' aptitude to look natural in the conduct of election campaigns according to the television potential of issues rather than their real relevance — all these are ultimately a consequence of the medium's insatiable demand for entertainment material.

On the other hand, the positive, beneficial effects of the vast quantity of material on real, semi-real and pseudo-real events which television pours out must not be overlooked. By the very fact that politics and public affairs have become a branch of the entertainment industry they have been brought nearer to millions of people who never previously gave them a thought.

What of the middle ground of events involving real people but staged and stage-managed by television?

From a cultural point of view this material is the most problematic aspect of television. The pseudo-event, such as the parlor game, the confrontation between interviewer and public personality, and a multitude of variations of the same pattern is entertaining but lists also. By exposing members of the public to the lure of large prizes it contains an element of manipulation, of the exploitation of greed and of the longing for unearned riches which makes it less than harmless amusement. The same applies to interview shows where one must infer the other is paraded before the audience, exposed to more or less searching questioning and then involved in general and fairly trivial conversation. Empty air time is here, literally, filled with vacuousness; the viewer switching off his consciousness and switching it on to material of this kind is replacing his own thoughts by a spiritual and intellectual vacuum.

Nonetheless in the search for material to fill empty spaces by foreseeable and plannable events, television has occasionally performed incalculably useful acts. Thus, to cite an example from the United Kingdom, a program of the parlor-game type, in which archaeologists were asked to guess the origin, nature and age of objects supplied by museums, led to a vast economic of interest in archeology.

Christian Ambassadors

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

This is in reply to the letter from H. Caldwell, printed on Nov. 7, in particular I refer to the statement "as to war, the Bible nowhere prohibits it.".

At Matthew 26:52 Jesus gave direct command to all who would be followers of Him. He said to go and make disciples of people of all nations. Could one make disciples of any nation and be at war with them at the same time? In carrying out this work of making disciples, Paul showed that Christians are ambassadors substituting for Christ, at 2 Corinthians 5:20. An ambassador does not engage in the politics or the wars of the nation to which he is sent, but must remain loyal to the government he was sent by. The One who sent Christians forth as ambassadors was the chief representative of God's Kingdom, a heavenly government. That this is not an earthly government is very clear from Jesus' own words at John 18:36. In view of this, Jesus was sending in His footstep followers, as ambassadors, to each and every nation on the face of this earth to make disciples. For them to engage in the wars of any nation would thus be an act of disloyalty to God's Kingdom.

There are many other scriptures that could be referred to showing that the Apostles and early Christians lived, and if necessary died, for God's Kingdom of which they were ambassadors. Such deaths came not as a result of fighting, but at the hands of persecutors, and often for the reason that these Christians refused to engage in carnal warfare. Secular history as from the first, second and third centuries are unanimous in reporting that the early Christians did not engage in the wars of their day.

Each believer might disagree with me, which he has every right to do. But is he, or anyone else, prepared to stand up and tell us that the Apostles and early Christians showed "inexcusable ignorance of what the Bible says concerning these practices?"

Christmas Stamps

Montreal Gazette

It is hard to believe that anyone could complain about the special Christmas stamps issued by the Canadian Post Office. Nevertheless a number of objections have already been raised about these stamps whose purpose is to draw attention to the holy season which this country shares with much of the world.

In the past the Post Office has produced special Christmas stamps in add a timely color and spirit to yuletide mail. On the whole these have been tastefully designed by professional craftsmen and have met with no particular objections.

This year's issue is a series of reproductions of colored illustrations of Christmas themes done by children. The stamps have a tremendous appeal in their representation of the Christmas spirit through the eyes and skills of children. They have a unique charm, reflecting the innocence and imagination of the artists.

After all, if there is a magic to Christmas, then it is the utter generalness by their adherence to tradition who have kept it alive. If the children of today have caught this spirit, then let it prevail.

Hydro Rates Up Again: 26.25 Per Cent Hike Over Five-year Period

Brockville Recorder and Times

The futility encountered by members of the Legislature's standing committee on public commissions in its annual questions - and - answers session with Ontario Hydro last week was virtually a re-run of last year's performance. A year ago, Hydro had increased its rates six percent; this year an increase of seven percent in wholesale rates to municipalities had just been announced. Each time, Hydro's staff of experts had a batch of facts, figures and graphs on hand to show that the boosts were "inevitable."

Although Hydro officials point out that compared to other provinces, Ontario still gets a "bargain" in power rates, the fact remains that in the past five years, Hydro has increased its rates five times for a total increase of 26.25 percent. And there is nedjudication of a reversal in the trend ahead before 1977, according to Hydro's own estimates.

But the Members of the Legislature on the committee were at a distinct disadvantage in attempting to delve into Hydro's customary higher costs explanation. Hydro has become a gigantic operation and employs long and financial experience in the field of utilities is a complicated subject. Members of the committee frankly admit that they are not equipped to deal with it effectively.

One year ago, after its annual bout with Hydro's experts, the committee's report stated that it was "handicapped in not having personnel available with expertise necessary to analyze and consider such complex matters as rate increases." Minister of Energy and Resources George Kerr this year promised that expert assistance will be provided if the committee requests it. But Liberal committee member Ed Good said a better suggestion — be called for an independent study of jobs how valid Hydro's policies are and how efficient its operation.

"From there on it is a question of responsibility of the individual."

Exactly.

For openers, the Cabinet could get through the obviously list of LLBO laws and throw out all that don't meet this criteria. Then, when the drinkers who know when they've had enough, they should stop.

Newspaper Experiment

Is 'Good' News Any Good?

Brantford Expositor

One of the most frequent criticisms levelled at the news media is the claim that they devote much attention to crime and disasters but virtually ignore most good news. The frustrated optimists who make such charges undoubtedly will be heartened by the founding of The Aquarian Times, a Sacramento, Calif., weekly described by its publisher as "America's first good - news newspaper."

The paper has begun with a flourish, reporting in its first edition that in the U.S. last year 199,459,483 people did not commit a crime, 4,896,720 colleges students took part in campus riots or demonstrations and 201,489,710 Americans did not use illegal drugs. But it remains to be seen whether the apostles of cheer can keep their good - news endeavor full. In the early 1950's Saturday Review experimented with a "Good News" section but soon abandoned the project because of a dearth of suitable items.

Liquor Laws

New Approach Suggested

London Free Press

Provincial Secretary Robert Welch is obviously in a quandary on how to go about bringing Ontario's aggravating liquor laws up to date.

Certainly, his recent remarks demonstrate that he is acutely aware of the critics who charge that many of the Liquor License Board of Ontario's regulations are ridiculous. His problem is to find a guide which rules between what which rules to throw out.

It shouldn't be all that hard. In fact, Mr. Welch already appears to be on the right track. The guide should be that the cardinal objectives of liquor la w s should be safety and health.

Hard Time for Jobless Is Forecast in House

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition forecasters predicted a long, cold winter of disruptive unemployment under current government policies but Finance Minister Edgar Benson indicated Thursday he will stick to the economic thermostat cautiously.

David Lewis, deputy New Democrat Leader, and Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield scored the government in Commons debate for the "deliberate economic slowdown" used by the government to fight inflation. They predicted there will be an unprecedented unadjusted unemployment rate of about nine per cent this winter.

Debate was on an NDP motion calling on the government to institute policies that would "increase significantly the number of jobs available this winter," and Mr. Lewis and Mr. Stanfield offered suggestions.

Under House rules the motion did not come to a vote.

Today, the Commons was in return to clause-by-clause study of the government's Public Order (Temporary Measures) 1970 Act to replace regulations now in force under the War Measures Act.

Thursday's debate followed the announcement earlier in the day that while the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate dropped to 6.6 per cent from 6.9 per cent between September and October—indicating a smaller-than-usual jobless increase for the period—actual unemployment rose to 419,000 from 398,000, up from the jobless count of 314,000 in October, 1969.

Mr. Stanfield said that even when unemployment figures were marginally more favorable in the fall of 1961, unadjusted winter unemployment had risen to nine per cent.

Mr. Lewis said that every responsible economist in the country has predicted the country's unadjusted unemployment rate will rise above nine per cent this winter, with between 750,000 and 800,000 Canadians unemployed, and warned that the government is "heading" for social trouble this winter.

In some areas of Quebec, including eastern Montreal and the Gaspe area, he said, unemployment will probably exceed 20 per cent of the labor force, creating a situation of frustration and despair ripe for revolutionary activities.

Counting women and young people who would give up on trying to enter the labor market —and thus not be counted officially as unemployed—he could see an unemployment count of a million persons this winter representing families totalling up to three million persons.

Mr. Benson said the government's "deep concern over the problems of inflation has not reflected any lack of concern over unemployment."

On the contrary, it had fought inflation as doggedly because rising prices had threatened to undermine "the very foundation of our economy" on which higher and stable levels of employment would have to be based. Edward Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) disagreed, saying economic experts have discounted attempts to predicate economic growth on price stability.

The finance minister said that the government has taken monetary and fiscal measures to expand the economy, but that more care must be taken to move the economy back towards its potential output to avoid excessive surges of inflation-creating demand.

Still the government remained "more than ready in the future" to adopt further measures to promote faster economic expansion "without sacrificing the hard-won gains we have made in our crucial fight to restore economic stability. . . ."

Mr. Lewis said it is probably too late to do anything that will create more than 50,000 or 100,000 jobs this winter because the government had not heeded early warnings from the opposition.

But he presented a five-point program that might have some positive effect:

—An immediate increase in old age pensions.

—An increase of the unemployment insurance maximum weekly benefit to $100 and extension of duration of benefits, as proposed in the government's white paper on unemployment insurance.

—An immediate federal-provincial conference to agree on jobs that could be opened up instantly at all levels of government, such as construction of schools, hospitals and sewers.

—A special program aimed at the highly-industrialized centres of Quebec, which he said deserve special treatment considering the social circumstances there.

—Cutting of "red tape" in the regional expansion department to get projects now being held up under way.

Mr. Stanfield suggested a four-point program:

—The removal of "uncertainties" from the economy through pegging of the Canadian dollar on International markets and a decision on which proposals in its taxation white paper the government was going to retain.

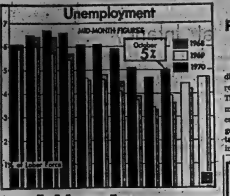
—The bringing down of a fall or early-winter budget to set a clear course on what the government wants and expects from the economy.

—A tax reduction of at least twice the level of the three-per-cent surcharges on personal and corporate income taxes scheduled to expire at the end of 1970, aimed mainly at the lower end of the income scale and at the construction and housing industry.

—A federal-provincial conference on unemployment.

Mr. Stanfield also said the government should help set up an independent agency for economic forecasting, which had been "disastrous" in government hands.

Charles-Eugene Dionne (Crediste—Kamouraska) said the level of unemployment in Quebec is "reaching alarming proportions" and it is time for the government to take action.



The economic system, he said, "is working in slow motion in a country of high speed."

In defending government economic policy, Mr. Benson said: "We have not been prepared to sacrifice long-term benefits for the economy in order to achieve short-lived illusory gains because we are convinced it is not in the best interests of the Canadian people to do so."

Ample credit, he said, is currently available in the banking system to supply the needs of all credit-worthy borrowers.

Unemployment had reached its peak and he was confident Canada could look forward to continued improvement.

While actual capital expenditures by business this year had fallen "significantly short" of the large increase indicated by company investment intentions, a "strong underpinning" to capital investment this year had been provided by the strong resurgence in housing construction.

Jobless Increase

The unemployment rate in October was five per cent of the labor force, compared to the September figure of 4.7 per cent. The number of people unemployed rose to 419,000 from 398,000 in September. (CP Newsmap)

Kitching's Wine Tastes Worry Grape Growers

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario grape growers expressed "considerable uneasiness" Thursday after learning that the new head of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario likes imported wines.

Maj-Gen. George Kitching, named chief commissioner of the LCBO Tuesday, told reporters Wednesday he likes scotch with soda, rye with water and imported wines.

Some French and German wines, he said, "seem to have been designed almost by the Almighty . . . What more could you wish than a real Burgundy with a good roast of beef?"

Ronald C. Hoyer, chairman of the Ontario Grape Growers' Marketing Board, wrote to Gen. Kitching Thursday that his comments as reported in newspapers "have caused considerable uneasiness among our directors and members."

The grape growers looked forward to meeting Gen. Kitching "at an early date."

Father, Son Relationship Begins at Infancy

TORONTO (CP) — Mikael Lawton, aged five months, is seeing more of his father these days. He is because his father, Jerry Lawton, has been convinced they already have things to say to one another.

Mr. Lawton is a television producer who spent three months working on a documentary on the young child, and it has changed his ideas about the relationship of fathers and young babies.

He wanted people doing research on how very young children learn and grow and around the world. The theories and practices he encountered persuaded him that fathers should take part in the lives of their children from the start.

"Like most fathers I thought the baby was a cute little thing but that I couldn't do much for him until he was old enough to ask questions and toss a ball around.

"I had read years ago that the most important thing parents can give children in the first year is as much love as possible

"But working on this program showed me...I was all wrong. There are some very important things that can be done for a baby in the first year of life."

He noted that child-care authorities put great emphasis on talking to the baby as much as possible and playing with him in a face-to-face situation. "The stress was on talking to him as if he understood. The face-to-face is important because from this he would learn early and well some of the essentials of human expression.

"I did change some of my own approaches. I made a point of playing with Mikael for an hour every evening and as much as possible on the weekends."

He also helps with Mikael's bath and said he was surprised to find some fathers had difficulty changing a threat to their masculinity.

"The experts also made a great point of always saying to surprise a baby, of always trying to present him with something slightly outside the realm of his experience. I try to do this with toys and things that are common around the house.

"I had somehow been aware before that it was necessary to catch my attention and not necessarily be, but I didn't know what would catch his attention. I learned that bright colors are important, that sound is important, that toys which change their shape are important."

Only recently has much research been done on the very young child, and little is known of the influence the father has. The program Mr. Lawton produced looks at work being done at the Canadian Mother-craft Society in Toronto, the University of British Columbia, Harvard University, and the Institute for the Achievement of Human Potential in Philadelphia.

Mr. Lawton found expert conviction that there is exactly the right time, sometime during the first three years, to teach each of the early lessons of life, such as love and trust.

He said there appears to be agreement that the age of three is a period when learning ability is greatest, when a child's language and physical and mental development come together. After this period it becomes increasingly difficult to change the pattern of a child's development.

He said the work is still considered the key influence in the early years and he found deep concern about society's attempts to tamper with the relationship.

The father's role was changing today, partly because of the number of mothers going to work.

"This will make fathers take a more active part in early child raising in the future. No one knows what effect this will have on children.

"Everything we know about the father's role is an assumption. Scientists are only in the process of proving that these assumptions are right or wrong.

"But what we do know of children's adjustment potential in these years indicates that if we influence them at this time, right from the ways we will create adults who are not only more intelligent but who are better adjusted emotionally."

One of the experts, Dr. Jerome Kagan of Harvard, was asked what he considers the most important thing a parent can do for a child.

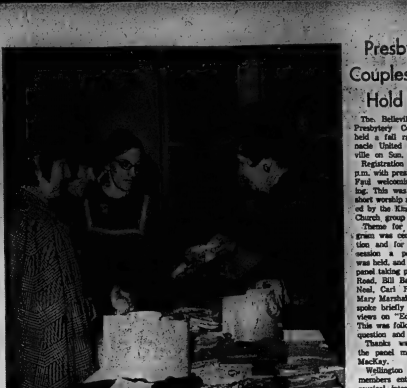
He replied: "Always treat a child's intelligence with respect, as if he understood. And try to give him a sense of optimism, a sense that problems can be solved if one searches hard enough for the answer."

The program, called The Early Years, will be shown on CBC-TV at 4 p.m. Sun. It is the first of a three-part series.

Women's Institutes

RIVER VALLEY W.I.

RIVER VALLEY — The November meeting of River Valley Women's Institute was held at the centre with 27 adults in attendance.



Mrs. Philip Conley convened the program and Mrs. James Hoard introduced Gordon Hoard and Wayne McCurdy. Both boys gave an interesting and informative travelogue on Manitoba with many scenic views. Their trip by bus was a school project last spring to learn geography. The boys displayed a large array of souvenirs.

At the close, Mrs. Ernest Carr expressed thanks and made a presentation of chocolates. Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh attended the area convention; plans were made to cater to an auction sale and banquet.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen reported having sent the individual gifts to the Link Institute in England for their Christmas party.

The lunch committee served refreshments during the social hour.

The River Valley W.I. sponsored its first card party on Friday evening with 11 tables in play. The home economics and health group provided the refreshments. Mrs. H. Faulkner and Mrs. L. Donohoe won the women's prizes and Tommy Grills and Harry Heasman the men's.

A Peek in Anticipation

College Hill UCW Hold Tea

Autumn theme decor highlighted the annual tea and bazaar held by College Hill United Church Women on Thursday afternoon. The attractive decor each included pine cones, bitter sweet, milkweed pods and cat-tails was done by Mrs. J. Shalaiwa and Mrs. M. Bushell.

Warmly greeting guests at the entrance were Mrs. M. Vessey, Mrs. M. McIntosh and Mrs. H. McLaren. Treasurers for the afternoon were Mrs. K. Dowing and Mrs. P. King.

The tea room was in charge of Mrs. N. Neal and Mrs. G. Evans. Here the focal point of interest was the attractive tea table centred with a colorful arrangement in keeping with the decor. Tea was poured by Mrs. B. Moore, Mrs. L. McCreary, Mrs. R. Stetzko and Mrs. R. Carmen. Assisting in the serving were Messdames N. Dolan, A. Blakely, J. Gray, C. MacIntosh, E. Miller, M. Cannon, M. Beckstead, L. Foster, S. Werden, J. Treverton and Miss H. Smith.

Making the tasty cups of tea were Mrs. N. Walker and Mrs. E. Jenkinson with helpers Mrs. I. Fafoe, Mrs. N. Wood, Mrs. D. Sine, Mrs. R. McIntosh and Mrs. H. McKay.

The most popular sales booth for the event was the bake table laden with an assortment of pies, home baked bread and buns, rolls, tarts, cookies and many other goodies in charge of Mrs. D. Dickens, Mrs. L. Belcour and Mrs. M. Townsend assisted by Mrs. E. Armstrong, Mrs. R. Tompkins and Mrs. A. West.

The country store had a fine display of preserves, jellies, canned goods and sundries and was convened by Mrs. F. McDonald, Mrs. D. Colden, Mrs. V. Lepore and Mrs. V. Grinsfeed.

Mrs. R. Waite and Mrs. H. Treverton were in charge of the candy booth where there was splendid assortments of sweets.

So popular at this time of year was the sewing booth with its many colorful aprons, knit goods, embroidery work and doll clothes with items sold by Mrs. L. Bailey, Mrs. P. Watson and Mrs. A. Watson.

The CGIT booth was in charge of Mrs. D. Homan and Mrs. R. Daniels where an array of miscellaneous articles were sold. After four o'clock the fish pond was a busy place with Mrs. B. Rowe and Mrs. C. Carter taking care of the little folk.

Mrs. E. Waite and Mrs. B. Jones attended the nursery for the afternoon while the mothers enjoyed a cup of tea and browsed freely among the booths.

Timely Warning

CHAPLEAU, Ont. (CP) — A timely warning has been directed to parents about their pre-school age children by the Chapleau detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police. "Nearly all pre-school age children killed or injured in traffic were not supervised by adults at the time of the accident." The OPP urge all parents of pre-schoolers to keep them under constant supervision.

Presbytery Couples Clubs Hold Rally

The Belleville - Cobourg Presbytery Couples' Clubs held a fall rally in Tabernacle United Church, Belleville on Sun. Nov. 1.

Registration began at 1.30 p.m. with president Clare McFayl welcoming the gathering. This was followed by a short worship service conducted by the King Street United Church group of Trenton.

Theme for the day's program was centred on education and for the afternoon session a panel discussion was held, and members of the panel taking part were Liston Read, Bill Babbit, John McNeal, Carl Reid and Mrs. Mary Marshall. Each speaker spoke briefly and gave their views on "Education today". This was followed by a short question and answer period.

Thanks was expressed to the panel members by Bill MacKay.

Wellington Couples' Club members entertained with a musical interlude during the election of officers.

New officers include: presidents, Harry and Muriel Jeffs: 1st vice - presidents Dorothy and Ross Taylor; 2nd vice - presidents - Cecil and Jeanne Matier. The position of secretary - treasurer will be elected by the incoming executive.

For the evening meal all enjoyed southern fried chicken catered to by the Tabernacle Couples' Club.

A church service was held immediately following in charge of Rev. J. Leslie Dean of Tabernacle Church assisted by Clare McFayl, Harry Jeffs, Dorothy Taylor and Fraya McDonald.

Following the evening's activities a fireside service was enjoyed when Mrs. Harriet of Plainfield entertained with her accordion and all joined in a lively sing-song. Refreshments were served by the Foxboro Couples' Club.

Sr. Citizens Plan Annual Yule Party

More than 130 persons were present for the first meeting in November of the Senior Citizens Club of Belleville with Mrs. Adams presiding.

A number of new members were welcomed along with Mrs. Alice Storms who was welcomed back following a recent accident. A moment's silence was observed in memory of Mrs. Elsie Spring and Albert Johnstone.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read by secretary Mrs. K. Ferguson who also read the treasurer's report which showed a considerable balance in the bank. Reports were given by Mrs. Gist (sick and visiting) and Mrs. Vickers (euchre and penny bingo). Members decided to send donations to the Mental Health Association and to the Santa Claus parade fund.

At this meeting plans were also completed for the tea and bazaar held the following day which proved to be a most successful event. The annual Christmas party is scheduled for Dec. 14.

Everyone enjoyed entertainment provided by Ernie Hunter and readings were given by Mrs. Longhurst, Mrs. Armstrong and Mrs. Cooke.

Mrs. Florence Alker won the draw prize.

Argyll Chapter Plans Events

The regular monthly meeting of the Argyll Chapter IODE was held at the home of Mrs. A. B. Dafforn with the Regent Mrs. H. L. Kokesh presiding. Minutes were read by Mrs. D. Milroy in the absence of the secretary, Mrs. A. Gray, also the correspondence. Mrs. J. Sherry, the treasurer reported a substantial balance.

Mrs. Kokesh thanked all who helped make the district dinner a success. Also Mrs. J. K. Bradford, and Mrs. C. Micula who convened the Shop count will be held on Dec. 9.

Mrs. M. Smith introduced guests for the evening, Mrs. Hazel Wishart. Mrs. Kokesh welcomed her to the meeting.

Mrs. F. M. Sprague, world affairs convener read an article about the 'New Act' replacing the War Measures Act.

Members voted on donations for the provincial and national chapters, also on Atawapaskat, the Indian settlement near James Bay for their building fund and the Christmas Exchange. The members were again asked to bring a gift for the patients in the mental hospital in Kingston and Christmas cards and stamps for the senior citizens at Hastings Manor.

The chapter has again decided to entertain the senior citizens from Yeates Court at a potluck supper at the December meeting in the Officers' Mess.

Mrs. Kokesh read a letter from the officers requesting that they cater to the Bazaar Day Tea Dance and all voted to undertake the project. She also asked the members to support the tea and bazaar to be held by the St. Julien Chapter on Dec. 7.

The annual 'Winter Fantasy' ball will be held on January 30, 1971 at the Officers' Mess.

A nominating committee was named including: Mrs. J. K. Bradford, Mrs. E. Smith and Mrs. Mac Smith.

Following the meeting Mrs. Kokesh thanked Mrs. Duffy for inviting members to her home.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. J. K. Bradford and her group.

QUEEN ELIZABETH SCHOOL

Queen Elizabeth Home and School met November 4 for a different type of program — "Remembrance Day in the Schools". The program was unique in that it included the memorial day service enacted that day in the auditorium. Children of all classes participated in a simple yet dignified ceremony.

Following the ceremony, H. R. Frink, the principal, introduced the speaker, J. M. Cousins, a veteran in the teaching profession and a veteran of World War II. Mr. Cousins commanded the Belleville Battery of the 22nd Light Anti-aircraft and was in Normandy on D-Day.

While he acknowledged the fact that many parents of today have no real memories of the war, Mr. Cousins urged the assembly to remember and appreciate the privileges and freedoms enjoyed as Canadians.

He made it clear that these freedoms need to be protected in peace time as well as in war. "We can exercise our rights as voters and take a stand, as individuals, against threats to the well being of the country, so that the many who died in war, will not have died in vain."

He said that many know relatively little of the organization, discipline and feelings of men in the field. Mr. Cousins described these from his own experiences, as a soldier and an officer.

"Soldiers are men with feelings and yet, in war, must subscribe to rigid discipline to act effectively in the defense of freedom. Civilians today can learn much from their example and effectively head off trouble by standing up fearlessly in defense of a country well worth fighting for," Mr. Cousins concluded his speech with a short prayer written by one of his soldiers.

After the meeting, parents, children and teachers enjoyed coffee and cookies.

Travel Vacation Ends Up A Nightmare

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just returned from what was supposed to be a vacation. We drove 1,000 miles cross country and I am ready for the looby hatch.

My husband cannot stand the sound of windshield wipers so when it rains he rolls the car windows down, sticks out his head, gets himself soaking wet and looks to all the world like the nut that he is.

Several times during the trip he pulled a candy bar out of his pocket — ate it with obvious pleasure and never even asked me if I wanted a bite. If he had visited in a city once

ANN LANDERS he considers himself an authority on all the sights of interest and he refuses to follow the suggestions in the guide book because "those rotten jerks don't know anything."

It kills him to admit he made a wrong turn, so of course, we are lost a good deal of the time. For some mysterious reason he believes it is an admission of inferiority to ask directions even though he knows he is miles from where he ought to be.

He yawns, nods and pretends to be falling asleep — everything under the sun to let me know he is exhausted — but he refuses to let me drive because "all women are lousy drivers."

Speed limits mean nothing to this kook. He went 80 miles an hour over a six-mile, one-way bridge — with concrete sides. A blowout would have killed us instantly.

Any suggestions for the future? Believe it or not, he loves to travel. I'm beside myself with frustration and will do as you say.— NO FINGERNAILS.

DEAR NO: Fly, take a train, a bus, a boat, or a bicycle but don't go in any future car trips with that lunatic. If you do, you are crazier than he is.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are a group of working girls who take turns fixing gourmet dinners in our apartments. If a girl is unable to attend she is expected to call the hostess at least 24 hours in advance.

Miss B was not able to attend the dinner at my home last night. She telephoned three days ago and said, "I'm sorry but I can't be there." I asked, "Is anything wrong?" She replied in a cheery voice, "No, everything is just fine." I waited for her to tell me what was going to come but she didn't give a reason. I thought this was very rude and feel that Miss B should be dropped from the group. What do you think? — FLORENCE, ALABAMA.

DEAR FLO: I think the call from Miss B saying she could not attend was sufficient. Why she could not attend was none of your business. Often when a person "regrets" they state a reason, but if no reason is given there should be no probing. That is rude.

Hearing Aids Add Greatly to Enjoyment of Life

By DORIS CLARK

Of people over 65 in Canada, one in every five has some hearing loss in both ears. Hearing aids, in many cases, can add greatly to enjoyment of life.

But, if you are thinking of buying one . . .

(1) Get a doctor's advice on the degree of deafness and on the value of a hearing aid in your particular case.

(2) Be leary of advertising claims of "instant hearing", "new inventions" and "miracles".

(3) Look for information on the quality of the hearing aid, not on its cosmetic value like "tiny", "invisible", and "concealed."

(4) Many provinces require that door - to - door salesmen be licensed and bonded. After signing a contract with such salesmen, most provinces provide a few days during which you are allowed to consider and cancel it. Be aware of provincial laws and be certain that the salesman is licensed.

(5) At the time of purchase obtain in writing any understandings or verbal agreements.

(6) If possible, consult a dealer who offers trial prior to purchase.

(7) Buy only from dealers who offer adequate service or repair policies and be sure you understand the terms of the policy.

(8) Don't be reluctant to ask a friend or relative with good hearing to help you make the purchase. — Canadian Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

* * *

Dear Doris: My husband is in a job where his customers bring beer and drink with him, and as a result he is often late for supper. Even our five - year - old looks at him and says, "Dad, you are drunk".

Two or three bottles of beer show on him very easily; he isn't rude or out of sorts but just stumbles around and goes to sleep. This habit ruins any gatherings we attend. Soon after things start he is sitting in a corner half asleep or stumbling around.

The bad part is that he doesn't think he is doing anything wrong. Sometimes I can't talk to him when he does get drunk, and I clam up for two days or more. It is really affecting our marriage, considering the fact that we teen-agers are ashamed of him too.

When he's at the beer parlor, I'm alone at home. I have been thinking of just going to a movie with one of my children and maybe this would make him realize that a woman needs a change too. — P. B. S.

Dear P. B. S.: Rarely does a drinker think there is anything wrong. Yet an alcoholic gradually leans on liquor more and more until it gets a strangle hold on him.

You need all the breaks you can get. Detach yourself from any responsibility for his drinking.

Get the help which A. A. and the family organization called Al - Anon can give you. Others who have been through the mill can give you support and understanding about how to handle yourself and your living situation.

* * *

Dear Doris: I copied out "In School — Days" and am sending it along to you.

Many years ago we used to learn verses at school, and with some teachers we would have a little program on Friday afternoons.

We grumbled at times but it gave to confidence to learn those pieces and how to say them in front of the other pupils. I don't think that is done at all nowadays and I think the children are missing a lot. — D. B. S.

Dear D. B. S.: Another thing memorizing poetry does is stock up that marvelous storehouse we call our brain, against those times when we need to draw on a happy thought or philosophy to carry us along.

Coconut Bran Muffins Without Shortening

By MARY MOORE

LETTER: . . . enclosed is my recipe for Coconut Bran Muffins which require no shortening. — Mrs. E. C.

ANSWER: The "no shortening" idea appealed to us and in addition your recipe was different and so simple my secretary's eight-year-old son, Ian, made them.

COCONUT BRAN MUFFINS (courtesy Mrs. E. C.; makes 12 to 16)

1 egg beaten
1 cup light brown sugar
1-3 cups milk
1 tsp. vinegar
1 cup all-bran
½ to ¾ cup desiccated coconut
½ cup raisins or chopped dates
1¼ cups sifted all - purpose flour
¾ tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking soda
½ tsp. cinnamon

Into mixing bowl drop egg and beat it. Add sugar and mix in two-cup measuring cup measure milk then add vinegar and stir. Add bran and coconut and let soak while you sift and measure flour, salt, baking soda and cinnamon. Now add milk-bran mixture to egg-sugar mixture along with dates and dry ingredients and mix only enough to blend. Do not overstir muffin batter. Spoon into greased muffin tins or line muffin tins with colored flaked paper cups and fill them two-thirds full. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. 20 min.

Thank you, Mrs. K.C. This is a splendid muffin recipe.

LETTER: Vegetable spaghetti — we call it "Spaghetti squash" — but very mild flavored. When cooked it comes out of the shell in long, spaghetti-like strands — pale yellow, almost white in color. My neighbor prepares it like Hubbard squash, removes the seed section and steam cook in the shell for 20 min. Pull the squash from the shell in long strands and serve with a tomato sauce. I also tried it without the sauce and it is delicious with just salt, pepper and butter.

For your readers with a pressure cooker — one evening when I was in a hurry, I put the quartered and seeded squash in my cooker at 15 pounds pressure for just 7 min. Then I buttered it still in the shell, and set it in a low oven at 275 deg. Fahr. for about 10 min. while I got the rest of the meal on the table. The oven seemed to dry it a bit so the strands separated better, and little cooking left it nice and crunchy. We think this is the ideal way to prepare it!

I hope this information helps you. I enjoy your column so much it is a pleasure to return the favor! — Rosanna M.

ANSWER: Thank you Rosanna and all others who responded to my request for vegetable spaghetti information.

100,000 Make Pilgrimage to de Gaulle's Simple Village Tomb

COLOMBEY - LES - DEUX - EGLISES (CP) — Ten African presidents and two Soviet officials joined an unending stream of mourners who filed past Charles de Gaulle's simple white tomb in this tiny village today.

The pilgrimage reached more than 100,000 persons after Thursday's day of national mourning for the soldier-statesman who moulded contemporary France.

More thousands continued to file past the flower-strewn gravesite where the former French president was buried in a simple white oak coffin Thursday.

In all, 100 world leaders were in Notre Dame Cathedral Thursday to honor the general who died Monday at 79 of a condition associated with hardening of the arteries. The head of the Canadian delegation at the memorial service was External Affairs Minister Sharp.

In Paris today, President Pompidou will have talks with foreign leaders still in the French capital after the service, informed sources said.

Pompidou, who served as Gen. de Gaulle's prime minister for six years, had talks Thursday with President Nixon, Podgorny and British Prime Minister Heath among other leaders.

The national day of mourning for de Gaulle ended at midnight, but the loss of the man who was looked upon by many as the savior of France continued to be felt by millions of Frenchmen.

In the French capital, officials estimated as many as 200,000 Parisians marched silently in pouring rain up the Champs Elysees to the Arc de Triomphe and the tomb of the unknown soldier beneath it.

Memorial ceremonies were held all over France, aside from the gathering of world leaders at Notre Dame cathedral, and a total of 20,000 people had signed a condolences book at the general's office in Paris by late Thursday night.

About 40,000 people massed in Colombey Thursday to watch the general's body being carried on an armored scout car from La Boisserie to the village's small, stone church.

Another 20,000 people stood outside Notre Dame Cathedral during the memorial mass in Paris, at which the congregation reflected the unique position de Gaulle won on the international scene despite his intransigent battle for French independence and grandeur.

Bourassa's Hot Speech Gives Few Cold Facts

QUEBEC (CP) — Why has the Quebec government acted the way it has since the beginning of the unprecedented crisis now gripping the province?

The question is the subject of an emergency debate which has been going on in the Quebec national assembly since Wednesday, but so far Premier Robert Bourassa has not given out all the information the skeptics want.

The 37-year-old premier, prodded into anger by Parti Quebecois criticism of his Liberal government's actions, delivered a 71-minute speech Thursday to justify what his government has done since Oct. 5, when British diplomat James Cross was kidnapped.

But on his rebuttal to a challenge from Camille Laurin, the separatist Parti Quebecois official spokesman in the national assembly, Mr. Bourassa disclosed few new facts.

He insisted that the Quebec government had done everything possible to "save the lives of Pierre Laporte and James Cross and stop anarchy in Quebec." Mr. Laporte was kidnapped Oct. 10 and found dead in the trunk of a car one week later.

Mr. Laurin had accused the government of sacrificing the lives of the two hostage victims in order to hold up to its authority.

Both the PQ and the Union Nationale party, which forms the official Opposition in the 108-seat national assembly, have been pressing the government to produce evidence to justify its actions, particularly its call to Ottawa for the army and proclamation of the War Measures Act.

However, the only disclosure Mr. Bourassa made Thursday was that Lucien Saulnier, former Montreal executive committee chairman, gave the Quebec government information upon which it based its decision to make its appeal to Ottawa.

Mr. Saulnier had repeated to the Quebec government a statement he had made a year earlier before a House of Commons committee that Montreal police had come upon terrorist plans for a four-step campaign to create a "murder feeling" in the overthrow of the government.

Mr. Bourassa said the fear that the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec would carry out further kidnappings and assassinations was one reason why he had asked the federal government to take special measures.

Mr. Bourassa also said the government may impose limits on what he called the "freedom of expression" in Quebec.

"There is freedom of expression without limit in Quebec," he said. "Perhaps it's time to re-examine this freedom of expression, or at least its use."

He did not elaborate.

Mr. Laurin said the government should have met the kidnappers' ransom demands for the release of 23 so-called political prisoners. Jean-Jacques Bertrand said Quebecers should understake a "general mobilization" against terrorism.

Mr. Bourassa rejected the suggestion as "naive."

Creditiste leader Camil Samson, who preceded Mr. Laurin in the debate, endorsed the government's actions and called for an all-out campaign against "subversive elements," among which he listed PQ leader Rene Levesque, not a member of the assembly, and the CBC's French-language network.

In finishing the speech he began Wednesday, Opposition leader Jean-Jacques Bertrand said Quebecers should undertake a "general mobilization" against terrorism.

PC's Take Over

FREDERICTON (CP) — A the resignation of his Liberal Progressive Conservative government took over in New Brunswick today.

Premier Richard B. Hatfield and his 16-member cabinet took their oaths of office Thursday only minutes after Premier Louis J. Robichaud submitted ter in New Brunswick history.

The new cabinet represents more than half of the 31 Conservatives elected in the Oct. 26 provincial election and includes the first woman cabinet minis-administration to Lt.-Gov. Wilace S. Bird.

Tries Anything

Trudeau Keeps On Swinging

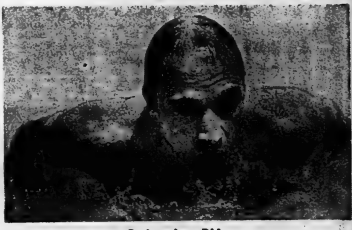
BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two years as Prime Minister haven't seriously altered Pierre Elliott Trudeau's reputation as a swinger.

This is a public image, of course. Mr. Trudeau is jealous of his privacy and, aside from reports that he is rather shy, relatively little is known about his personal life.

In public, possibly in a reaction to his shyness, he still clowns occasionally. But what really makes him a happy subject for photographers is his willingness to try most anything.

Still a dashing bachelor at 50, he is a sex symbol to girls of all ages, and it's rare that he doesn't get kissed at least once a day on trips away from Ottawa.



He swims and skis well and does a fairly efficient job of booting a football in the honorary kickoff at the Grey Cup game. A couple of trips to the Arctic have given him a certain amount of expertise in such activities as twirling an Eskimo drum.

For many Canadians he has a sort of magnetic quality, perhaps explained by a backstage television assistant who says he has the most natural stage presence of any Canadian politician of modern times.

Or by Montreal artist Eva Prager who, after painting his portrait, said that when she first met him she felt "as though I were in the presence of a combination of the world of Alice in Wonderland and the sharpest political acumen."

$685 Loot From Motel

Belleville City Police are searching for two teenage youths, wanted in connection with the theft of $685 from the Queens Motor Hotel early this morning.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said the theft took place at four a.m. while the night clerk, Mrs. Arthur Dunbar of RR 2 Belleville, was out of the room.

He said that Mrs. Dunbar saw the two youths hanging around outside the motel and saw one of them enter. After she returned to the room she saw him leave.

Checking the cash register she discovered the theft and called police.

Mall Plan Accepted

Plans for the $7.5 million Quinte Mall moved forward another stage last night when the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board recommended that the site plan be approved.

Some question was raised over the approval of the plan when it was noted that the inclusion of theatres did not comply with zoning bylaws.

This point was quickly cleared up by Cambridge Leaseholds lawyer Guss Porter. Mr. Porter announced that he was authorized to advise the board that the inclusion of theatres were to be deleted from the plan.

The recommendations and plans will be brought before council for approval, after which the developers will be able to apply for a building permit.

Press Conference Called on Scheme

TRENTON (Staff) — Town officials will release full details of the controversial pant office development scheme November 24.

Council has stressed that residents of the town should fully understand the project when they go to the polls here December 7.

Voters will decide in the election whether the Town of Trenton should participate with private interests in developing the site on a condominium basis.

Additional sketches of the project and full financial details will be revealed in a press conference called by town clerk, O. W. Larry for November 24.

City's Population Now Tops 33,800

The city of Belleville enjoyed a population increase of just under 3.5 per cent during the past year with the figure in June of this year totalling 33,814.

This figure compares with 33,345 in 1969, or an increase of 471.

The new population count for Belleville was made known today by the Regional Assessment office in Trenton, as the result of an enumeration taken by a special team last spring when all households in Hastings and Prince Edward counties were canvassed.

The new figures for all 39 municipalities in the two counties and for Trenton will be given following a computer read-out expected in a few days' time.

Mayor J. Russell Scott expressed pleasure at the city's population increase.

"I am very pleased with the figures," he said.

Alderman Gerald Joyce, chairman of the city industrial committee, feels that since the enumeration was taken the city's population has again seen an increase, as he says that at least 200 new apartment units have been constructed in the city and they are all occupied.

He expects that a percentage of these people must have come from outside the city limits, while also in the past year, there has been an increase in the birthrate.

Ottawa Architect Responsible for Alouette Building Job

By Eric Emerson
Staff Sportswriter

While apparently holding no burning political ambitions, Red O'Quinn is rated by at least one knowledgable source as an expert in the field of a major Canadian crisis — separatism.

When the subject of O'Quinn's move from the Ottawa Rough Riders to Montreal was brought up this winter a former Ronghie noted, "Quebec hasn't heard anything about separatism yet. Wait until Red starts separating those Alouettes from their pay cheques.

The shrewd contract negotiator has made it pretty hard on himself in next season's dealings however by building a Grey Cup contender from the shambles of a CFL disaster area.

While most of the attention for the Larks sudden rise in prominence has been centred on the coaching of Sam Etcheverry, the passing of Sonny Wade and Dennis Duncan's alcoholic intake, O'Quinn is the man most responsible for the upswing.

Not that you'd expect anything else from someone who inspected such talented puppets as Bo Scott, Margene Adkins, Jim Mankins and Margins Adkins, allowing Ernie Jackson to pull the strings successfully on Ottawa's Grey Cup winners.

His first, and by no means least successful move was inspecting defensive coach Bob Ward from the country's capital. Ward's new "three-control" defence has been the constituted Montreal throw-point, wrecking its pank in their playoff win over the Argonauts.

O'Quinn's biggest repeating job so far, concerned pecking record-setting pass receiver Terry Evanshen from the Calgary Stampeders for someone named Basil Bark.

While the shifty little flanker, who started his pro career with the Als, didn't reach the statistical heights that he enjoyed with he Peto Lisks aerial circus, the double coverage that he continually drew opened up the passing lanes for Wade's other receivers.

Replacing Bark at offensive centre was former Tiger-Cat standout Gino Coppetelli, who had played out his option with Hamilton to join the Philadelphia Eagles of the NFL.

Despite a dcicying action by the San Francisco 49ers, Coppelelli was finally cleared from the National League on waivers and became the anchor of Montreal's front line.

The hard-boiled Sudbury native proved his worth against the Steelers by repeatedly smacking highly touted rookie Jim Corrigall on his fat wallet.

The acquisition of guard Walt Bilgeonith was another major managerial coup. The 240-pound offensive lad became a standout over four years with the Denver Broncos, but was cut adrift at this year's training camp. The Chicago Bears of the NFL were anxious to add Bilgeonith to their lineup but were beaten to the punch by O'Quinn.

Two additions to the defensive team were highly instrumental in moulding the unit into one of the country's best.

Defensive end, Steve Smear, had proved that he could live up to his name as a star tackle with Penn State's undefeated 1969 Orange Bowl champions. Over-shadowed somewhat by All-American Mike Reid, Smear's signing didn't receive the publicity accorded that of Corrigall, a second draft choice of the Saint Louis Cardinals, but proved to be a major break for the Alouettes.

The other valuable addition defensively, was free safety Gene Carlson, another Ottawa alumni. While he may have lost a step on deep coverage, Carlson helped to give some support to goalie Gerry McNeil against the Montreal sharpshooters. Coach Ray Reid has been running the Smokies through regular workouts since the ice surface was installed in the Belleville arena this fall, and they hope to be able to put on an all-star training performance against the NHL greats.

The forward lines will be manned by Don Putnam, Wally Istead, Ralph Boomhower, Bob Lloyd, Larry Fritz, John Sager, Stan Fuglen, Gene McGrath, Grant Parks, Carl Boomhower, Keith Brown, Jim McKay and Fred Smith.

While Montreal Canadiens' failure to come to terms with John Ferguson was a blow to their fans in general it should be a windfall to Belleville hockey enthusiasts. The sturdy left winger, who had been confirmed as an entry for tonight's game before the rumors of his return to Montreal's varsity, will in all likelihood be in the lineup for the Oldtimers game.

The club will be certain of the participation of such stars as Maurice Richard, Bernie Geoffrion, Doug Harvey Dickie Moore, Butch Bouchard, and Elmer Lach.

Also with such names appearing in the lineup as Jim Orlando, Glen Harmon, Buddy O'Connor, Ken Mosdell and Dollard St. Laurent the Memorial Arena heaters may not see much work.

Canadian Hockey Fans Resent NHL Unbalance

An unplanned — and unscientific — poll of Canadians which began almost as a joke has produced what Maclean's magazine calls a "militant and massive" demand by sports fans for a reorganizing of the National Hockey League to make it more Canadian.

Last July, the magazine published an article by Bob Boasin in which he denounced the greed of Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens team owners who threatened to move their franchises to American cities in the face of a simple proposed tax reform which would end tax - deductible season tickets for businesses.

He suggested government should control hockey, perhaps even nationalize the sport, and turn the NHL from a dollar - oriented body into a truly national sports organization. Or, wrote Boosin, there should be a second NHL with community owned teams throughout Canada's big cities. "Does that make sense?" he asked readers.

The results astounded Boosin and the editors of Maclean's itself. What managing editor Philip Sykes calls "a floodtide" of letters deluged the magazine office. Boosin says: "I was angry, but I didn't realize I'd touched such a sensitive nerve in Canadians.

Former McFarlands Bolster Firefighter Lineup Tonight

While a few members of the Firefighters hockey team might not be intimately acquainted with operating a Scott Air-Pack or aerial ladder they do know quite a bit about hosing down opposing forwards.

Bolstering the firefighters' defence will be former Belleville McFarland standouts Floyd Crawford, Jean-Paul Lamirande, Lou Sirsko and Fiori Goegan, along with arena manager Bob Burroughs. The fireverne will be used

TORONTO (CP) — Bob Maxwell, publisher of the weekly Bramalea Guardian,

The schedule of Solunar Periods, as printed below, has been taken from Mrs. Richard Alden Knight's Solunar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory or hunting in good cover during these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major Periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

Use Eastern Standard Time.

is "a firm opponent of this 'win, win, win' bit in minor hockey—but when one of my sons is playing, I get as uptight as the next guy."

A column he wrote about it tells how he feels—and it has been inscribed on a plaque and hung in the Chinguacousy Township Arena as a tribute to all hockey parents. This is it:

He looks very small, standing out there between the goal posts; his scaled-down pads and stick only accentuate the fact his head barely reaches the crossbar.

Too small to carry out what, for instance, is the most important job in the world—goalie on a paperweight team in a house game; a substitute goalie in a game which, if won, will take his team into the finals.

You wish you could go out there and help him. He is not as nervous as you are. But, he's a bit pale from excitement and the specks of ice flecks stand out against the paleness.

Then the game starts you plead with him in a whisper —"Remember what I told you. Keep your stick on the ice. Watch the puck, not the player. Stay on your feet."

You look at the clock after an eternity and find only three minutes have passed. The nineteen centuries to grind slowly as you pace up and down over a trail of half-smoked cigarettes.

The tension eases when your team gets a goal, but tightens once again on a breakaway from the face-off. But his forwards and defence are checking hard and the attack is stopped.

"Please," you say, "if he lets one in, let it be a hard one over Johnny Bower couldn't stop. He'll feel so badly if he lets in an easy one."

The clock has become a ladder to be climbed minute by minute. But your team is still ahead.

But suddenly a forward breaks loose at the blueline and comes in from the side. An angle shot.

"Cover the corner," you whisper. He does, and you breathe once again.

Your team has fought its way uphill and it's the middle of the third. You start thinking, wistfully: of a shutout. Now, there would be something for him to tell his grandchildren.

Minutes, cheers and change barrers all blend together to form the last 60 minutes.

One minute to go. A win is practically certain now, but you don't dare think about it. The big hand on the clock writes its story at the rear of the arena—but oh, so slowly. It starts, then stops at a whistle, then starts again.

Ten seconds—five seconds —the buzzer. It's over.

They skate down the ice. So grown-up, they shake hands with the opposing team.

In the dressing room there is great joy.

As you go over to help him off with his pads, he says. "Hi, dad. I got a shutout."

As Important as Motor

Confident Etcheverry Says Wade Ready to Do the Job

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

As far as Sam Etcheverry is concerned, Sonny Wade is the key to Montreal Alouettes' quest for the Eastern Football Conference playoff title and a berth in the Grey Cup.

The Alouettes open the EFC's two-game total point series at home Sunday against Hamilton-Tiger-Cats.

In the West, Calgary Stampeders meet Saskatchewan Roughriders in the first game of a best two-of-three final Saturday.

"Wade as a quarterback is about as important as the motor in a car," says Etcheverry. "In fact, although this is just conjecture on my part, I'll bet if Ross Jackson hadn't retired in Ottawa this year, Frank Clair wouldn't have stepped aside as head coach.

"When you lose someone like that, you have to start all over again."

This is why the Als are giving Wade every chance to make a breakthrough as a quarterback in the Canadian Football League.

When Winnipeg dumped quarterback Wally Gabler, the Als could have picked him up for the $350 waiver price. Instead the Tiger-Cats will have him to their lineup Sunday.

"We weren't interested in Gabler," said Etcheverry. "I think with Sonny it has been a case of getting his confidence back. He called a heck of a game in Toronto last weekend.

"I didn't send in that many plays. He called his audibles well.

"We've had a lot of secondary receivers in the open this year and we haven't picked them up. Now we are starting to do it. We may have turned the corner."

"All I know is that Sonny has had a great week in practice. He has never been sharper."

Ed George, who suffered an ankle sprain in last week's semi-final win over Toronto, worked out Thursday for the first time since the injury and should be set to go. Flanker Gary Lefebvre, who suffered a broken wrist and knee damage in an early season game in Winnipeg, has been returned to the active roster and may see some action against Hamilton.

Meanwhile, the Tiger-Cats settled their quarterbacking problems by trading off John Eckman to B.C. Lions and restoring Joe Zuger to the active roster.

In return for Eckman, the Lions will give Hamilton future player consideration.

"We could have put Eckman on waivers," said head coach Joe Restic, "and maybe a couple of clubs would have claimed him.

But we felt we'd try to get him a better deal. With the Lions we felt he could have a better future."

Gabler will be Hamilton's starting quarterback because Zuger is still recovering from a wrist injury.

Restic feels that the key to the Ticats' success lies in their ability to control the ball against the Als. He feels Montreal has the best-balanced defence in the CFL.

"It's a real tough defence—probably the best linebackers in the league," said Restic. "But we want to control the game by running and throwing enough to keep them off guard.

"We'll be doing some new things I hope I surprise them."

The Als-Ticats game will be televised on the full CTV network at 2 p.m. EST with the Montreal area blacked out.

Nervous Perez Waits for Ron

CALGARY (CP) — A rookie who gets nervous when he plays Saskatchewan Roughriders will be one of the regulars for Calgary Stampeders against the Riders Saturday in the first game of the Western Football Conference final.

Defensive halfback Gig Perez says that even when "I think of this Saskatchewan team I get nervous.

But he says he'll try to turn his nervousness—maybe it's just excitement"—into effectiveness "because if I don't that (final) Lancaster will notice and go right at me.

"He burned me once this year and maybe that's why I keep thinking about it."

Despite his nervousness, few quarterbacks and not many receivers have found a way to beat the 22-year-old who has had six interceptions this season.

Perez was traded from Toronto Argonauts to Calgary early in the year for "future considerations."

"I knew I had to make the Calgary ball club simply because we had no money and I needed a job. There was nothing else for me.

"But boy, in those first few games I was nervous, really nervous, like a dumb rookie.

"I was running around like a chicken with his head cut off.

"At first I wasn't relaxing enough. I relax a little more now . . .

Perez said one of his basic problems was adjusting to the wider field after playing the American version of the game at the University of Miami. That was where he switched from running back to defence.

"When I played offence I was bruised and sore for days afterwards. When you play as a defensive back, it's you who is doing the hitting and I like to hit.

Scouts from National Football League teams all gave the same encouragement, Perez said: "Too small."

At the suggestion of assistant coach Jim Roseboro of Toronto he came to the Argonauts, but was unable to take a job away from regular Dick Thornton.

At Calgary, however, he was worked into the effective defensive unit, which gave up only 1,633 yards this season.

Coach Jim Duncan says the defence has been good because of "the cohesiveness they've achieved."

"They're playing really well as a unit."

Duncan says Calgary will have a good chance to win the first match in the best-of-three final if "we can get some momentum, get something going."

"But if we start grab-bagging, we'll be in trouble."

The Stampeders finished third in season play but got a chance in the finals after defeating Edmonton Eskimos 16-6 in Edmonton last Sunday in the sudden-death semi-final.

Saskatchewan lost only two games and finished the season far in front.

The game in Regina will be televised on the CBC national network beginning at 3 p.m. EST.

Two Faces of Cathy

Number 00 was kicker, punt receiver, quarterback, halfback and the biggest ground-gainer in a collegiate football game in Toronto Wednesday. However good a football prospect Number 00 may be, Cathy Dobolis, 19, is unlikely to become the fair-haired boy of any football team. After the game, and a good clean-up, Cathy looked very, very different.

Costly Words

Ray Jauch Fined $100

TORONTO (CP) — Ray Jauch, 1970 coach of the year in the Canadian Football League, was fined $100 Thursday by commissioner Jake Gaudaur who said his office "will not tolerate criticism of individual officials who are precluded by league regulations from defending themselves or answering back."

The fine was levied, Gaudaur said, for Jauch's "conduct in criticizing certain officiating incidents in the playoff game Nov. 8 . . . and more specifically for his remarks concerning one specific official."

Jauch, whose Edmonton Eskimos lost the Western Conference sudden-death semi-final 16-9 to Calgary Stampeders, criticized umpire Ken Stein who called a pass interference penalty against Edmonton's Mike Law at a critical point in the game.

The coach was quoted as saying "they ought to get him out of the league," and advocating a school for game officials.

Gaudaur said in a statement: "There is no evidence whatsoever that has been brought to the attention of this office which would indicate that Ken Stein is not a capable, honest official and he will be retained as a league official so long as he chooses to be one and so long as his present standard continues.

"As far as the suggestion is concerned that there should be an officials' school, there of course already is such an annual school, one which we changed to a joint or simultaneous school for Eastern and Western officials two years ago, to attempt to improve uniformity of interpretation and application of the rules."

Canada Well Off Pace

BUENOS AIRES (CP-AP) — Australia took a three-stroke lead after 18 holes in the World Cup golf championship Thursday in a round that saw Canada's Al Balding play two balls on one hole.

The Australian twosome of David Graham and Bruce Devlin shot a combined total of 131. The Argentine entry of Roberto de Vicenzo, the individual leader with an eight-under par 64 Thursday, and Vicente Fernandez was in second place with the defending champion United States team of Lee Trevino and Dave Stockton six strokes back at 137.

Trevino, who fired a 70 Thursday, was not disturbed about the U.S. team's position. He was the individual winner at Singapore last year.

"We never had the lead in Singapore until the last day so why should we worry."

Stockton opened with a 67.

Scotland, fourth, would have tied the U.S. except that Scotsman George Will was penalized two strokes for a lost ball on the 18th. Will finished with a 71 and lodged a protest, claiming that someone took or moved the ball, but the rules committee said his allegations couldn't be proved.

Canada was well off the pace with a 147 total. Balding, of Toronto, finished at 73—one over par with nines of 35-38—but ran into trouble on the 17th when his tee shot went into a ditch near the out of bounds.

The ball was in an unplayable lie, which counted one penalty stroke, but there was also the question of whether it was out of bounds and the possibility of two penalty strokes.

He played two balls until the ruling later that it was an unplayable lie and took a five on the hole rather than a six.

Bob Cox Jr. of Vancouver had nines of 36-36—74.

Wakely Proving He Is NHL Goaltender

By NICK FERRIS T
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Probably the biggest break Ernie Wakely got was in the summer of 1969 when St. Louis Blues decided they no longer required the services of Bob Schmautz and Norm Beaudin and Montreal Canadiens did.

The Canadiens traded Wakely to St. Louis for the two Blues, and thereby ended a 12-year apprenticeship in minor professional ranks for the 29-year-old native of Flin Flon, Man.

Since joining the National Hockey League Blues, Wakely has proved that he belongs in the league.

In the only two NHL games he played for the Canadiens, Wakely allowed seven goals. With the Blues, however, the former leading goaltender in the old Eastern Pro League and Central Pro League has been a game-saver.

His goals-against average in 36 games with the Blues was only 2.94 last season when he was No. 3 man behind veterans Glenn Hall and Jacques Plante.

And until Thursday night, he and Hall had allowed only 21 goals to be scored against the Blues in 12 games for a combined average of 1.75.

Wakely let in 13 of those goals in seven games and shared a shutout with Hall in another for a personal average of 1.85, not the best in the league but among the leaders.

Wakely allowed one of 26 shots to get by him Thursday night as the Blues edged Detroit Red Wings 3-1 in the league's only game at St. Louis.

Tim Ecclestone beat Detroit goalie Roy Edwards with his second goal of the year in the second period, providing what proved to be the winner.

Gary Sabourin's sixth in the first period gave St. Louis a 1-0 lead. Alex Delvecchio was the only Red Wing to beat Wakely, scoring his seventh midway through the final period.

The Blues' defence has allowed only two goals in the last 345 minutes of play. The Blues have won all six games at St. Louis this season, setting a club record for the most consecutive regular-season home wins in a year.

The 1968-69 Blues, who five straight at home in one stretch.

The win also gave the Blues a 7-2-4 record and 18 points, two behind the West Division leaders, Chicago Black Hawks, and two ahead of third-place Philadelphia Flyers.

Detroit remained in fifth place in the East, four back of Vancouver, Canucks.

Scotty Bowman, Blues manager, said Thursday defenceman Bobby Baun, recently acquired from Buffalo Sabres, has been suspended.

"You can say that we just have not been able to solve his personal problems . . .," Bowman said.

In the only game tonight, the streaking California Golden Seals hope to extend their four game unbeaten string at the expense of the hapless Sabres in Buffalo.

Petes Win in Usual Fashion

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Peterborough Petes moved nine points ahead of second-place St. Catharines Black Hawks in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A standings with a 5-1 win over Toronto Marlboros Thursday.

The Petes lead the league with 13 wins, one less and a tie.

Peterborough piled up a 3-0 lead in the first period with goals by Skip Foster, Paul Rayner and Denny Gloor, before Gavin Kirk scored the only goal for Toronto.

Jim Mahon and Craig Ramsay wrapped up the scoring in the second period.

Toronto outshot Peterborough 41-25 before the largest Peterborough crowd of the season, 3,983.

Peterborough goaltender John Garrett has a wide lead in the goals-against averages. His record, after allowing 29 goals in 14 games, is 2.07 goals per game. He picked up his second penalty of the year, an elbowing minor, in the third period.

Ferguson's Return Appears Not Likely

MONTREAL (CP) — Chances of John Ferguson returning to active National Hockey League competition with Montreal Canadiens appear dimmer today following his meeting Thursday with general manager Sam Pollock.

But the two men have agreed to meet again today to discuss the hockey future of the hard-rock left winger.

The former policeman of the Canadiens was for three hours with Pollock at the Forum.

Pollock wants Ferguson to play for last year's salary but Ferguson won't end his retirement for that, it was reported.

Ferguson was on the option year of a two-year deal when he announced his retirement five weeks ago to enter the shower business. It was estimated he was earning more than $30,000 a season.

Ferguson said he would meet with his business partners—Nelson Stoll and George Gardiner—to "talk this thing over again."

"I'd like to make a decision on this thing soon," he said.

Originally, Stoll was to accompany Ferguson to meet with Pollock, but Ferguson vetoed the idea.

"Sam and I have always been able to talk to each other and I thought it best to leave it that way," he said.

The Canadiens had no comment on the situation except to announce that no decision had been reached and there would be another meeting today.

Going into his meeting with the general manager, Ferguson said he had an "open mind" about his return.

"If the conditions are right I wouldn't be opposed to playing hockey again," he said Wednesday.

Asked after his meeting with Pollock if the chances of a return had lessened, he said: "You bet they have."

Selke Quits Seals

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — California Seals' general manager Frank Selke Jr. has submitted his resignation to Charles O. Finley who purchased the National Hockey League franchise recently, the San Francisco Chronicle reported today.

The Chronicle said it reached Finley by telephone at his Chicago office and quoted him as saying he has offered Selke a new contract but the general manager declined to sign it.

According to the Chronicle, Finley also said he has offered new contracts to coach Fred Glover and Bill Torrey, executive vice-president, but they have yet to sign.

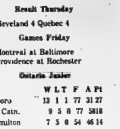
In Oakland, Selke declined comment.

Torrey would become general manager if he signs his contract, Finley is quoted as saying.

Hull's Wife Sues

CHICAGO (AP) — Joanne Hull, wife of Chicago hockey star Bobby Hull, filed for divorce in Cook county Circuit Court Thursday on grounds of physical cruelty.

She asked for custody of their five children and an "equitable" share of Hull's annual income, estimated at $250,000.



Lawyer Bernard Bindla said Mrs. Hull also asked for the family home in suburban Addison, alimony, child support payments and a share of Hull's assets.

Hull, who is reported to earn $100,000 yearly from the Black Hawks, has holdings that include another home on Big Island, Ont., several farms in Canada and livestock in Saskatchewan.

The couple has been married 19 years and have four sons and a daughter.

Mrs. Hull, 35, charged that her husband kicked her in 1966, slammed a door into her face in 1969, punched her in the mouth and threw her off an elevated porch last July, and again kicked her last month.

Bombers Try Second Time

FREDERICTON (CP) — University of New Brunswick Red Bombers, the only unbeaten, untied team in Canadian college football this season, try for the second year Saturday for a berth in the College Bowl.

The Bombers, winners in the Bluenose Football Conference two weeks before the schedule ended, meet University of Ottawa Gee Gees in Halifax in a game that will decide the bowl berth.

The other bowl entry Nov. 21 will be between Wilfrid Laurier Golden Gaels or University of Manitoba Bisons.

Last year, UNB went undefeated in the Bluenose Football Conference on the strength of a polished passing attack.

But, lacking a defence, they lost the Atlantic Bowl 20-6 to McGill University Redmen of Montreal on a playing field soaked by 13 straight days of rain.

This year coach Don Underwood feels he has been able to maintain the offence he had last season and balance it with a beefed-up defence.

The Gaels and Bisons meet Sunday in Winnipeg to decide the Western College Bowl title.

Peter Merrill, a 21-year-old junior from Lachine, Que., will start at Quarterback for the Red Bombers Saturday but Underwood had rookie Don Davis, 17, of Montreal, ready in reserve.

The UNB defence is led by two 21-year-old fourth-year men, linebacker Tony Proudfoot of Pointe Claire, Que., and tackle Dick Flynn of Pierrefonds, Que.

Sixteen of UNB's 22 starters Saturday—two players will play both defensively and offensively —are from Quebec. Three hail from Ontario, two from New Brunswick and one from British Columbia.

Rick Kaupp of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., will start at defensive tackle in place of injured Dan Russell of Montreal. He will also play on offence—as a flanker.

Tom Williams' Wife Dies

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The body of Emily Williams, 37, wife of centre Tommy Williams of Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League, was discovered in a car in the garage of the Williams's home here Thursday.

Williams found his wife dead. "She was in the car and dressed as if to go out," police said.

"When police arrived the car was out of gas. The car had been running previously."

Mrs. Williams was a native of Duluth, Minn., as is Williams. Among survivors, in addition to Williams, are four sons and one daughter.

Field Goal Stirs Controversy

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Big Tom Dempsey, the New Orleans Saints' crippled kicker who stunned the sports world with a 63-yard field goal, just happens to believe that anything's possible.

Dempsey, born with only half a right foot and without a right hand, became a football hero Sunday when he booted the 63-yarder in the game's last two seconds as the Saints beat the powerful Detroit Lions 19-17.

The kick eclipsed by seven yards the National Football League record—hung up by Bert Reichelner 17 years ago.

The 200-pound Dempsey is a quiet, modest man and the thought of being a football celebrity will take some getting used to.

The 23-year-old Dempsey is far from being a newcomer to professional football. He handled place-kicking duties for the Saints last year and had a 55-yarder to his credit.

When J. D. Roberts, making his debut as head coach of the Saints, called on him for the kick Sunday, did he feel he could do it.

"Yeah, I guess I did," Dempsey said in an interview, with his new tattered shoe sitting on the table in front of him. "I went out there with just one thing in mind.

"I knew it was a long field goal, but I went out there trying to concentrate on kicking the ball hard, trying to keep my head down and following through.

"It was a great moment. I still sit at home at night by myself and think about it," he said.

"You know, I walked out on the field Thursday, 63 yards and looked. It scared me. It really scared me. It's awesome."

Dempsey does not consider himself handicapped and doesn't believe he needs any extra consideration.

He played high school football and two years at Palomar Junior College in California. At Palomar, he played defensive end—"I loved the hitting and the contact."—and became a kicker only as an afterthought.

"I like being a kicker. I like the pressure involved. I love that feeling."

Dempsey shied away from getting into controversy with general manager Tex Schramm of Dallas Cowboys, who said he believed Dempsey's shoe does not conform to NFL rules and indicated the record field goal is slightly tainted.

Saints' general manager Vic Schwenk fired right back at the statement Schramm made Wednesday in Dallas.

Schramm called the shoe which covers Dempsey's abbreviated foot "a sledgehammer." Dempsey has very little, if any, instep, and no toes on his right foot.

Schwenk recalled that Mark Duncan of commissioner Pete Rozelle's office examined the shoe before the 1969 season, "checked the shoe out and it's the same shoe today, although Tom got a new one constructed exactly the same way."

Schwenk said he talked with NFL headquarters in New York Thursday and said Rozelle "reaffirmed the fact the shoe had been approved by the league."

"I think J. D. Roberts put it as plainly as anyone," Schwenk said. "The shoe wasn't an issue before the kick, why should it be an issue now?"

Wishart Says Shulman Harms Police Integrity

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-general Arthur Wishart attacked Dr. Morton Shulman in the Ontario Legislature Thursday for causing "irreparable damage to the integrity of the provincial law enforcement agencies."

In a 15-page statement, the attorney-general took the New Democratic MPP to task for "random and irresponsible disclosures."

He was referring to Dr. Shulman's charges last week that the government has not held inquiries into aspects of organized crime despite police requests to do so.

Mr. Wishart said the NDP member for High Park had made allegations "fired with inaccuracies and innuendoes."

Police are familiar with the matters raised by Dr. Shulman, he said, but "I am in no position to discuss publicly anything that may arise as the result of any investigations, and the circumstances revealed by such investigations".

Dr. Shulman, in a prepared statement delivered to the press gallery, replied that Mr. Wishart's statement was "a rambling philosophical attack on myself."

"Nowhere in the statement does the attorney-general make any reference to the problems of organized crime, nor does he indicate that there is any concerted attack planned on organized crime," Dr. Shulman said.

A series of amendments to a revised version of the missing act were rejected by Mines Minister Allan Lawrence and the legislature followed suit.

Mr. Lawrence said legal responsibility for carrying out safety provisions rests with management. Diluting that responsibility by bringing in union representatives would be a backward step.

In other legislature business Thursday:

—Treasurer Charles MacNaughton said legislation providing for collective bargaining procedures for Crown employees in Ontario will not be dealt with at this session of the legislature but may be re-introduced next year.

—Attorney-General Wishart said the Ontario government has "not decided whether to intervene in income-tax evasion charges against Stafford Smythe, president of the Toronto Maple Leafs hockey club. Mr. Smythe's lawyer argued successfully two weeks ago that the charges against him violated his civil rights. The case is under appeal by the Crown.

—John Spence (L—Kent) called for an investigation, possibly by the legislature committee on education, of the education system in Ontario, because of its high cost.

Brunelle Won't Stop Quetico Logging

TORONTO (CP) — The rift between the Ontario government and the Algonquin Wildlands League widened Thursday when Rene Brunelle, minister of lands and forests, announced there would be no change in its policy to permit logging in Quetico provincial park.

Mr. Brunelle told the legislature that logging in the park was essential for a new pulp and paper mill at Fort Frances and that it was in the public interest to maintain the park's status quo.

Quetico, a 1,766-square-mile park in Northwestern Ontario between Thunder Bay and Winnipeg along the United States border, has stands of good pine, spruce and poplar which would be used in the new mill.

C. Abbott Conway, president of wood requirements of their expanded facilities."

Mr. Brunelle said the "natural environment" classification for Quetico park permits a wide variety of recreational opportunities. A primitive or wilderness classification would impose "very stringent use restrictions."

The only persons served would be those interested in the wilderness, he said. The existing campground would have to be closed, no roads accounts for 79 per cent of employment in northwestern Ontario and "we have a responsibility to O and M to meet the

'A Drag'

Black Rhino Show Slow

NEW YORK (AP) — Kifaru, the Black Rhinoceros, NBC's Thursday night nature special, was a cram course by a Canadian Biologist on the life span and eating habits of a ferocious-looking, legume-eating inhabitant of Africa.

The hour-long program indicated the black rhino seems to be holding its own despite fear from some that it is an endangered species.

Canadian biologist John Goddard has spent six years in Tanzania and Kenya studying and making a census of the black rhino

The opening segments showed him tranquillizing a number of rhinos to inspect their teeth and measure their horns. But for the viewer, the high moments came when the huge creatures seemed ready to charge the human.

The show was pretty much of a drag despite efforts to brighten it up by showing the biologist's family life.

The day's big television effort was coverage of the funeral services for Charles de Gaulle. Once again, the live satellite coverage reminded one of the truly awesome dimensions.

NBC elected to broadcast the memorial mass in Notre-Dame Cathedral in Paris live, even though it started at 4:30 a.m. EST for East Coast viewers.

All networks used the excellent camera report of the French broadcasting organization, with staff correspondents providing individual commentaries.

WHITE FACE, BLACK MASK

Some white South Africans are reported putting on black-face to attend concerts by American goul singer Percy Sledge at a blacks-only theatre in Capetown.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

All People Are On Health Food Kick

Whether or not we are aware of it, each one of us is on a "health - food kick." Sick or well, we have our own dos and don'ts relative to what we eat and drink.

For example, at a recent dinner celebration - one man tactfully refused an offering of luscious cake baked by the hostess herself. Reason? He had diabetes. Another did not take celery or seeded rolls because he knew, from experience, that such foods irritated his colon.

His wife refused coffee because it made her nervous. Her dinner partner had no objection to coffee or dessert because she was on a reducing diet. All had good enough reason for using their will power in passing up foods that they might have enjoyed. But there was one man who ate very little of anything because he had become too choicy.

But there was one man who ate very little of anything because he had become too cholesterol - conscious. Although his physician had told him that he was in excellent health and could eat "anything," this unhappy person had been so impressed by the dangers of "cholesterol" that he had become too diet-conscious.

His blood pressure, heart, cholesterol blood level, and family history all were negative. At 42 his doctor had pronounced him as "sound as a pre-inflation dollar." Nevertheless he had become a cholesterolophobe.

He avoided milk, cream, butter, cheese, oysters and lobster, gravy, chocolate, potatoes, steak, frankfurters, eggs, bacon — any and all foods that were "high" in saturated fats. He was becoming thin and drawn. He had lost over 20 pounds during the past few months.

His wife begged him to forget about cholesterol. So did his doctor. He turned to me and said, "What do you think Isn't this low cholesterol diet of mine a pretty good guarantee that I won't get a heart attack?"

I told him, "Sorry. But I'll have to go along with your doctor's opinion. Although I believe that a low - cholesterol diet is probably indicated in people who have a bad family history of artery disease, in those who have had a heart attack, in those with high blood cholesterol who have abnormal electrocardiograms, or in patients with diabetes — it is silly to put yourself on such a strict diet.

"I agree that you should go on a regular unrestricted diet. You're paying too high a premium to prevent a heart attack. Relax and enjoy yourself. You're too tense. That's worse for you than a high-fat diet."

He listened intently, nodding his head, as if he agreed. But I noticed that he passed up the cake, took his coffee black, and lit another cigarette.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I was upset at your attitude about vitamin E. Three years ago I suffered severe pains from varicose veins. I wore special elastic hose and kept off my feet as much as possible. An operation was in the offing.

Instead I took vitamin E at the suggestion of one of my friends. Three months later the pain began subsiding. Today I have no trouble at all. — Mrs. B.

Comment: Call me stubborn and unbelieving, but I still think that what helped you more was keeping off your feet and wearing the elastic hose. I am not convinced that vitamin E "cures."

* * *

For Mrs. W.: I am not aware that removing a "chronic appendix" will help epilepsy. Better check with a neurologist before consenting to operation.

Hospitals to Get Parcost Drugs

TORONTO (CP) — After Jan. 1, generic-name drugs sold to government hospitals will have to meet the approval of Ontario's Parcost prescription drug plan.

Health Minister Tom Wells told the legislature Thursday Ontario's two plans to curb the costs of prescription drugs will be co-ordinated. After the first of the year, only those compainies in the Parcost index will be acceptable sources of generic-name drugs.

Under one program, the province buys prescription drugs in bulk by generic names for its hospita's and for the departments of health, social and family services and correctional services.

The Parcost program lists prescription drugs by brand name and offers a price comparison between manufacturers so that doctors can order a prescription that saves a patient money.

Davey Media Report Likely by Christmas

TORONTO (CP) — Senator Keith Davey said Thursday the Senate committee that investigated Canada's press, radio and television is aiming for release of its report by Christmas.

The Ontario Liberal, who served as committee chairman, said in an interview the report has been completed and is at the Queen's Printer.

Senator Davey said he is hopeful the report will be available for distribution before Christmas. The committee started its hearings Dec. 9, 1969, and completed them in the last week of April.

The senator refused to disclose or even hint at the contents of the report, and would only say he's confident the committee did a thorough job.

The report becomes public when Senator Davey tables it in the Senate, and it is subject to debate in Parliament's upper chamber. Whether its recommendations become law is up to the government.

Senator Davey said his committee's assessment of the media today is no less important than the actual recommendations.

The 15 members of the committee agreed unanimously on the report's findings and recommendations—with the exception of Senator who dissented on one issue but did not write a separate opinion. Senator Davey gave no hint of what the issue was.

The final draft of the report was written in Ottawa during the summer months by Alexander Ross, a writer on leave from the Financial Post. It was edited by Borden Spears, the committee's executive assistant, and lists Senator Davey as publisher.

The committee has spent nearly $500,000 in conducting its hearings, research and writing the report.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Fraternity Vital Ideal

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

One of my children, studying the French Revolution, was keen with the slogan of that event, "Liberty, Equality and Fraternity," and asked me which of the three I thought was most important in a country.

There is no doubt in my mind that "fraternity" is the operative word in this triad of ideals. It is the only thing that can bind the other two together in a just and workable mix. If we think of fraternity, love or brotherhood, then either liberty or equality begins to dominate and operate the community.

All this has been the trouble with almost all revolutions, beginning with the French. The whole idea of brotherhood, which has animated such movements, diminished in power and prestige because of the goals of the new rulers.

Without fraternity, the idea of "liberty" turns into brutality and greedy anarchy, and men are used and exploited in the name of such false liberty. Society then degenerates into a barnyard burlesque, exemplified by that old saying: "Every man for himself," cried the elephant as he danced among the chickens. It is precisely this attitude that made the soil of many nations fertile for sowing the dragon's teeth of Marxism.

Conservatism, without fraternity, the idea of "equality" becomes a deadening and despotic dogma. Everybody is leveled downward to a dull uniformity, except the small elite who run the country, presumably in the name of the "people" who have little to say about their affairs.

If too much equality is sacrifice in order to obtain liberty, we rob the mass of men of their natural rights; and if too much liberty is sacrificed in order to obtain equality, we penalize talent and initiative and industry.

Thus, it is only the sense of fraternity in a nation that acts as a "binder" keeping equality and liberty in a fair equilibrium. For "fairness" is impossible unless brotherhood is a spiritual and moral reality among people. No social, political or economic system can long maintain a balance if its fabric of fraternity is ripped. Words such as "freedom" and "equality" and "justice" have their basis in the ethical being, not in mechanisms or maxims of government. They are constituted of "right feelings", as of "correct ideas", as the Marxists erroneously imagine. And the idea of a good society is to explicate and promote such feelings.

The only revolution worth having, with a chance of permanent success, is a revolution toward fraternity; then both liberty and equality will be its byproducts. Such a revolution is called "redemption".

For November 14

Your birthday today: Recognition in your particular field may come this year. Help from many factors from outside converging to help your struggle for improvement. Self - promotion should be a part of your daily effort, with the goal of increasing your position. Emotional life promises many bright moments. Today's natives for all their impulsive, restless natures do love their homes. Many are poets, painters, astrologers.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): This is an intellectual day of fresh ideas. Relatives can be dealt with readily at the moment. New acquaintances are interesting, probably predatory.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): An extra effort makes a disproportionately large impact now. Personal enterprises, original ideas are strongly favored.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Your increased mental energy generates curiosity, perhaps a restless urge to move on to greener pastures. The evening brings romantic interest.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Whatever you do not quite understand is now open to your investigation. Confidential matters should move with dispatch — out of public view. New ideas [illegible]

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Make a count of those favorably disposed to your plans. A search for new ideas, fresh contacts makes possible a long step toward fulfillment of a dream.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): There should be some way for you to improve your status today. Original methods at work are limited and more than likely turn out rather well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Look for better information early in the day. Review details of personal plans; something you skipped over in the past now needs attention. Career efforts are productive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): You are much freer to act without having to persuade people that you are right. Seek hidden assets, unused talents.] Think of possible changes of direction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Teamwork is easier today. Make full use of it in both work and play. You stand to learn something important from close co-operation with your friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Get an early start on weekend chores. Attend any health care matter. Invest some time in your favorite hobbies, adding a new factor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Personal plans advance well. People and conditions are quite reliable. Experiments work out differently than expected, so you have a new puzzle to unravel.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Take a good look at your home. Reflect on what might increase its value or its usefulness. Get busy and do what you can; make plans for later efforts.

Paper Says Trio Hid As Lortie Arrested

Abduction Plot Foiled in U.S.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Police have foiled a plot which they said was aimed at kidnapping two Midwestern officials, hijacking an airliner to take them to Cuba and holding them for ransom for six prisoners including black militants Angeles Davis and Bobby Seale.

Ronald L. Reed, 20, was arrested Friday and charged by federal authorities with conspiracy to steal an aircraft.

Police said notes found on Reed, a Negro, when he was arrested pointed to a plot to kidnap Gov Harold LeVander of Minnesota and hijack the airliner. They said reports from other sources indicated a plan to kidnap Rosalie Butler, who is a city council member in the neighboring city of St. Paul, wife of a wealthy contractor and mother of three.

Police had been tipped to the plot and posted guards Thursday night around the governor's mansion, Mrs. Butler's house, which is next door, and the Minneapolis - St. Paul airport. The guards were withdrawn Friday after the arrest of Reed in a Minneapolis apartment.

He also is charged with aggravated assault, intent to kill and armed robbery of the Ames Plaza Bank at Omaha, Neb., Oct. 29.

Police released handwritten notes which they said were found on Reed and in his apartment.

One said: "Change governor — Liberate prisoner — hijack — leave country — hijack."

Another that also included misspellings was for the airplane crew to transmit to the control tower, police said. Its contents included: "We our revolutionary, take heed to our first and last warning. If any attempt to interfere or stop us, we will blow this airplen up and everything on it.

"We are well arm and we our carring explosives. The plane and hostages will be held until our demands our met."

Police said the prisoners sought as ransom were:

—Miss Davis, held in New York and wanted on San Rafael, Calif., on charges of murder, kidnapping and conspiracy arising from an Aug. 7 courthouse shooting fatal to four persons.

—Seale, chairman of the Black Panther party, who is held in Connecticut on charges of conspiracy to murder a Black Panther member.

—George Jackson, awaiting trial in California on charges of killing a guard at Soledad prison and one of the so-called Soledad Brothers. A Marin County grand jury has said the San Rafael shootout was part of a plot involving Miss Davis to take hostages to exchange for the Soledad Brothers' freedom. Jackson's brother, Jonathan, was killed in the shooting.

—Three men now in jail at St. Paul: Constance L. Trimble, 18, held in the ambush shooting death of a policeman; Gary Hogan, 15, awaiting trial for a bombing in a department store restroom, and Larry L. Clark, charged with Reed in the Omaha bank robbery.

Joseph Rankin, deputy police chief, said police had known of the alleged plot for "some time." He said Reed had been sought since police learned Nov. 1 of warrants for him in Omaha.

'There's an increase in unemployment- whatever that means!'

Inflation No Longer Top Worry

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — Federal Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Friday Ottawa has ceased viewing inflation as the principal problem it was two years ago.

Speaking at the University of Lethbridge during a two-day tour of southern Alberta, Mr. Benson said the government has had "a great deal of success" on the price side of the economy and the cost of living is holding its own.

He expected national production to level off by the end of the year and begin to increase in 1971. The biggest problem was "worrysome" high unemployment but he expected it to ease during the next 15 months.

He suggested monetary and fiscal policies would cut down unemployment rather than government implementation of increased public works programs.

The Parade'll Be Along Later

The parade is still some distance away but that didn't diminish the playing of these three musicians marching through Belleville's downtown last night. Brian Carey 14, (left) his brother, David, 16, and Steven Menna, 14, took to the streets garbed as a clown band to sound off for tag days raising Santa Claus parade funds. The Christmas gala parade is scheduled for Dec. 5.

Wanted Men Said Overlooked

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says that a cubbyhole in a walk-in clothes closet at the apartment where police arrested Bernard Lortie last week may have enabled Front de Liberation du Quebec kidnappers to elude capture.

The claim was made Friday by a high-ranking police official, the Gazette says.

"All four of those wanted for the kidnapping and killing of labor minister Pierre Laporte were in the apartment," the officer said.

When police opened the door of the apartment they came face-to-face with Lortie, the 19-year-old student who was the key witness at the opening of the coroner's inquest into Mr. Laporte's death last Saturday.

Police made a room-by-room check of the apartment, placed a guard at the front door then went to eat, returning later with members of the identification section," the officer said.

"When they returned," he said, "they found that someone had gone out through the back door."

The hideaway was located shortly afterwards and the fingerprints of all four suspects were found.

The other prints were those of brothers Jacques and Paul Rose and Francis Simard, all named in warrants as persons wanted for arrest in Mr. Laporte's kidnap.

Quebec Police Setup Studied

QUEBEC (CP) — Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said Friday that a white paper on law enforcement being prepared by his department will deal basically with the organization of Quebec police forces and touch on possible restrictions of certain civic liberties.

Mr. Choquette told a news conference that the study, to be made public next year, will cover the training, qualifications, equipment and numbers of police in the province as well as the possible legislation of wire tapping and bugging practices.

A suggestion he raised last week that personal identification cards should be issued for all Quebecers will also be included in the white paper report the minister said.

Earlier in the national assembly while announcing the study, Mr. Choquette said it was being prepared to show "that control of the government should have".

In Montreal, meanwhile, police reported no new developments in the hunt for the kidnappers of British trade envoy James C. Cross, 49, held since Oct. 5 and Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte, abducted Oct. 10 and slain Oct. 17.

Five more persons were arraigned in court at Montreal, bringing to 46 the total charged under emergency regulations of the War Measures Act, invoked Oct. 16

The five included Jocelyne Despatie, 21, a secretary and the first woman to be charged with seditious conspiracy in Quebec's anti-terrorist drive. Arraigned on the same charge, which carries a maximum sentence of 14 years, were students Gerard Pelletier, 21, and Pierre Bourret 19.

The three also were charged with being or declaring themselves to be members of the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec which claims responsibility for both kidnappings and the subsequent Laporte murder.

Jean-Jacques Leroux, 28, a reporter, and Daniel Seguin, 18, a student, were charged with advocating the aims of the revolutionary FLQ. Leroux also was charged with FLQ membership.

In Quebec city, Mr. Choquette told the news conference the study will touch on means of preserving law and order in the face of terrorism and organized crime.

Although it will involve individual civil liberties, he said the government does not intend to act "in a repressive way" to preserve public order and safety.

He announced the study following his speech in the emergency debate on the government actions in the kidnap crisis.

Ford Strike Date Is Fixed

DETROIT (AP) — With the machinery for ratifying its tentative settlement with General Motors Corp. in motion, the United Auto Workers union has taken steps toward getting a new contract at the No. 2 automaker, Ford.

The UAW, which won a tentative settlement at GM that could increase the average worker's wage there above $5 an hour, served notice Friday it will strike against Ford Motor Co. Dec. 7 unless it has a new contract in hand by then.

But settlement at Ford is expected to come without a strike such as the one which has paralyzed GM for eight weeks.

Moderates in Control After Syrian Coup

DAMASCUS (AP) — Defence Minister Hafez al Assad seized control of Syria's government today after a quiet midnight coup that overthrew the Marxist civilian government.

Most citizens of Damascus — 25 miles from the front lines of the Israeli army — were unaware that a coup had taken place and that their government leaders were in jail.

This Syrian capital was calm, with no signs of trouble on the surface and no unusual military activity. Shoppers thronged to the bazaars as usual and government ministries were open for business.

Arab diplomatic sources said Assad and his men arrested President Noureddin Atassi, Premier Yousef Zayyen and Maj. Gen. Salar Jadid, a leader of the Syrian Baath party, in raids on their homes late Friday, the Moslem sabbath. Jadid's only title is assistant secretary-general of the party, but he was the behind-the-scenes strongman of the Atassi regime.

Baathist sources said agents of Assad's intelligence force rounded up the key Marxist figures and set up guards at prime military and government buildings. They said there was no indication of tension in Damascus.

The defence minister, a member of the moderate wing of the Socialist Baath party, wants closer Syrian ties with Egypt and the Baathis wing in Iraq and he has advocated all-out war with Israel. Even so, he is considered more moderate than the Atassi regime's leaders.

Baathis sources in Beirut said Assad could be expected to be less adamant in pressing a military settlement with Israel than the Marxist Baathists. They said they also expect an attempt to join the Arab federation planned by the leaders of Egypt, Libya and Sudan.

Tidal Wave Death Toll May Be 20,000

..DACCA (AP) — A rescue commission official said today the death toll could climb to more than 20,000 persons from a tidal wave and hurricane along the Bay of Bengal's 500-mile coastal.

An official of the central government said he was told by an official of the Barisal district, 70 miles south of Dacca, that an area or Bhola Island was "washed away." The official said the area had 18,000 residents

Another commission announcement said 13,800 natives were stranded on another island but were in no immediate danger. Directors of the rescue operation were inspecting the 250-mile coastline from Khulna to Chittagong today by helicopter to assess reported extensive damage.

The number of confirmed dead was 468, with at least 2,000 missing, officials said. "The untraceable are surely dead," said one.

Ships were bringing relief supplies to the offshore islands. On one, Hatia, a local magistrate said thousands were killed when the tidal wave left 20 feet of water.

Hatia, 20 miles from shore, has a population of at least 200,000. District commissioners said the island was devastated.

Reuter has received unconfirmed reports reaching Dacca today as saying about 60,000 persons are feared to have been washed away when the tidal wave struck Hatia.

One eyewitness said there were 250 bodies along one eight-mile stretch of the East Pakistan coastline. Communications were down between the interior and much of the 250 miles of coastline hit hardest by the storm's 150-mile-an-hour winds and 20 foot waves.

There were reports of thousands of persons missing along the islands.

A rescue party left for the island of Dubla, where 12,000 Hindus assembled for a religious festival were believed trapped.

No word had been received from a 14-member party of World Bank experts and consultants who left Tuesday on a tour of areas that later received the brunt of the storm.

Despite Rain Bridge Use Still Possible

Despite almost continued rainfall for the past week which has slowed concrete curb installation to a crawl, project engineers are still hopeful that the Nov. 30 target date for opening the new Dundas Street roadway can be met.

Only two things — continuing rainfall or a sudden turn to freezing weather — might prevent Lightfoot Construction from getting the project far enough along to allow use during the coming winter.

Plans are to complete the east and west approaches to the new bridge and to lay base asphalt paving on the two south lanes to allow two-way traffic up the hill for the winter months.

The full four-lane width of Dundas Street between the new bridge and Jane Street, as well as intersection work at Coleman and Jane Streets are expected to be completed this fall.

Finis coat paving would then be done with the return of warm weather next spring.

Rebuilt Dundas Street West, when completed will have four lanes to the top of the hill divided by a median strip in the centre.

Curb work at the west approach to the new bridge is now well under way and weather permitting the contractor will be able to commence the laying of base asphalt by the end of next week.

In the meantime, between the showers, shoulder work is going ahead on the fill sections between the bridge and the top of "Devil's Elbow Hill."

It's been a summer of traffic disruption along the lower end of Coleman Street between Dundas Street and International Hardware, but conditions will be worse before they are better.

This week under a separate contract awarded only recently by council, Lightfoot's are ripping up the old asphalt south of Bridge Street in preparation for laying of new curbs and asphalt.

The lower Coleman Street project is part of a dual contract which will see lower Coleman Street rebuilt and also the Bay Bridge Road from the CPR overpass to the city limits.

Plans call for widening of Bay Bridge Road adjacent to Zwick's Island Park and for repaving.

Rains Slows Curb Installation

Idle wheelbarrow in foreground is indicative of the slowed pace of curb installation on the West Dundas Street re-construction project. Picture looking south on Coleman Streets shows curbwork leading to Dundas Street intersection with new Moira River bridge in the background.

Obituaries and Funerals

JOSEPH ARTHUR WHALEN

In ill health for some years Joseph Arthur Whalen, 141 Yeomans Street, died Friday in Belleville General Hospital. He was in his 68th year.

Born in Belleville, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Whalen, he was a life resident of the city and had worked for the former Belleville Lock Company and The International Harvester. He retired in 1967. He was a member of St. Michael's Church.

A bachelor, he is survived by one sister, Mrs. Harry (Evelyn) Hawkshaw of Belleville. Four brothers, Douglas, Harry, William and Edward, and a sister Helena, predeceased him.

He took a keen interest in sporting activities and was an ardent bowler.

The funeral will take place Monday from the O'Brien Funeral Home to St. Michael's Church for mass at 10 a.m. Interment will be in St. James Cemetery.

MRS. IVA M. GREEN

Funeral services for Mrs. Iva Maud Green were conducted in St. Andrew's United Church Marmora on Thursday afternoon with Rev. J. Peters officiating.

The bearers were six grandsons, James and Tim Green, Lewis and Jack Barker, and David and John McManus.

JAMES FORESTELL

(RR 1, Stirling)

James Francis Forestell of RR 1, Stirling, died in Belleville General Hospital on Thursday, Nov. 12 in his 84th year following an illness of eight months.

Born in the province, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Forestell. He has been a resident in the Stirling area for the past 48 years, residing previously in Bonarlaw.

A retired farmer, he was a member of St. James' the Minor Roman Catholic Church in Stirling. He was a member of the Holy Name Society.

He is survived by sisters Mrs. Nina Lagrow of Napanee, Mrs. Annie Sheridan of Port Hope, Mrs. Hattie McGillan of Detroit, Mich., and several nephews and nieces. He resided with nephew, Joseph Forestell.

Three brothers, John, Arnold and Tobias predeceased him.

Funeral Mass will be celebrated at St. James' the Minor Catholic Church on Monday, Nov. 16 at 10 a.m. with Rev. Father J. F. McGarvey officiating.

Mr. Forestell is resting at the Hogle Funeral Home, Stirling.

Interment will be in Sacred Heart Cemetery, Marmora.

Quebec

Parti Quebecois for suggesting that the government should have met the kidnappers' demands for the release of Mr. Laporte and Mr. Cross, he said acquiescence would have meant "stepping inward anarchy."

Mr. Choquette said it appeared evident to him there was, in the kidnap problem, "calculated policy aimed at sapping the present democratic institutions behind the too-convenient answers of the Parti Quebecois and its leader (Rene Levesque)."

The separatist party has said that 23 so-called political prisoners should have been released in return for the two hostages with authorities, waiting until their safe return before hunting down the kidnappers.

The final Quebec government decision to refuse had been "dictated by Ottawa," the PQ spokesman said.

Mr. Choquette said the decision was made jointly by both governments.

He said acceptance of the demands would have meant the release of "common criminals" thus jeopardizing the Quebec system of justice—"one of the most impartial in the world."

Dealing with terrorists in the future would have been more difficult, he said, and Quebec's democratic system includes democratic means of protest other than violence which ultimately leads to anarchy.

Youngsters Dash Into Car's Path

Separate but similar traffic accidents resulted in injuries to two Belleville youngsters yesterday.

Mark Douglas Andrews, 6, 17 Bridge Street West, received a fractured leg and head cuts when, police say, he dashed into the path of a car driven by Douglas Rendell, RR2, Trenton.

The boy ran between a line of cars halted on Bridge at Everett Street by traffic lights.

Near the Upper Bridge, five-year-old Kimberley Diane Bene, 10 East Moira Street, received cuts and bruises when hit by a car driven by Ronald C. Thompson, Foxboro.

Police say the child ran between a line of cars stopped for traffic signals.

School To Include Figure Skating

With a bit of cold weather co-operation from Old Man Winter, would-be figure skaters among the pupils at Park Dale Public School are going to be one up over other schools in the city.

They are going to have their own "on staff" skating instructor!

Grade 3 teacher at the school, Miss Judy Lewis, herself a figure skating enthusiast, has offered to give skating in the Grade 5 and 6 level skating instruction and the city recreation and arena committee will co-operate by providing an outdoor rink at the school grounds.

School Principal Bernard Wright said that from the school point of view the skating instruction in all probability would be considered as part of the creative activity program on Friday afternoons.

Also, he said, Miss Lewis would try to give younger children some figure skating instruction during noon hours.

"We tried this at the Park Dale community rink a couple of years ago, but the time involved in walking back and forth to the rink made it impossible," Mr. Wright said.

So this year in another attempt to get maximum going, Mr. Wright asked the recreation committee if a rink at the school grounds might be provided.

Committee members this week went along with the idea and gave approval for the school rink which would take the form of a flooded area with snow banks as sides of the rink.

Chamber Hears From Minister

Support of construction of the Bay of Quinte bridge on Highway 14, south of Belleville, by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce was noted with receipt of a letter this morning from George E. Gilmour, Minister of Highways.

The letter, addressed to Frank C. Murray, chairman of the C of C, stated that "as a result of representations by Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP (for Quinte) we are giving the matter further serious consideration. It is evident that we must have further factual information on conditions at peak periods of road and waterborne traffic."

Hunter Missing At Ompah

SHARBOT LAKE — Searchers today were seeking a deer-hunting soldier missing in bush country north of here where temperatures dropped below freezing last night.

Cpl. Ken York, 45, resident at Vimy Barracks, Kingston, was last seen by a hunting companion about 3 p.m. yesterday while hunting near Ompah.

When he failed to return, his companion — a fellow serviceman — notified provincial police here who organized the search this morning.

At CFB Trenton, a spokesman said a rescue helicopter had been placed on standby at Ottawa to join the search if needed.

Temperatures in the Ompah area dropped to 28-30 degrees during the night said police.

Pedestrians Injured By Autos

TRENTON — A United Church clergyman is under police charges for injuries received when hit by a car.

Rev. Frank Hobbs, 54, pastor of Grace United Church, was one of two pedestrians hurt in separate accidents last night.

Mr. Hobbs suffered a fractured right leg, possible concussion and lacerations.

Police say he was walking across Dundas Street East at Gilmour Hill when he was struck by a car driven by James Hennessy, 44 Kidd Avenue.

The second accident occurred on Reid Street where Marina Warman, 16, sustained cuts, bruises and shock when hit by a car driven by Ray McGale, 55, RR1, Trenton.

IN MEMORIAM

ASH — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother Doris Ash who passed away Nov. 14, 1969.
Though her smile is gone forever,
And her face we see no more,
Still I have in many moments,
Memories of days before.
Though her hands I cannot clasp,
Still within I'll never part,
God in love has her in keeping,
I have her in my heart.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by daughter Lois, son-in-law Rick and grandchildren.

McCABE — In loving memory of our dear grandmother Harriet Ann Daley who passed away Nov. 15, 1967.
"A silent thought, a sweet token, Keeps his memory ever near."
—Loving remembered by grandchildren.

MUIR — In loving memory of a mother and dear grandmother Mary Ann Muir, who passed away Nov. 15, 1969.
Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary troubles are past,
The heavenly gates were opened,
And loving voice said "Come,"
And angels led her softly home,
To things too great for words to tell,
We wonder why you had to die,
We only know that God knew well.
—Sadly missed by her wife and family.

MORGAN — In loving memory of Beatrice Esther Morgan (Bea) Bedford, who passed away Nov. 15, 1969.
Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary troubles are past,
Heaven has gained another bright star,
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
But God called her home to suffer no more.
—Always remembered by Bob, Thelma and family.

MUIR — In loving memory of my mother Mary Ann Muir who passed away Nov. 15, 1969.
Sadly missed and always remembered,
Deep in the heart of her husband Bob.

NOLAN — In loving memory of my dear husband Roy Nolan who passed away Nov. 18, 1969.
Sadly missed and always remembered, Deep and Mary, Pat, Maxine and Bobby.

McCABE, Herbert — In loving memory of our dear father Herbert McCabe who passed away suddenly Nov. 15, 1967.
He lives in the hearts of those Who love you, is not to die.
—Lovingly remembered by Jean, Jack and family, Lethbridge, Alta.

MUIR — In loving memory of my dear mother Mary Ann Muir who passed away Nov. 15, 1969.
Time flies, the years lose their fragrance,
But still the memory lingers on,
Till the end of time, dear mother,
You will not be forgotten.
—Sadly missed and never forgotten by daughter Jean.

NOLAN — In loving memory of a dear husband and daddy Roy Nolan who passed away Nov. 18, 1969.
Sadly missed, always remembered,
Deep in the memory of me,
But death has left a loneliness,
For which there is no remedy.
—Always remembered by Sue, Mary-Beth and Sandy, Aunt, Mary-Beth and Bernard.

IN MEMORIAM

FORBE — In loving memory of Frederick M. Forbe who passed away Nov. 14, 1969.
Sadly missed by wife Ethel and Dalene; in his 69th year.
—Funeral Service from the O'Brien Funeral Residence, 38 Moira Street West, Belleville, on Sunday at St. Michael's Church Bon Air at 10 a.m.
Interment St. James' Cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM

FORBES — In loving memory of Frederick M. Forbes who passed away Nov. 14, 1969.
Sadly missed by wife Ethel and Dalene.

Where sunlight and wishes meet,
We take that road in thought today,
To the place we love the best,
To speak to you and see you,
Not just be gone betwen.
We'll be there to sit in memory,
And will forever meet,
—Always remembered and sadly missed by wife Ethel and family.

Dairy Show Entries Starting to Arrive

With the opening date of the show now only two weeks away, entries are already starting to come in for the 62rd annual British Empire Dairy Show.

The show this year will be held at 168 Front Street, across from the city hall in the former Intelligencer business office.

Dates for the cheese show are November 25 and 26 with the annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers Association to be held on the same dates at the Sun Valley Motor Inn.

Cheesemakers will commence setting up the show on Friday, Nov. 20 with judging to start the following Monday. Cheese — and possibly curd — will be sold at the show following completion of the judging.

Convention sessions will be presided over by Douglas Reid of Campbellford, now completing his second year as association head.

Murray Stewart, Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food, will give a report on the recent dairy products technology mission to Europe. The last day of the convention will see a panel discussion on whey disposal and on the work of the whey action committee.

Chairman of the panel will be Douglas Reed of Warkworth. W. R. Redelmeier, senior economist for Ontario dairy research, George Wood and Arnold Johnston are other panel members.

The convention will wind up with the annual cheesemakers' banquet and dance to be held Thursday evening, Nov. 26 at Club Canara.

Painting Delayed

Outdoor painting at the new Harder Drive rink in west Belleville will be delayed until the spring.

The exterior painting on the structure was included in the general contract for construction of the building but it has been decided that better results would be obtained by delaying the work until warm weather.

Accordingly, the city recreation and arena committee has deleted the exterior painting from the contract and the work will be carried out as a separate contract at the quoted price of $2,723.

The reason for re-writing the painting as a separate contract was to allow Campbell Bruist Construction, to be paid for work on completion of the building in February.

Minister Will Seek Nomination

TWEED (Staff) — Rev. Ian Munro, minister of St. John's United Church since July, 1969, has announced his intention of seeking the Liberal nomination for the provincial riding of Hastings.

The nominating convention will be held in the auditorium of Tweed-Ringerford Senior School Nov. 18 at 8 p.m. Robert Nixon, leader of the Ontario Liberal party, will be guest speaker.

Local members of the Liberal party say at least two others are expected to contest the nomination — one from Tyendinaga township, and the other from the Marmora area. The winning candidate will run for a seat in the provincial legislative assembly at the next election, expected to be held some time in 1971.

Mr. Munro was a leading figure earlier this year on the Tweed ratepayers committee to save the former high school as a secondary institution.

Born in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, he attended elementary and secondary schools there, Laurentian University and Queen's in Kingston. He is a veteran of the communications branch of the RCAF, serving at Centralia and Clinton.

Township Cancels Trailer Agreement

AMELIASBURG (Special) — Council Thursday voted unanimously to uphold the township's trailer bylaw and cancel an agreement entered into with resident Max Van Dyke earlier this year.

Mr. Van Dyke, who teaches public school classes at Madoc, lives in a mobile home on his father-in-law's property on the Redoubt Road west of Rossmore. He has been served a summons issued by the township for failing to pay $20 a month rent from Aug. 1 as called for in the contract. He is to appear in court in Picton, Nov. 24 to face a charge of violating the agreement.

If found guilty, Mr. Van Dyke is liable for a fine and costs of $23.50 and three months' back rent amounting to $60.

In an appearance before council last night, Mr. Van Dyke said he did not realize he was being fined such high rent until after he signed the agreement. His father-in-law, Jack Fraser, claimed the obligation for rent belonged to the owner of the land through taxes.

The resolution to cancel the agreement was proposed by councillor Arnold Weberall and seconded by deputy reeve Norman Best.

Sophiasburg township's reeve George Foster and members of his council visited the meeting seeking approval of a fire protection arrangement with Amelialsburg until the 1971 council is sworn in.

Amelialsburg agreed to provide a tanker with two men at a charge of $25 for the first hour and $25 for each hour afterwards, in the interim. Calls will be accepted from anyone in Sophiasburg by the Amelialsburg department's dispatcher during the period.

Both councils discussed the possibility of a permanent arrangement becoming effective when the temporary undertaking runs out.

Council adopted a request for Hydro to install three additional street lights in the village of Consecon.

The resignation of treasurer-tax collector Verna J. Sills to become effective December 31, was accepted with regret. The township will be advertising to fill the vacancy.

A resolution passed by Trenton council calling for the provincial police to transport prisoners to the regional jail at Napanee was approved.

Donor Clinic Best of Year

PICTON (Staff) — The Canadian Red Cross blood donor clinic held Tuesday was the most successful of the year.

Donors contributed 226 pints of blood, another clinic has well over its 200 - pint quota.

However, it was not enough to make up for the clinics this year and left the clinic 65 pints short of its 600 - pint quota for 1970.

About 40 Prince Edward Collegiate Institute students and about 15 school members donated blood. The clinic met its quota for special types of blood needed for scheduled operations in Toronto.

Trenton Population Shows A Decline

TRENTON (Staff) — The town's population dropped inexsarably in the last year, according to figures released by the Regional assessment office today.

Results of a provincial survey conducted between mid-June and early July indicate that the number of Trenton residents totals 13,541.

There were 14,003 Trentonians in the preceding year, when the study was made from May to August.

Regional assessment officials will begin shortly to analyze the results on a subdivision by subdivision basis.

Although the population fell by 362, the assessment figures for the town will not be down due to substantial construction in the last years, assessment officials indicate.

Dairy Princess Modelled in Butter

This year's Ontario Dairy Princess, Miss Dianne Gunning of Tweed, has been modelled in butter for the Royal Winter Fair which opened in Toronto Friday.

The butter sculptor is W. A. Clements, an art teacher at Danforth Technical School whose subject this year is the Farmer's Daughter, modelled after a real farmer's daughter.

This is the 12th year for butter sculpture at the Royal and it always is a popular attraction. Mr. Clements chose the Farmer's Daughter this year to help parry out the "Walk in the Country" theme of the 1970 Royal Winter Fair.

The butter sculpture of the Farmer's Daughter, sponsored by the Ontario Milk and Cream Producers, is located in Dairy Lane.

Frankford Lions Right on Track

The former railway station at Frankford, declared obsolete by CNR, has become the new headquarters for the Frankford Lions Club.

This week club members held their first meeting in the renovated station where once the sounds of the telegraph wire and the stopping passenger trains were familiar.

Marking the initial meeting at the new club headquarters was a visit from Donald Jones of Norwood, district governor of Lions International who presented perfect attendance awards to 10 club members.

One visitor, [illegible] 22 years perfect attendance, James Johns, Arthur Duncan, Clinton Hanna, Raymond Mercan and Arnold Sickle were presented with special pins.

A life membership card was presented to Mr. Johns who, in addition to being a charter member of the club, has served as president for a two-year term, and also as zone chairman, past district governor and district governor.

Students to Get Shorter Holiday

Ontario school children will have shorter Christmas holiday this year than in 1969.

With Christmas and New Year's Day falling on Friday, schools will remain open until Tuesday, Dec. 22 and reopen Monday, Jan. 4, giving students 12 days holidays this year instead of the 16 days they got in 1969.

However, students at other educational institutions here will have longer holidays than those in the public and separate school systems.

Classes at Centennial College will write exams until Dec. 18, then break until Jan. 4, giving them 16 days off.

Ontario School for the Deaf pupils will leave the institution at noon Dec. 17 to return to their homes. They will return to the school Jan. 4. Classes at OSD will resume the following day.

At Albert College, Christmas holidays begin Dec. 17 and end Jan. 4.

"To Preach and Teach Christ" . . .

So, naturally, we proclaim Christ! We warn everyone we meet, and we teach everyone we can, all that we know about him, so that, if possible, we may bring every man up to his full maturity in Christ Jesus. This is what I am working at all the time, with all the strength that God gives me.

I wish you could understand how deep is my anxiety for you, and for those at Laodicea, and for all who have never met me. How I long that you may be encouraged, and find out more and more how strong are the bonds of Christian love. How I long for you to grow more certain in your knowledge and more sure in your grasp of God Himself. May your spiritual experience become richer as you see more and more fully God's great secret, Christ Himself! For it is in Him, and in Him alone, that men will find all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.

U.S. Violence

In a nation where homicide and violence unhappily are everyday occurrences, the city of Detroit appears to have the dubious distinction of becoming one of the worst affected communities in this regard.

Because of an increasingly dangerous atmosphere in the city, Windsor citizens across the river are staying away. But less fortunate was a 19-year-old Kingsville youth who was shot dead by robbers when he refused to hand over his wallet last Sunday.

Law and order, the main plank of the recent Nixon-Agnew campaign, is being eroded steadily day by day. Nobody is really safe anywhere. Death came to the young man he rode an elevator with two companions and a young woman they had met shortly before and who had invited them to her apartment. At the fourth floor they were confronted by two gunmen. When the victim refused to hand over his wallet, he was yanked out of the elevator and his companions ordered to ride to the top floor. Moments later they heard two shots.

Sure there are 200 million people in the United States and the majority go in relative safety, but nonetheless an extraordinary number of people (a figure of some 17,000 a year has been mentioned) die in this fashion. In this respect the United States presents an increasingly bad scene, and one which we can see little prospect of improving so long as weapons remain easily available.

Park Interlude

Speaking of violence in the United States, it does not prevent Mrs. Jacqueline Onassis from having a whirl round Central Park on a bicycle, accompanied by son John. Now Central Park (being where it is, in New York) has its share of muggings, shootings and other manifestations of a sick society. But the former Jacqueline Kennedy is not deterred; a couple of years ago she was pictured with John and daughter Caroline boating on a park lake. And there is no doubt of course that not far away on such occasions is the secret service — up a tree or perhaps on a bicycle!

Christmas Sharing

In today's letter on the subject of changes in the administration of the Christmas Sharing Program, Janet Smith makes a fair point. "For these reasons and a number of others, like the inequity that occurs when different groups pack baskets, resulting in a great many hard feelings and bitter complaints, the policy of letting families have the fun of planning their own Christmas is being tried."

The plan sounds like a good one, particularly in view of the fact that duplication in the past has made some underprivileged families temporarily very well off indeed.

But what if the money is not put to the uses to which it is intended? There could as easily be abuses and we wonder if it will be possible to make any checks in this regard. With this reservation, the plan deserves to succeed.

Maugham Melodrama

The BBC's interesting weekly series of Somerset Maugham's works, currently being screened by the CBC, takes viewers back to the days of Empire.

Here we see the life of the rubber planter or district officer in places like Malaya merged with Maugham's favorite theme of infidelity or marriage on the rocks. Here are bared the pressures of life in remote outposts of empire, the loneliness and the boredom, the temptations that afflict men and women living in small national enclaves in foreign places.

Observing these contrasts of life, dressed up in Maugham-style melodrama, with their insecure male characters and fallen women, one is reminded of what Maugham once said about himself: "I do not think I am any better or any worse than most people, but I know that if I set down every action in my life and every thought that has crossed my mind, the world would consider me a monster of depravity." Or as someone else has said: "We all have thoughts that would shame the Devil."

Apollo 14 Ready

Apollo 14 is on its launch pad, ready for a January 31 shot at the moon. It seems a long time ago now that the world held its breath while the Apollo 13 men fought their crippled spacecraft back to earth last April. The new spaceship has been modified extensively to guard against another mishap on dittus man is ready for further exploration of the mysteries of space.

Canada's Sombre New Image

U.S.—Style Security Surrounds P.M. and Ministers

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — With the FLQ terror in Quebec resulting into Ottawa, at least across the Ottawa River to the National Capital — was not defence Headquarters bombed and a woman in its communications centre killed ? — how can things ever be the same again?

It is a long, long way from those days of normalcy, we all thought so turbulent with the "explosive," as it was termed at the time, Pipeline Debate, when Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent, bumacicade in his grey suits, walked along Wellington street, tipping, in old-world courtesy, his fedora to the ladies who recognized him and smiled.

Walking without a thought for personal safety, anywhere by the city, or, for that matter, across the river in Western Quebec's millkown of Hull.

Even those people who left the Capital and the Press Gallery only short weeks ago would not Believe the scene today.

It is not so much the troops with their guns at the ready, the military personnel carriers rumbling along Wellington Street below Parliament Hill and out the Western Parkway to the Connaught Rifle Ranges, one of three Armed Forces bases around the Capital where the emergency forces have been stationed.

It is what the whole hideous scene foreshadows; in the weeks, months and perhaps years to come.

Remember those smug, indulgent, complacent chuckles when United States Presidents, first Harry Truman, then Dwight Eisenhower, and the last presidential visitor, John Kennedy, came here with their small armies of Secret Service bodyguards?

Surrounding the three Presidents, trotting beside their limousines, paced all around Parliament Hill?

And what a shock it was to us all when a Secret Service sharp - shooter was spotted, tucked almost invisibly away, up under a fold in the linen - covered high - vaulted ceiling of the House of Commons!

It could not happen here. But it has.

And it is here to stay.

As the days slip by you get used to seeing Finance Minister Edgar Benson walking up Parliament Hill with a Sten-gunner in battle dress at his heels.

And Prime Minister Trudeau, getting out of his bullet-proof limousine, with unmarked RCMP police cruisers fore, after and alongside.

With those plainclothes guards standing for a hundred - yards around, backing up the sharply-increased ceremonial - scarlet - coated RCMP patrol.

Riflemen with their telescopic lenses and their bino-ulars on the roofs, behind the turrets and chimney pots of the old buildings surrounding the parliamentary compound - and back of the ventilators, the elevator cupolas and other places of concealment atop the new high-rise towers.

The House of Commons has been "sanitized" as never before. Without notification, regularly, there is no entry, even for old and familiar faces, including Members of Parliament if they can not show their "ID" cards.

Inside the Centre Block, along the half-mile or more of corridors, in the galleries of the House, the cafeterias, the dining room, the Library and reading rooms: strangers.

Strangers, because being special security men, they are alternated so no face becomes well enough known to be spotted.

But that is the Ottawa scene, you shrug in distaste, and it is a long way from there.

But is it?

Think of the next election campaign, at most a year and a half away.

Think of the party leaders up on floodlit platforms, often on darkrowed shopping plazas, and remember those unruly crowds that last campaign, demonstrating, often violently, inside the meeting halls of the big cities and hammering on the doors of the auditoriums.

The security men are thinking about it — shuddering — and wondering how it all may be handled. Safely.

Why the Prime Minister, still the swinging favorite of the students, kindergarten, public and high school ages alike — is not allowed to come near them any more.

They still wait for him to come and go from the VIP entrance of the Centre Block, but they wait behind those wooden barriers under watchful eyes of the seeming- so-casually unconcerned guards stroking hers and biceps but never far away.

Sure, nobody is worried about the crowds of kids, but what about the few adults among them? Guards? Or is there fear that some kids, one of them may be something else?

So unless the dark picture clears, be prepared to see less and less of the leaders in the living flesh hitting the old-style campaign trail, and more and more of them in the guarded safety of the TV studio.

If they appear in person — as they almost certainly will be expected to do when asking you and your community for votes — they will have their cadre of bodyguards riding shotgun.

Pleasant prospect, what?

And remember how it used to be. Nice and easy.

No more.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

November 14, 1950

Reminding the citizens that war is not inevitable, Air Commodore W. W. Brown, RCAF, Trenton, said "the best protection against hostilities is preparedness". Guest speaker at the Rotary Club, he was introduced by Rotarian Phil Morrell. The club's newest member, Rotarian Jay Spragan, Mountain View, was introduced by Rotarian Stan Barber.

The Women's Guild of Albert College met in the Sunday School room of Bridge Street United Church with president, Mrs. W. Northcott, presiding. The guest speaker, Miss J. B. Tuite, of Albert College, was introduced by Mrs. Northcott, and appreciative thanks were expressed to Miss Tuite, by Helen Sulman.

30 YEARS AGO

November 14, 1940

One hundred and twenty-five years of outstanding progress in the field of Christian endeavor were fittingly celebrated at Bridge Street United Church on Wednesday evening as the members and adherents of this Belleville's oldest church, met in a happy social gathering to commemorate the anniversary of the founding of the Methodist church in Belleville, F. S. Deacon, Recording Steward, extended the official welcome of the church to the visiting ministers and to the members of the Belleville City Council.

A large number left for Peterborough to attend the 2nd Battalion reunion being held in the Litchick City. Lieut.-Col. Vanderwater, Warden of the County of Hastings heads the delegation from this district. A large number of men from Belleville and the immediate vicinity fought with the old 2nd Battalion.

Mrs. W. Allison and Miss Marie Fraser of Toronto are the guests of Mrs."G. O. Depeau of Hillside St.

Mrs. Rae Minns has returned to Toronto after visiting friends here.

At a meeting of the city council a bylaw was passed authorizing the raising of debentures of $30,000 which is the city's share in the purchase of the bay bridge. It is hoped that the county council will make a grant towards the purchase of the bridge.

Christmas Sharing Program

Recipients Will Be Able to Shop for Themselves

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

We wish to reply to "Frustrated, Givers" on their Nov. 11 letter.

The Belleville community organizations who look after the families needing a little extra help at Christmas time have been considering a change of policy for some time. It is unfortunate that some givers feel unable to agree with this new policy of giving money or food vouchers instead of baskets, but perhaps an explanation will help.

It is very kind of people to pack food baskets, but looking at it from the receiving end, how would they like to have no say at all in planning their own Christmas? How would they like to have their names given out to people who might not always by sympathetic to their circumstances? How would they feel, as parents, having to stand by while others planned their childrens' Christmas.

For these reasons and a number of others, like the inequity that occurs when different groups pack baskets, resulting in a great many hard feelings and bitter complaints, the policy of letting families have the fun of planning their own Christmas is being tried.

This year the Christmas Sharing Program is issuing cheques according to the following plan: one adult will receive $10, two adults will receive $15, and each child will receive $5. Also, the children will be given toys again this Christmas by the Firefighters Association, which has done a wonderful job of distributing toys for many years now.

If the Salvation Army, the Clergy, the United Community Services agencies, the Fire Fighters Association and other agencies who 12 months of the year work with families in Belleville feel so strongly that this new policy will give recipients a community vote of confidence in their ability to shop for their own families at Christmas, why not give it a try?

It is unfortunate that some givers will feel frustrated, but the Christmas Sharing Program feels that having frustrated receivers is worse.

JANE HASLETT,
Chairman, Christmas Sharing Program

Film 'Pussyfoots' On Drug Problem

Letter to Brockville Recorder and Times

I am a mother, age 26, and I have a son of five. I have a comfortable home and a fairly prosperous husband. I suppose to those in the 13-16 age group I am classified as part of the "Establishment". But after attending the November 4 films on drug abuse sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, I no longer wish to be classified as that.

How a responsible group of adults, at Kiwanis, could even take such a frowing and disastrous subject as drug-abuse and pussyfoot around it the way their films did is beyond belief.

I went with high hopes — fig ured that this gathering/concert in Brockville is going to stand up and say — we have a drug problem. Maybe we can help.

But no. They show us films that say, yes it's wrong, but then again so is alcohol and smoking. I know that, who does not? But that still doesn't tell me how to protect my child from drugs when word of mouth has it that there are pushers at the public schools. It doesn't tell me how to help my community fight drugs.

I want a drug-free city to raise my child in. Impossible? Yes — as long as no one will admit we have a problem.

I stand alongside the responsible teenagers in this city who scream: "Adults open your eyes. There are drugs in Brockville!"

A very disappointed citizen,
Mrs. Judy Beaseley

A Dim View of Men!

Letter to Trenton Courier-Sportsman

In reply to Allister Anderson's letter "What city's night life needs", he seems to exaggerate what a good time means — booze and lots of money. Men here are cheap, cheap! Where is there a decent girl meet a decent man today? Nowhere, because there aren't many. And we don't drink $50 worth of booze. What girl can? But a guy sure can!

We are attractive girls, with good professions and love a good time (not booze).

We go to the night spots here to have a good time, dance and meet people (not drink only), but where are the decent men between 21-30? We've given up.

CTC's Role

Future of the Railways

Windsor Star

The Canadian Transport Commission (CTC), the body which establishes regulations for the operations of Canada's railways has come under fire in the House of Commons for its decisions which allow the CN and CP to eliminate passenger rail service in large areas of the country.

The criticism, by an NDP, a Conservative, and a Liberal MP is timely but its content misses the mark. It is not enough to level attacks at the president of CTC, former Transport Minister J. W. Pickersgill. It is necessary to establish for the CTC a role which it can play to prevent the railways from pulling the wool over the eyes of Canadians.

The CTC has examined only superficially the reasons the railways give for abandoning passenger services. Its only victory has been the decision to require the CPR to maintain regular service on its "Canadian".

But the CTC should do more than regulate train service. It should do more than stamp yes or no on applications for abandonment. It should concern itself with creating a need, or at least a use, for passenger rail travel.

It should examine thoroughly the claims of railway officials who are worried about returns because some passenger trains operate at a deficit. It should work for better rail service because the rails are still an efficient way to travel in comfort, in quiet and with little addition to pollution.

It is too early to condemn railway passenger trains to scrap heaps or to the Western railways. Incentives are needed to attract passengers, not the disincentives of poor service, dirty trains, awkward schedules and prohibitive prices.

One responsibility of Canada's railways is to provide passenger service. If it requires a little imagination to attract passengers who have had bad experiences, the CTC might attempt to encourage it. An ounce of incentive is worth a dollar of government subsidy.

Church-related Colleges Face Serious Shortage of Funds

TORONTO (CP) — Shortage of government funds could force Church-related colleges out of existence, the Ontario commission on post-secondary education was told Thursday at its opening session.

"I can see nothing except death," Rev. J. M. Kelly, president of St. Michael's College, the Roman Catholic affiliate of the University of Toronto, told the commission.

He said if more funds are not available, next year "I might reduce by 100 per cent the freshman class."

He was commenting on a brief submitted by 23 church-related colleges, which claims the present level of government financial support—40 per cent the amount paid public institutions—is discriminatory.

Rev. Frank C. Peters, Waterloo Lutheran University president, said the current support level would not hit Waterloo Lutheran as heavily as St. Michael's, but it would mean heavier teaching loads on the faculty.

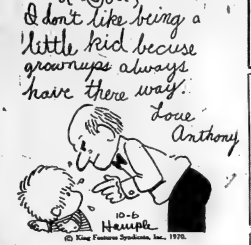
Dr. J. E. Hodgetts, Victoria University president, complained that the provincial government was not passing on all the funds to universities since the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act went into effect in 1967.

Archbishop Opposes Funds for Terrorists

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Michael Ramsey, arrived today for a 36-day visit to South Africa and reaffirmed his opposition to the World Council of Churches decision to give funds to anti-apartheid terrorist groups.

"I advised against the WCC decision and have never supported it," the archbishop told a news conference.

Replying to questions, Dr. Ramsey said: "I am not in favor of churchmen involving themselves in violent solutions."



The recent decision by the council to grant a token sum to African guerrilla liberation groups has been condemned by practically every Christian church in South Africa.

The archbishop is visiting South Africa for centenary celebrations of the Anglican Church in the country. During his stay, he will meet church leaders and Prime Minister Vorster.

The archbishop said he would be making a close study of race relations in South Africa and the role of his church in bringing about racial harmony.

Asked if he thought the church should interfere in politics, Dr. Ramsey replied: "Interfere—no, but preach a gospel that has political and social implications—yes."

Weekly Church Service Planned in Hospital

Belleville Ministerial Association is considering extending its ministry to the sick by holding a brief weekly service in a room on the fourth floor of the older hospital building for patients receiving extended care.

Ministers now conduct a Sunday afternoon service in the Hastings Manor chapel.

Visitation in nursing homes is also carried on by ministers, although not under the auspices of the association.

Two ministers were present for the first time at the last meeting of the association. They were Rev. Leslie Dean, new minister at Tabernacle United Church, and Rev. Andrew Finnie, a former minister in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, who has retired to Belleville.

Exercising Eases Tension

TORONTO (CP) — You don't need pills and ointments to cure many kinds of head and backaches—just harmony between body and mind, says Anna Palo-Heimo.

Founder of the Claremont Experiment, a program for "personality integration," she says aches in head, neck and shoulders frequently are a symptom of a "cultural ailment"—division of mind and body.

"We talk of open minds, but the openness of body is as important as that of the mind."

In her experiment she tries to bridge the split between creative drama, with an emphasis on flexibility.

"You encourage movements according to individual needs. If I am working with a mentally disabled I'll have him tell me his area of tension. Then I ask him to become that area: to move it, and then pretend there is a funnel through which the movement spreads throughout the body.

"The total concentration on the emotional movement serves as a purge. It temporarily releases the tension and relaxes the individual.

"Why do you think so many people have a pain in the neck? Because that's where the head is separated from the body.

"I think we have reached a dangerous fragmentation. Either we move toward personality integration or people are just going to explode."

Home Economist Says Sew a Knitted Dress

MEDICINE HAT, Alta. (CP) — Sew yourself a knitted dress this fall — advises Yvonne Hopkins, district home economist.

That's right. Sew a knitted dress.

This season Canadian women can buy a hand-knitted look by the yard.

"And the sweater knits are surprisingly easy to sew," said Mrs Hopkins. "Just try a few special tricks."

Many women in her area had asked about sewing on the new knitted fabrics and she had consulted a pattern company and reviewed literature from the fabric companies.

"Then I tried it myself."

Knitted fabrics come in cables, ribs and pebbly textures as well as the sweater-like fine-finish fabrics. For the heavier textures she suggested choosing a pattern with some design lines and few details.

"Jumpsuits, tunics and pants, simple dresses and midi vests are great choices."

If you are between pattern sizes, choose the smaller one as the fabrics have a little give, she said.

"Lay out your pattern following the lengthwise ribs of the knits just as you would a grainline in regular fabrics. Be careful not to let the fabric stretch as you layout the pattern."

She said knit fabrics vary in the amount of stretch that occurs during stitching, and advised experimenting with scraps before stitching the garment.

"Usually, stretching the seam gently as you stitch will incorporate the needed give."

You could also use one of the new stretchy threads.

"Reinforce seams that will be under strain, such as armhole or crotch, by stitching a second time.

"You will want to interface faced edges. To keep them from rolling, apply interfacing directly to facings instead of to garment."

Here are some other points Miss Hopkins recommends to help get that professional look.

—Zigzag stitch along seam edges to prevent fraying.

—For machine-worked buttonholes, interface the buttonhole area.

—Finish hem edges with stretch-lace hem tape. Lap tape one-quarter inch over the hem edge and zigzag. Catch stitch to garment.

—For firm knits that don't fray, try a tailor's hem.

—Keep details, like pockets, from stretching by backing them with net or tulle.

—Sews lightly, using a steam iron and barely letting the iron touch the fabric.

THE FEMININE TASK

"Methinks it is a token of healthy and gentle characteristics when women . . . love to sew." Nathaniel Hawthorne.

* * *

"When did I first start doing embroidering, petit-point? Oh, really — ever since I can remember. I embroidered my first piece of work when I was five years old. It was a design worked on a bit of linen used for the head rest at the back of a chair. My aunt used it until it was worn out, which was some years later."

Such are the reminiscences of an expert needle woman, now in our midst in Belleville, recently from a European country where she was born. We urge her to tell us more and she continues, saying :

"As a young girl I was always with a needle in my hand, so to speak. My mother loved to sew and perhaps I take after her. Later, I got married a sewing school for three years, and did excellent training as a dressmaker. All of which came in very handy as a housewife and mother of seven children.

"But, besides plain sewing, there was always something on hand: knitting, embroidery, needle - point of some sort, ready to be picked up at a moment's peace, when a stitch or so might be added. Such moments turn up and it is amazing how much is accomplished in just this way. I was never one for idleness with my hands. Then, too, it's rather satisfying to have something to show for the time save at one's disposal How many pieces of work have I done? Countless I guess, I just don't know.

"Yes, I enjoy doing petit-point. My eyes are not as good as they used to be and I work with a magnifying-glass. In my day in Europe, designs for petit-point and needle - point were not stamped on, with all the colors indicated, as is done today. No — one applied the design solely by counting the number of stitches. A stamped outline was unthinkable. And really it was more creative, exciting, satisfying and fun working on one's own, that way."

"Such needle - work is coming back into favor. It's really popular now, and I for one am happy this is the case."

Among Belleville's many expert needle - women whose hobby is needle - point is Mrs. J. W. (Rita) Lawrence, 6 Pine Street. Beautiful reproductions of famous paintings done in needle - point by her have graced the walls of her living-room. "I know of nothing that gives me greater pleasure to do," she declares.

Shana Alexander, the new Editor of McCalls Magazine, admits her fondness for embroidery described as a kind of, "needle - painting" whereby floral designs, built up with strands upon strands of thread or wool, so that each flower becomes a tiny cushion. It is suggested that each woman keep a yarn library of every and anything — from baby yarns to afghan and angora wools.

The famed 19th century American writer, Nathaniel Hawthorn, greatly impressed by women's needle work, wrote:

"Women have always some little handiwork ready to fill the tiny gap of every vacant moment. A needle is familiar to the fingers of them all . . . The slender thread of silk or cotton keeps them united with the small, familiar, gentle interests of life . . . When women . . . love to sew, they are never more at home with their own hearts than while so occupied."

Presbyterial UCW Holds Meeting

With the president, Mrs. T. W. Spear, in the chair, the fall executive meeting of Bellevile Presbyterial United Church Women was held in Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, on Monday, November 9. All members of the executive, and Mrs. B. Stetson and Mrs. E. R. Nelson, president and vice - president of Tabernacle UCW were also present.

After a welcome from the president a devotional period was led by Mrs. T. G. P. Barlow of Trenton. The long agenda was dealt with in morning and afternoon sessions. At noon a hot luncheon was served by Tabernacle UCW.

Miss Helen Sexsmith, portfolio secretary of supply and welfare, reported that there had been a gratifying response to the appeal for Angola. After being received and dedicated at the fall rallies, much practical aid in the form of knit bandages, and hospital and surgical supplies, is already on the way to Angola. Appreciation was expressed for the service being given by a transport firm who deliver, without charge, bales of used clothing collected in the Presbyterial to the United Church's supply depot in Toronto. The five regional vice - presidents reported that the fall rallies were well - attended and interesting.

Much attention was given to planning the Presbyterial annual meeting which will be held in Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, on February 11, 1971, with morning and afternoon sessions. The theme chosen was "Responsible Communication'. The Presbyterial is extremely fortunate in having been able to obtain an expert in the field of communication, Dr. C. Forrest, editor of the United Church Observer, to address the morning session. Dr. Forrest has recently returned from a month's long trip to the Middle East and will give a first hand view of the thorny Arab-Israeli problem. At the afternoon session problems met in the locals will be exposed and examined by means of an amusing play, 'An Exercise in Futility'.

Women's Group Aids Psychiatrist In Drug Rehabilitation Program

MONTREAL (CP) — Thanks to the determination of a young psychiatrist and the help of a women's group, the way has been opened here for a drug rehabilitation program—if the first year's operating expenses can be raised.

Dr. Sidney Lecker, a 33-year-old youth psychiatrist with the Montreal General Hospital, has been working on the project for several months in a volunteer.

"This year we were made aware of the fact that there's a much greater problem of heroin and amphetamines in Montreal than we ever thought.

"When we realized that Montreal was beginning to have a major drug dependency problem, a group of people, including the National Council of Jewish Women of which my wife is vice-president, met at my home and decided to form the Portage program."

Portage will be a corporation based on a rehabilitation and training program in New York called Daytop Village, Dr. Lecker said.

He feels the Daytop Village project is one of several such programs in the United States that he knows to be successful.

Daytop has been in operation for six years. It is financed by state and private donations. The village now has three private residences, two in New York City and one in the suburbs.

There are a total of 402 residents in houses, which are fully staffed and operated by former addicts. There are no doctors or psychiatrists and the residents operate the program as they progress through it.

It is an 18-month program. Residents spend the first year in the house working at domestic chores and attend group therapy sessions three times a week.

During the second, or re-entry, phase they work in community relations, introduce new residents to the program or operate the day care program. In this program, young addicts ranging from 10 to 14 years old are counselled during the day and return home in the evening.

In the third stage, the resident goes out to work but continues to live in the village for another four months after which he "graduates."

Daytop is entirely voluntary. Residents come in off the street or in some cases are recommended by a court or a courts or probation service.

Dr. Lecker said that some Daytop people came to Montreal, at the invitation of the National Council of Jewish Women, and agreed to become involved and to help set up the new program.

They will form the clinical supervision of the program which is to be located in the countryside. The exact location has yet to be determined.

The corporation, applied for a foundation grant and was granted $250,000 to buy facilities. It is looking for $100,000 for the operating expenses.

"Once we have the first year's operating expenses," Dr. Lecker said, "we will initiate the Portage program immediately.

"Although we plan ultimately to fill it up with 100 people two to three years from now, we could fill it up with 100 right now if we wanted to."

Club Activities

GAMMA MU CHAPTER

On Tuesday, Gamma Mu's pledges enjoyed a progressive dinner held in the homes of three different members. Social committee chairman Mrs. R. Owen was in charge of arrangements assisted by committee members Mrs. A. Gray, Mrs. R. Vaughan, and Mrs. D. Bayer.

The full course meal started with wine and appetizers served at the home of Mrs. A. Gray. The main course of lasagna and salads was enjoyed at the home of Mrs. A. Cameron, social sponsor. Dessert in the home of Mrs. J. Sherry was highlighted by mond ice cream, served with coffee. Appreciation was expressed to the hostesses for making the enjoyable evening possible.

A week previous to the dinner, a regular meeting was held at the home of Mrs. G Wishart, director. The program at this time was based on "Personality and Relationship" and was presented by Mrs. J. Sherry.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion by the hostess and co-hostess Mrs. R. Owen.

U.C.W. Meeting

SPRINGBROOK UCW

There were 20 members and one visitor present for the regular meeting of Springbrook United Church Women with president Mrs. Lorne Bailey in charge.

Mrs. Bailey opened the meeting by commenting on an article on church union taken from the United Church Observer.

Mrs. Jim Spry took charge of the worship service with other members taking part. Music for this portion of the meeting was rendered by Mrs. G. Williams.

Mrs. B. McKeown showed a film on "The Crusade Against Hunger" with views in India, Thailand, Africa, Latin America and the missionary at work. It was pointed out that these people should know that to help themselves by growing more and better food. A question and answer period followed.

Secretary Mrs. C. Burkill read the minutes of the last meeting and a number of business items were discussed. Mrs. Murney Mason the treasurer gave a report dealing with the banquet, opportunity sale and the anniversary supper. Mrs. G. Williams gave a report on the recent rally.

The president reminded members about catering at the Sales Barn on Nov. 30, after which she expressed thanks to the various committees and to the hostess Mrs. Bill McKeown who along with Mrs. M. Bateman and Mrs. S. Downer served lunch.

Britannia Metal Is Name Of High Grade Pewter

Britannia metal is the name of a high grade of pewter discovered about 1770 in England. In its best quality it consists of, 90 per cent tin and 10 per cent antimony. Occasionally traces of bismuth and copper are used as well. A cheaper grade consists of 96 per cent tin, five per cent antimony and one per cent copper. The remaining four percent is anybody's guess.

In its day this combination was known as white metal. Later the name Britannia was introduced. In 1817, in the first recorded use of the name, Brownell's Sheffield Directory listed 19 Britannia metal manufacturers.

Britannia metal was not subject to the same regulations in manufacture as silver or Sheffield fused plate or even pewter. It was discovered as an early date that it was suitable for electroplating and by the middle of the 19th century was the most important base for electroplate, for which it is still used although mainly supplanted by nickel silver about 1890.

The stamp illustrated is that of a firm started by James Dixon in 1806 and first known by his name alone. It became the major manufacturer of Britannia metal. In 1822 the firm moved to their present address. Cornish Place, Sheffield so named because of their large consumption of Cornish tin.

Dixon was joined by his sons in the business, William, James and Henry and his son-in-law, William Fawcett.

James Willis Dixon looked after the American side of the business and was a major exporter to the United States from 1830 to 1860. He lived in New York for part of the time. Most of the firms wares are marked James Dixon, or JD and S. Some have no name but are marked with a eagle stamp.

After 1891 imported pieces were stamped with a country of origin and sometimes about this period the letters EPBM for Electro-Plated Britan nia Metal and EPNS for Electro-Plated Nickel Silver began to appear on silver-plated articles by US manufacturers.

James Dixon and Sons were very successful. They expanded to London, set up in Australia, Italy, New Zealand, Switzerland. In the 1930's they took over an American firm, William Hutton and Sons, although they had been trading in the United States for over a century and held early American pewters for sale.

Not all items stamped James Dixon were Britannia metal. They also manufactured Sterling and the JD and S stamp is likely to appear on their silver, particularly that in North American style.

Britannia metal resists wear much better than pewter and many early pieces are still available. Unplated pieces are usually dark but not as black as tarnished silver. They can take a dull polish in their natural state or can be silver-plated in exactly the same method used in the first half of the 19th century. Quality and weight is generally better than current silverplate. Value about the same.

Successful Living

What Do You Do with Your Spare Time?

By DORIS CLARE

Bertrand Russell has said, "To be able to fill leisure intelligently is the last product of civilization." Recreation is a positive means used to fulfil man's leisure.

Children play, they are constantly moving, responding and developing new approaches to their environment. When adults "play" we call this experience recreation.

Recreation is as subtle as a gentle breeze. Recreation is an attitude, a framework pervading certain experiences. Reflect for a moment on the last activity you did for pure pleasure. What does recreation involve?

Free-will elements are suggested by the therapists in recreation: Choice, voluntary participation, self - satisfaction and leisure time.

It's odd up to this: For health and good spirits, we must do something with our spare time that means something to us as individuals. We must choose it, become engage in it—not because we have to but because we want to; we must shape a pleasing self-expression in it, and we need leisure times set aside in which to do it.

* * *

Dear Doris: How do I get my Christmas giving under control? I need something about this from a reader of yours who was giving presents to many people including her children's teachers, her husband's secretary, and others, along with a host of relatives.

I can see my meagre savings, the family budget and body needed rug, floating straight out the window come Christmas. — Vanishing Greenbacks.

Dear Vanishing: You can express love without going to the poor house immediately afterwards. My leaflet, "Banish Those Christmas Blues," suggests some ways to cut down the list, or to reduce cost of gifts.

These are other leaflets about Christmas, too: Christmas Games, Suggestions for Santa (age nine and up), Christmas Decorations, Make, Can Make, and On Knowing How To Give (for charitable projects).

When writing in, name the leaflet you want, enclosing 10 cents for each one and a large, six - cent, stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Dear Doris: My daughter of 18 is going to start a baby-sitting job and asked me if she could wear shorts, as when she was interviewed the lady wore shorts. I told her I thought she should wear a dress, but I was not sure.

I thought if anybody knew the right thing to wear you would, Doris. — Proper Dress.

Dear Proper: I like dresses too; but baby sitting isn't like working down town in an office. The important thing is to be hand-free.

Times are changing. Pants are the in thing. On a warm day shorts are o.k. for your girl in a private home. If it is cooler, choose a skirt and sweater, or a trim suit of slacks and sweater or skirt.

Ann Landers

Deceased May Twitch —But Not Move

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Will you settle an argument? A friend of mine who works in a mortuary says it is possible for a deceased person to move, up to 24 hours after he has expired. My friend also says the hair and nails of a dead person continue to grow.

I do not believe it. Logic tells me that nothing can grow after death. Who is right? — MONEY ON THE LINE.

DEAR MONEY: You are right, but let me explain why this old wives' tale persists. It takes approximately 30 minutes for the circulatory system and other body functions to cease after death. That is a dead person...might twitch — but not move.

ANN LANDERS

As for the hair and nails "growing," this is also a myth. After death, soft tissue recedes. Hair and nails covered by soft tissue might appear to be longer, but this is due to the recession of the tissues and not to growth.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are four married girls with a problem. We all live within a radius of 30 miles. A few months ago mom and dad decided to sell their business and move closer to us. We are all happy about the decision because the folks are getting on in years and there is no reason for them to work so hard.

Dad got a good price for his business ($50,000 in cash) and he has other holdings. So what's the problem? He and mom want to save the expense of a van and they have asked our four folks you are sorry, but the boys cannot move them. If you can afford it, offer to split the expense four ways as a "welcome-to-your-new-home" present.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I need your help because I don't trust my own judgment anymore. I'm a career girl, age 31, who had a great apartment until 18 months ago. When dad died, mother said she needed to be needed and if I would move back home she would find real joy in cooking and cleaning, and life would be worth living again. I knew it was a mistake to say yes but I was talked into it by my two sisters — who, incidentally, are happily married. (They couldn't care less about my life.)

Three months ago grandpa died. Grandma, who is 79, moved in with my mother and me. The two of them fight like cats and dogs. I am a nervous wreck from the screaming, the door slamming, and the name calling. They usually start arguing at the dinner table and they tear each other apart 'til after midnight. I must be up at 6:30 a.m. for work and I walk around half dead from lack of sleep. I've lost so much weight my clothes hang on me like a scarecrow. My social life is nil. I have no energy to go out evenings and I wouldn't dream of inviting anyone to this nut house.

Last night I told mother I was moving out. She said, "You can't. I need your paycheque. Grandma came without a dime." If anyone ever needed Ann Landers I do. Please advise me. — TRAPPED.

DEAR T.: Start packing. Give your mother whatever financial help you can and tell your sisters that they must come through with the difference. If you crack up and can't work, how much help will you be to your mother then?

U.C.W. Meeting

ELDORADO UCW

ELDORADO — President Mrs. Cyril Shaw conducted the November meeting of the Eldorado United Church. Women held at the home of Mrs. Harley Blackburn with 17 members, four visitors and nine children present.

The meeting was opened by a poem by Mrs. Shaw after which several members gave reports on the recent UCW rally held at Tabernacle. Correspondence included an invitation from the Bloomfield UCW to attend their annual bazaar at Trinity United Church on Nov. 19. It was suggested that the Eldorado UCW give a donation this year rather than having the regular bazaar and tea.

An interesting program in charge of Mrs. Gordon Blackburn followed, on the theme "Shoplifting". The subject was broken down into several categories and a lively discussion ensued.

All the annual reports of the various standing committees were given.

Mrs. Frank Palmer conducted the election of officers for 1971 and these include: Past-president, Mrs. Cyril Blackburn; president, Mrs. Cyril Shaw; vice - president, Mrs. Frank Palmer; secretary, Mrs. Floyd Blackburn and treasurer, Mrs. Stanley Sandford. Representative to the board of stewards is Mrs. S. Sandford and representatives to the official board is Mrs. Cyril Shaw. Pianist is Mrs. Ern Carman. Standing committees and chairmen were also appointed.

Mrs. Clayton Blackburn led in the worship service assisted by Mrs. Leonard Blackburn.

Lunch was served and a social time was enjoyed by all at the conclusion of the meeting.

Monster Dough Also Called Sourdough

By MARY MOORE

Attention M. Nelson who requested "Fruit and nut loaf from about 2¼ to 3 years ago" but did not give her address on stamped envelope. M. Nelson would you please do so and we will gladly mail it to you!

LETTER: No paper is discarded till your column is read just come across your request for "Monster Dough". A phone call to Winnipeg gave me the answer. This is also called "Sourdough" which was a more popular name for it.

Ingredients for Sourdough — ("Monster")

2 cups flour
2 tbsps sugar
1 tsp. salt
2 cups warm water

Mix to make a thick batter. Put in large crock or bowl so that it can soon to expand, cover, and place in a warm spot (about 85 degrees) for two days. (Don't let the aroma that develops during this time bother you, it disappears as soon as the mixture is baked.) This spongy mass is called the start, and transforms into wonderful rolls and pancakes.

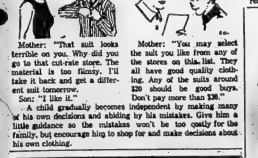
Once started the Monster Dough can be kept alive indefinitely. My Winnipeg friend keeps a jar in her fridge at all times, but it has to be used often.

To make rolls, stir ½ cup of flour and 1 tbsp. sugar into your start, adding enough flour to make a dough, knead until smooth. Put a piece of the dough into balls the size of a lemon and space them out on a baking sheet so they have room to expand. Sheet should be greased. Let rise in warm place for about 20 min., they should be about twice their original size. Bake in moderate oven for about 20 min. Delicious with butter and jam.

To keep remaining start alive, add 1 cup flour, 1 tbsp. sugar, ½ tsp. salt, 1 cup water. Stir well, cover, let stand, this time for only about a day as the original start is already working on the new mixture. My friend keeps her new start, once it is made, in a tightly covered jar in her fridge. Must be used at least every two days or so to keep it alive.

Hope this was what your reader was looking for. — Mrs. R. D. P.

ANSWER: Thank you for being so specific. I have not tried Monster Dough but am quite sure above is what the enquirer wants. She did not give her name and address which certainly complicates our response.



Thank you to all other readers who responded to my request for Monster Dough.

Mother: "That suit looks terrible on you. Why did you go to that cut-rate store. The material is too flimsy. I'll take it back and get a different suit tomorrow."

Son: "I like it."

A child gradually becomes independent by making many of his own decisions and abiding by his mistakes. Give him a little guidance so the mistakes won't be too costly for the family, but encourage him to shop for and make decisions about his own clothing.

Mother: "You may select the suit you like from any of the stores on this list. They all have good quality clothing. Any of the suits around $20 should be good buys. Don't pay more than $30."

Waiting List For Operation

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The number of women awaiting sterilization operations next year at Victoria Hospital is already greater than the number done this year, according to a senior medical official.

Dr. Hugh Allen, chief of the hospital's department of obstetrics and gynecology, said in an interview the waiting list for the operation is already running into September 1971 and this year, under by the month.

He estimates that by the end of this year well over 600 women will have undergone the procedure, more than twice as many as last year.

The department chief said about two-thirds of the "primary" tubal ligations — women who came for only sterilization on request — were handled on an out-patient basis and went home the same day.

Legislature Prorogues

Robarts Has Last Word, for Perhaps Last Time

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"Won't someone please ask Emily where she want on her vacation?"

TORONTO (CP) — The third session of the 28th Ontario legislature wound up Friday night with Premier John Robarts getting the last word for perhaps the last time.

With rumors sweeping Queen's Park that the 53-year-old premier plans to retire soon from the Conservative leadership he has held for nine years, Mr. Robarts took the floor Friday night for the final speech before the house was prorogued at 10:20 p.m.

He did not touch on rumors that he plans to step down before Christmas, but did announce there will be another throne speech during the life of the legislature, thus eliminating any possibility of a spring election.

The Conservative administration, in power in Ontario since 1943, does not have to call an election until 1972, but house sources expect one next fall.

Mr. Robarts' wrapup speech announced the predicted budget surplus of $41 million has evaporated into a $57-million deficit. He said Ontario will spend $3,778 million this year, $59 million more than was forecast, and revenue will drop below the $3,776 million predicted.

He blamed the additional spending squarely on the federal government, saying the money went to solve social problems created by federal efforts to control inflation.

The extra $57 million was broken up this way: $7 million in rent rebates for pensioners, $20 million in tax relief for farmers, $8 million in additional school grants and $22 million in additional welfare funds to meet winter unemployment.

The session ended in the house with a long day of last-minute business. In the corridors, the premier refused to deny or confirm he was stepping down.

Mr. Robarts, who earlier this month in an interview with The Canadian Press said he was "running hard" and "running scared," said in an interview Friday:

"It would be an absolute fallacy to say I don't sometimes consider what my future might be . . . but, until I come to a decision, it's business as usual."

The major storm of the fall session was over controversial amendments to the Labor Relations Act which, among other things, give the government power to set up an inquiry into prolonged disputes or in issues where the "public interest" is affected.

Friday night the NDP took the unusual step of speaking in opposition to the bill during third reading.

The amendments, bitterly opposed by organized labor, were fought section-by-section through public hearings, committee and in house debate.

Friday night, Hugh Peacock (NDP—Windsor West) reiterated his party's "unalterable opposition" to what he called "one of the most thoughtless, hasty and ill-advised bills of this session."

Another NDP member, Dr. Morton Shulman (High Park) raised a minor storm and a blistering rebuttal from Attorney-General Arthur Wishart when he named names and places in his personal crusade against the Mafia and accused the government of incompetence in dealing with organized crime.

An education tax relief plan for farmers, and a plan to integrate hospital and medical programs in a new scheme by 1972 were other highlights of the session. The plan includes a single premium and a new commission to replace private companies as carriers.

Other major legislation was:

—Creation of a second appeal division within the Ontario Supreme Court and widening of powers to give county and district court judges jurisdiction in divorce actions.

—Amendment of the Mines Act with a 300-section dealing with safety.

—An act to prevent job discrimination based on sex or marital status.

—A safeguard act to stop any large-scale takeover by foreign interest of Ontario's loan and trust companies.

An Open Letter to Belleville and District Families

from Mr. David B. Thompson – The Thompson Chapel

In recent months there have been rumours to the effect that the Thompson Funeral Chapel was soon to be taken over by American interest. This is not so.

The Thompson family have served the people of Belleville and district for three generations. (87 years). We intend to continue that service as Canadians as long as we are privileged to enjoy the confidence of so many people in this community.

We believe the needs of the families of Belleville and district can be best served by those whose interests lie in the future of this country and this fine city.

To that we have dedicated ourselves.

The only new small car that's better than the Volkswagen.

It has a trunk that carries twice as much as any Beetle ever.

It has a completely new suspension system for a softer ride.

The front trunk is wider for better handling.

The brakes are bigger for quicker stops.

It has a longer wheelbase than the Beetle.

Yet it has a shorter turning radius for easier parking.

All in all, it's 89 ways better than the Beetle of old.

Thereby making it the only new small car this year that stands any chance of replacing the Volkswagen.

And if you think about it, that shouldn't come as any great surprise.

Because this year, of all years, if anyone was going to build a new small car to be better than the Volkswagen, you knew who it would be.

The Super Beetle.

Let's make it a Great Christmas

Mo-Hawks Bid Fails As Barrie Wins 4-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Orillia Terriers just keep rolling along in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series, but Barrie Flyers are persistent.

The Terriers thumped Kingston Aces 8-1 Friday night for their 11th consecutive victory, but the Flyers are only four points behind after slipping Belleville Mo-Hawks 4-3 in overtime.

Mike Dubeau was the hero in Barrie, scoring the winner at 5:06 of overtime. He got one earlier and Corby Adams and Jim Thompson the others.

Georgs Godzon, Les Colligan and Doug Gosnier scored for the Mo-Hawks.

The Terriers have 22 points on their perfect record and the Flyers, who had to score a "test minute goal in regulation time to force the extra period, have 18 on nine wins.

In Friday's other game, Oakville Oaks destroyed Woodstock Athletics 12-4.

Garr Alexander, tops in the series, scored twice to lead the Terriers before a hometown crowd of 1,211. Dave Nicholaisen, Grant Moore, John Chaschewski, Bob Canning, George Vail and Paul Larent got the others.

Bob Clayton scored for the Aces.

Ken Knapton got three in Oakville's rout and Ron Robinson, and Cal Russell added two apiece. Defencemen Byrle Klinck, Dunc McDonald, Charlie Caprila, Frank Hincks and Chuck Kelly each got one.

Gary Mitchell, with two goals, Wayne Goetz and Murray Henderson replied for the Athletics.

Coffey, Zuger vs Springate, Wade

Odds Turn on Kicking Game as Als One Point Favorite

MONTREAL (CP) — The outcome of the Eastern Football Conference final between the closely-matched Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Montreal Alouettes, could depend on any one of four men—two on each team.

While neither Hamilton coach Joe Restic nor his Alouette counterpart, Sam Etcheverry, likely relishes the thought, the series could hinge on the place-kicking ability of Tommy Joe Coffey of the Ticats, or Montreal's George Springate.

Or to take it to the extreme, it could boil down to a kicking duel between quarterback-punters Joe Zuger of Hamilton and Montreal's Sonny Wade.

The first game of the total-point series is scheduled here Sunday at 2 p.m. EST, and will be televised nationally by the CTV network with the Montreal area blacked out. The second half of the series is slated for Hamilton, Saturday, Nov. 21, with the winner advancing to the Grey Cup at Toronto one week later against the Western Football Conference champions.

Montreal oddsmakers Friday established the Alouettes favorites by a single point for Sunday's opener.

The two teams split their three season games with each club winning at home and then battling to an 18-18 tie in the final game of the season here.

The Als outscored the Ticats 68-58 on the season.

Over the 14-game EFC schedule, both clubs gave up the same number of points, 279, but the Ticats scored 282 points to 246 for the Als.

Hamilton is made up almost exclusively of veterans, while the Als have 22 new faces in their 32-man roster. Seventeen members of the Ticats have been on Grey Cup champion teams, while the Als are in their first EFC final since 1962.

Coffey, who set an all-time Canadian Football League scoring record last season with 146 points, won the scoring title this season. It marked the fourth consecutive year he has surpassed 100.

He counted 36 of his 112 points this season on five touchdowns in his dual capacity as a split end. In his kicking role he contributed 29 converts, 13 field goals and nine singles when he was wide on tries for three-pointers.

Springate, meanwhile, joined the Als mid-way through the season. He contributed 41 points on 15 converts, eight field goals and two singles scored on wide field-goal attempts.

Coffey was good on 15 of the 21 field goals he tried, with his longest from the 43-yard line, while Springate was accurate with eight of the 14 he attempted. His longest was 41 yards.

Each missed five converts with Coffey good on 29 of 34 and Springate connected on 15 of 21.

Zuger, fresh off the injured list, will handle the Ticats' punting chores and act as backup to Wally Gabler if the latter gets into difficulties at quarterback.

Wade boosted the ball 102 times for the Alouettes for 4,217 yards and a 41.3-yard average as he counted four singles, while Zuger counted one single on 62 kicks that travelled 2,909 yards for a 46.5-yard average.

Wade's longest kick was 73 yards and Zuger's travelled 65.

Most observers here feel the youth movement undertaken by the Alouettes this season will somewhat offset the over-all experience of the Ticats.

Past Performance Set Aside

REGINA (CP) — Forget what happened during the regular season when you try to pick a winner for today's first game of the Western Football Conference final between Calgary Stampeders and Saskatchewan Roughriders.

"Things are different during the playoffs, said Calgary coach Jim Donlan, insisting that the home-field advantages provide no edge for either club.

The game at Taylor Field will start at 3 p.m. EST, with CBC national network cameras televising the action.

Saskatchewan won two of three regular-season games from the Stampeders, but Duncan feels the clubs are a close match.

Rider coach Eagle Keys seems to agree.

"Calgary has a great defence. They just don't have many weaknesses, but then neither do we.

"Calgary plays several types of defence and it all depends on how well we can read them. Then, too, it may be a case of what they do against us.

"We feel that there are things that we can do against them to score and I am certain that they will try and do things against us that they feel will work.

"The field should be in good shape, despite snow during the last few days. There isn't too much grass in the centre but the footing should be good.

"It is frozen, but not as hard as I had expected," Keys said.

The field was covered with a tarpaulin between the 25-yard lines and J. J. Hartman, director of parks and recreation, said that "should be in excellent condition between the 25-yard lines and, barring rain, the ends of the field should be in good shape."

The forecast for today called for overcast skies, a chance of some light snow, winds from the southeast at between 10 to 15 miles-an hour and temperatures near the 30-degree mark.

Fullback George Reed, out of action for 30 days with a fractured bone in his leg, was returned to the Saskatchewan roster today but Keys listed R. C. Gamble as the club's starting fullback.

Gamble, picked up from Edmonton Eskimos late in the season, rushed for more than 200 yards in the Riders' last two games of the regular season.

To make room for Reed, Keys dropped tight end Dave Denny.

The clubs head for Calgary for the second game of the best-of-three series Wednesday night. If a third game is required, it will be played here Sunday, Nov. 22.

Jet Set Goes West...Unhappy

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Jet set goes Hollywood Sunday, but it looks like a bad scene.

Unless there's a quick change of script. It will be Ronan Gabriel doing his superb directing for Los Angeles Rams, heavy favorites in the National Football League tussle at the Coliseum.

The Jets have been cast in a loser's role since putting casts on quarterback Joe Namath and runners Matt Snell and Emerson Boozer.

Namath and Snell are gone for the season with injuries, but Boozer could be ready soon.

"He worked out Friday and ran good patterns and plays, but we did not use him to block at all," coach Weeb Ewbank said of the pile-driving back who has missed two games with a rib injury. "Maybe he'll come around in the next two days, but if we don't activate him, it's because he's not healthy."

Backup quarterback Al Woodall was forced to leave last week's game with Pittsburgh with a bruised chest and is a possible starter against the Rams. If he can't go, then Jo. 3 quarterback Bob Davis will take over.

Gabriel's bomb-throwing right arm is alive and well.

The Rams, 9-3-1, have to win this one to stay within hailing distance of San Francisco in the National Football League's Western Division race. The 49ers, a game in front with a 6-1-1 mark, tackle Houston's punchless Oilers at the Astrodome.

Oakland Raiders, 8-2-2, hook up with Denver Broncos, 4-4, in a key American Conference Western Division battle. Kansas City Chiefs remain in that circuit with a 4-3-1 record, battle Pittsburgh Steelers.

San Diego Chargers, in a virtual tie with Denver with a 3-3-2 record in the dizzy Western Division race, plays at Boston. The Chargers haven't lost in their last four games.

Elsewhere in the National Conference, it's runaway Detroit Lions, 5-3 at Leading Minnesota Vikings, 7-1, in an important Central Division game and Washington Redskins, 4-4, at New York Giants, 5-3, in a key Eastern Division contest.

Buffalo Bills 3-5, meet Baltimore Colts, 7-1; Cleveland Browns, 4-4, at Cincinnati Bengals, 3-6; New Orleans Saints 2-6, and Miami Dolphins, 4-4; Atlanta Falcons 3-4, at Philadelphia Eagles, 1-7; and Chicago Bears 3-5, at Green Bay Packers, 4-4. St. Louis Cardinals, play Dallas Cowboys, 5-3, Monday night.

Manitoba Quarterback Gaels' Big Obstacle

WINNIPEG (CP) — The last time Queen's University Golden Gaels came west to meet the University of Manitoba Bisons in the Western Bowl, they whipped their hosts 23-6 on their way to winning the national intercollegiate football championship.

The Gaels arrived here again Friday from Kingston, Ont. to prepare for Sunday's game against the Bisons, but this time the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association Bisons are Canadian champs, and Queen's is looking for a tougher time.

Frank Tindall, veteran coach of the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association champions, says one of the main reasons is Bob Kraemer, the quarterback who has led Bisons to three successive WCIAA titles, in addition to the 1969 national championship.

"I have a lot of respect for that quarterback Kraemer, said Tindall.

"He was good when I last saw him play against us, and in the films I have seen of him this year look even better."

Tindall echoes the comments of Bison coach Henry Janzen when he forecasts a close contest, decided by the "big plays."

He would not predict which squad will get the benefit of these big plays, but expressed some concern about the weather for the game, scheduled for 3 p.m. EST.

"If I'm going to have to watch my club lose, I would like to do it in warm weather," he says.

Perrault's Eighth Goal Helps Stop Seals 4-2

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Buffalo Sabres weren't exactly giant killers Friday night but they did stop one of the most surprising winning streaks in the National Hockey League.

Led by much-touted rookie Gil Perreault, who celebrated his 20th birthday with a goal and an assist, the Sabres upended California Golden Seals 4-2 at Buffalo and broke California's unbeaten streak at four games.

The Sabres snapped a seven-game losing streak with their third win of the season.

Paul Andrea, an ex-Seal, scored the winning goal in the third period, breaking a 2-2 tie. Andrea was obtained by Buffalo Sabres before Skip Krake tied the Seals 2-2.

Larry Keenan jammed in an insurance marker in the final period on a rebound shot by Tracy Pratt.

Buffalo, with its three wins and one tie in 15 starts, for seven points, moved out of the East Division cellar, one point ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs and three back of fifth-place Detroit Red Wings.

The loss left California in last place in the West Division. The Seals have four wins, two ties and eight losses for 10 points, two less than Pittsburgh Penguins.

Elsewhere in the NHL forward John Ferguson said Friday he's not ruling out a return to Montreal Canadiens in time to be in the lineup next Tuesday against California.

Ferguson, 32, retired three years ago from the rigors of the schedule, saying at the time that his business interests were too strenuous for him to devote full time to hockey."

The situation had changed since then, he said Friday, because of the sale and merger of the company in which he still retains an interest.

After meeting with Sam Pollock, Canadiens general manager, Ferguson said he would play the remainder of this season under terms of his old contract and that he had signed a new one for the 1971-72 season.

Further, the Maple Leafs announced they had obtained defenceman Bobby Baun from St. Louis in a trade for left winger Brit Selby.

The 38-year-old began his NHL career with Toronto in 1957, spent 11 seasons with the Leafs then moved to Detroit and Buffalo, then Oakland Seals in 1967.

In games tonight, Montreal travels to St. Louis to meet the Blues. Toronto plays host to Boston Bruins, New York Rangers meet the Hawks at Chicago. Vancouver Canucks play the North Stars at Minnesota and California battles the Penguins at Pittsburgh.

Montreal travels to Buffalo Sunday, Toronto goes to New York, Boston plays host to California, Detroit meets the Kings at Los Angeles, Vancouver travels to Chicago and Philadelphia Flyers go to St. Louis.

Kinsmen Bantams Lose 6-0

Belleville's Kinsmen bantams ran into their first defeat on the road yesterday as they were defeated 6-0 by Peterborough in an exhibition game played in Peterborough.

The local all - stars failed to get untracked as the hometeam Petes applied the pressure throughout the game. Shaun Hamilton netted three goals for the winners and singles went to Don Lacombe, Chris Lee, Don Eastman and Bob Gilbert.

Oaks Sign Bob Taylor

OAKVILLE (CP) — Bobby Taylor traded his football boots for a pair of skates Friday when he signed with Oakville Oaks of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series.

The Toronto Argonauts flanker told the club it will take a few days for him to work into shape.

Poland Will Sign Pact with Germany

WARSAW (AP) — Negotiators for West Germany and Poland have drafted a treaty to heal the diplomatic schism carved 31 years ago when a Nazi blitzkrieg overran Poland and began the Second World War.

A spokesman for the Bonn delegation said Friday that Foreign Minister Walter Scheel will initial the treaty next Wednesday with his Polish counterpart, Stefan Jedrychowski, and that Chancellor Willy Brandt is expected to sign it in Warsaw before Christmas.

Jedrychowski said the pact is important historically and should begin "the proper process of normalization" of relations.

Ruediger von Wechmar, chief spokesman for the West German delegation, said the two foreign ministers also discussed other matters, including Polish permission for Germans living in Poland to emigrate.

An important feature of the document is Bonn's recognition of Poland's western frontier for the first time since the German surrender in 1945. Details were not announced, but it was understood that the boundary is drawn at the Oder and Neisse rivers, incorporating large areas of former German territory.

Adolph Hitler's invasion of Poland Sept. 1, 1939, brought on the Second World War, and diplomatic relations between the countries have not existed since then. Poland lost six million citizens during the war, most victims of Nazi concentration camps.

Bonn has indicated in recent months a desire to break down diplomatic barriers between countries in the Soviet bloc and the West, setting the stage for the Polish pact by signing a non-aggression treaty with Russia.

No Political Logic Is Seen In Robarts Retirement Now

TORONTO (CP) — Experienced members of all three parties in the Ontario legislature agreed Friday that there would be no political logic in a decision by Premier John Robarts to retire sometime before the next provincial election.

They said in individual interviews that if Mr. Robarts actually has made the decision — and he has made no indication that he has — it must be for personal reasons.

There is little doubt of Mr. Robarts' desire to get out of office after nine years as premier of Ontario.

Running through the transcript of a recent interview with The Canadian Press is the expressed desire for an easier life, for time to relax and reflect and to enjoy his family. There is, in addition, the fact that at 53 Mr. Robarts now can leave politics and its limited income and become a millionaire in private life before retirement age.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Friday he can follow no logical political argument that leads to a Robarts retirement at this time. There was logic to a resignation before the 1967 provincial election, he said, but there is none that makes political sense now.

James Renwick, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party caucus, agreed that a retirement decision now could not be based on political consideration.

"I can only presume that the premier is overcome by the fatigue of his office," Mr. Renwick said. "In my experience in the legislature he has never had a holiday free of all the responsibilities of office.

"If he has decided to retire, it is a decision that might change if he took one or two months off to lie in the sun. And nothing terrible would happen to the province if he took a couple of months."

United Church Voices Hopes Ryerson Will Stay Canadian

TORONTO (CP) — Repercussions from the announced sale of Ryerson Press to United States interests continued to be felt Friday as the former owner, the United Church of Canada, expressed hope that the governments of Ontario and Canada will take steps to ensure continued Canadian ownership of the textbook-publishing firm.

Last week the church announced it had agreed to sell Ryerson to McGraw-Hill Corp. of New York. The price was reported to be $2 million.

In Friday developments:

—Donald MacDonald, former provincial New Democratic Party leader, suggested the Ontario government take over Ryerson and operate it as a sort of provincial Queen's Printer.

—A spokesman for Manitoba's department of industry and commerce said a delegation will visit Toronto next week to see if the book publishing operation of Ryerson Press is worth bidding on.

—The United Church Observer hinted it had informed federal Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin months ago of the possibility that Ryerson would be sold to an American company and released correspondence to that effect.

—About 30 printers from the printing and bookbinding division of Ryerson Press met three Ontario cabinet ministers Friday in the hope of getting a government commitment that their jobs will be secure. They left disappointed.

The public's opposition to the sale of the 146-year-old textbook firm to an American company resulted in a meeting Tuesday between church officials and McGraw-Hill and Premier John Robarts. But no results were announced beyond a statement that another meeting will be held.

The church's statement, its first since the sale, said:

"It is also our hope that both federal and provincial governments will now, and in the future, take more creative and vigorous action to strengthen the position of Canadian nature of broadcasting in our country and to undergird other fields of the arts."

The statement said offers by Canadians to purchase Ryerson Press "fell" far short of the worth of the firm as seen by the McGraw-Hill company.

"It is impossible of course, for a church to sustain continuing and heavy losses of funds contributed to it for charitable and religious purposes in order to retain possession of a commercial enterprise."

During a meeting of the newly-formed Emergency Committee of Canadian Publishers, Mr. MacDonald said the Ontario government could use Ryerson to publish Hansard, the official report of government proceedings. Other material could be printed when the legislature is not sitting.

Hansard now is printed by private firms on contract.

About 100 attended the committee meeting, representing 14 Canadian publishing houses from Vancouver to Fredericton, which was called to discuss the Ryerson sale. The committee earlier this week called for legislation halting the sale.

The Manitoba representative stressed that next week's trip would be purely exploratory but said the idea of moving the operation to Winnipeg presents "all kinds of possibilities," including the production of textbooks for the province's school systems and also perhaps those of the other Prairie provinces.

In the letters to Mr. Pepin the church said: "At the present time the only firm showing genuine interest is American" and the church would be unhappy selling to an American publisher.

The church was commenting on a statement by Mr. Pepin in the Commons Thursday in which he said he had been informed by the church of its financial difficulties but that the church did not mention the "actual possibility it was going to be taken over."

War Measures Act Not Issue In Two Quebec Byelections

MONTREAL (CP) — Two federal byelections take place in this province Monday but the War Measures Act does not appear to be an issue in either.

Unemployment is an issue in Laval-des-rapides, north of Montreal, where Liberals are fighting to retain the seat left vacant when former defence minister Leo Cadieux resigned to become Canadian ambassador to France.

In Frontenac, more than 100 miles east of Montreal, a major issue hasn't developed but Liberals are waging a determined fight to break the Creditiste grip on the riding.

Mr Cadieux won Labelle by 5,581 votes in 1968, but Liberal candidate Maurice Dupras may have trouble holding this comfortable margin. Unemployed workers demonstrated when Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand campaigned recently at St. Jerome for Mr. Dupras.

Conservative candidate Paul Gelinas, 45, a lawyer from Ste. Agathe des Monts, and Andre Quellette 29, a teacher active in the new Creditiste northern part of the riding, are cheered by this demonstration. But Mr. Dupras, 41, a St. Jerome insurance broker and Liberal organizer, says his main opponent is voter apathy.

Fernand Alie, president of the Conservative provincial wing, expects the party to make gains "but we've got to be realistic—this was a minister's seat and the Liberals are in power."

He said in a recent interview that the main aim is to provide a Conservative springboard for the general election expected in 1972.

In Frontenac riding, more than 100 miles east of Montreal, eight asbestos mines keep the residents of the small towns employed and the farming appears moderately prosperous.

Creditistes, who expected an easy time holding the riding left vacated by Bernard Dumont, have run into a vigorous Liberal campaign.

So much so that Creditiste Leader Real Caouette has visited several towns and will speak at a rally Sunday night in Thetford Mines, the riding's major town, on behalf of 22-year-old party candidate Michel Champagne, a teacher.

The other hopefuls are Liberal Leopold Cerriveau, 43, president of the Thetford Mines school board, a former labor leader, a 32-year-old party candidate Michel Champagne, a teacher.

MPs Voice Their Exasperation With Public Order Act Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — After an early flurry of action Friday the Commons resumed painstaking study of the proposed Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, managing to complete examination of two clauses.

The progress of the debate, already five days long, appeared to exasperate some MPs. The House has been sitting in committee-of-the-whole giving clause-by-clause consideration to the bill designed to replace regulations under the War Measures Act.

David Lewis (NDP—York South), deputy leader of the New Democratic Party, remarked at one point that there seemed little hope of any amendments to the bill being accepted unless they were proposed by the government.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) said there had been only one useful exchange in 40 minutes of discussion on one clause. The same arguments had been repeatedly advanced.

The debate will resume Monday on the measure that retains many of the provisions of the War Measures Act regulations for dealing with the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec. But some would be more limited such as requiring charges to be laid against those detained within seven days rather than 21 days as under the regulations.

Earlier Friday, the government endured an apparently embarrassing vote on poor cabinet attendance at the daily question period.

The government defeated 79 to 42 a motion by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) to end the question period after opposition members complained that several important cabinet ministers, including Prime Minister Trudeau, were absent.

The motion was supported by the Conservatives, New Democrats and Creditistes.

Liberal backbenchers dominated the question period as opposition members boycotted it.

Pierre de Bane (L—Masane) said that one clause in the public order bill could lead to the "breakup of our families."

The clause would make anyone liable to a five-year jail term who knows or has "reasonable cause to believe" that someone else is guilty of an offence under the act and helps that person with the intent to interfere with his arrest.

Mr. De Bane, who has introduced several amendments to the bill, tried to have the legislation changed so that a spouse could not be held criminally responsible for assisting his or her marriage partner, even knowing that person has committed a crime.

The Liberal MP said this would follow along the lines of the Criminal Code of Canada. His amendment to that effect was defeated 39 to 17.

Justice Minister John Turner said a woman who continued to live with her husband would not be guilty of a crime under the act.

The wife would be liable to prosecution only if she assisted her husband with the intention of preventing his arrest.

The government also defeated 47 to 9 an amendment by Edward Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) concerning charges against a person who allows the FLQ or similar organizations to use his premises.

Mr. De Bane agreed with the minister's interpretation but said he could not see how a wife could keep from hiding her husband or helping him with a disguise.

The clause would make someone who knowingly permits the FLQ or a similar group to use his premises liable to a fine of $5,000 or a five-year jail term or both.

Mr. Broadbent sought to amend it so that a charge could not be laid against someone who leases his premises and finds afterwards that the tenants planned a criminal act.

CIGARETTE'S FOE

NEW YORK (AP) — A new crutch for smokers is a 19-inch piece of sticky tape that shrinks with heat. The so-called "lifeguard strip" can be placed around a cigarette at the place where the smoker wants it to go out. Then the burning end reaches the strip, the tape shrinks, and strangles the cigarette.

Solving Social Problems Way To End Terrorism--Robarts

TORONTO (CP) — The cure for revolutionary terrorism is further law, in solving social problems common to all parts of Canada, Ontario Premier John Robarts said in a wide-ranging interview with The Canadian Press on the third anniversary of his current administration.

Construction of a society in which the quality of life counts more than material wealth will eliminate sources of revolution in Quebec, he said, and relieve the "general restlessness" which breeds Canadian eversyalism.

How government can meet these challenges is much on the premier's mind as his Conservative administration prepares for an election due not later than 1972, but generally expected next year. The Conservatives have been in power in Ontario since 1943.

The interview took place before rumors began to sweep Queen's Park that the 53-year-old premier would step down before the next election, but Mr. Robarts answered questions about his future.

"As long as I am in this seat I'm going just as hard as I can go, and I am here. The day I choose to leave I'll tell you all about it."

On the Quebec crisis and its national overtones, the premier called for all Canadians to "close ranks" behind Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec and "give him a chance to do what has to be done and to do what obviously the people of Quebec want him to do."

He said a new emphasis on economic issues on the part of Quebec provides a greater chance of progress at future federal - provincial conferences.

Quebec is turning away from its preoccupation with constitutional issues and now echoes the rest of Canada in emphasizing economic imbalance among the provinces, he says.

Mr. Robarts, who has represented his riding of London North since 1951 and who became premier in 1961, also spoke of Canadian unity, the quality of life and government responsibilities in the fields of taxation, education and health.

Following is the edited text of the interview with the premier:

Q. Looking at the events in Quebec, what role has Ontario to play in preventing acts of terrorism and preserving the unity of the country?

A. It has always interested me that the Confederation of Tomorrow Conference was really not a constitutional conference. . . . It was a conference in which the governments of Canada, the provinces, got together to discuss matters other than their fiscal arrangements with Ottawa. . . .

Now the point that interests me very much is that it became quite evident at that conference that while Quebec was preoccupied with the constitutional problem the rest of Canada was not necessarily so preoccupied . . . although the rest of Canada was, I think, consistently sympathetic to Quebec's position. . . .

But what did come out of the conference, and has since been implemented, was the real concern of various parts of this country for the economic imbalance between parts of Canada. . . .

Now the events in Quebec . . . are going to require rethinking of a lot of things. It may be that in our approaches we have been too little too late; but that's not quite the way I see the situation. . . .

Ontario's role will be to continue to try to recognize the legitimate aspirations of all parts of the country. . . . This isn't very dramatic because it is, in fact, what we've been doing for some considerable number of years.

We're dealing with men who are operating outside the law . . . and the people of Quebec spoke in their election, they elected a new man, they gave him a good mandate. Now it seems to me we should close ranks behind him and give him a chance to do what has to be done.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Two Views Given On Sex Education

At last it is out in the open—the problem of sex education for our youngsters. Should parents be the source of information? Schools? Or both? Here are two expressions from readers:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I read the letter from the concerned parent who is trying to keep sex education out of the schools. I agree that a limited study of sex in relation to love should be taught in schools.

When I say limited, I don't include courses in sexual intercourse and other material that borders on the pornographic. Little children are being denied prayer in school, yet parents are being persuaded to accept as a matter of academic truth that their children can be protected from future psychological disorders by a full exposure in their early years to the mysteries of sex. I'm not so sure.

— Mrs. B.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I believe that the first step, no matter how small, in sex education should be taken as early as possible. I believe you will prevent a lot more sex problems arise at an early age.

Classic example is the girl who is raised in an atmosphere of virtue where sex is a dirty word, far from a natural act. In later life she is plagued with guilt and anxiety and other sexual related problems.

Many sexual problems which plague our society: venereal disease, illegitimate children, homosexuality, abortion and psychological problems are found in high school and grade school boys, as a result of having experienced traumas earlier in life.

It's too late to teach them. The only way is through an early program of sex education. Social, psychological and moral attitudes should be taught, in varying degrees of intensity, according to age. Both parents and schools should combine to share this responsibility. — Mr. P.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am not sure whether I should see my general surgeon or an orthopedist. I get pains in my lower spine and, sometimes — when I sit down on a soft seat or the side of the bed. It has been getting worse during the past two weeks. About a year ago I fell backwards on the vacuum - cleaner handle right at the bottom of my spine. — Mrs. W.

Comment: One guess — and only a guess — is that you may have some chronic inflammation in your tailbone called "coccygitis." Why not see your family doctor first? He will refer you to the proper specialist — if you need one.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have a 22 - year - old son whose blood pressure goes up and down like a Yo-Yo. At times his pressure will suddenly climb to over 200; at other times it is perfectly normal. With these attacks he gets severe throbbing headaches, nausea, flushing of the skin and anxiety spells. Sometimes he becomes actually confused and hostile. Do you have any suggestions? — Mrs. K.

Comment: With this kind of a history I always consider the possibility that there is some kind of glandular trouble. There is a rare tumor sometimes found in the adrenals called pheochromocytoma. It produces symptoms similar to those your boy suffers.

Why not check with an internist? There are special tests that will either confirm or disprove your diagnosis (which is only a hunch). If a tumor is present, it can be removed by operation, and all the attacks are likely to disappear — including the sudden rises in blood pressure.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For November 13

Your birthday today: Your coming year is fairly quiet, with a healthy amount of moderate competition and mental stimulus. Your view of life changes, and you may become less dependent on other people. There is much to accomplish; new things to learn, a switch of habits to fit the changing environment. Today's stars are usually favorable and ambitious, rather fortunate in accumulating wealth.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): This Sunday offers more mental activity than physical. Yesterday's upward trend of energy makes this seem duller than it is. Consideration of others' needs adds to your repute.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Join in the Sunday customs of your neighborhood. Get acquainted with new people; review contacts with others. Money gets away, if you give in to temptations.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Don't follow any definite plan, circumstances are somewhat unsettled. Mark time by waiting somewhere you had not planned for. Be prepared to enjoy life wherever you are.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Take part in your community's expression of faith, then enjoy rest at home. Try your favorite hobbies; gather a few old friends for some lively conversation.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Spending will help your public image, rather the contrary by personal improvement. Leave the centre of the stage to others. Home is the place to be this evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You are subject to distraction, not having digested the experiences of the past week; the weekend is a let - down. Let questions go unanswered.

LIBRA (Sept. 22 — Oct. 22): Stay with your regular Sunday routines; give yourself a rest. There probably are so many things going on you can't keep track of them. Plan for a quiet evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Social activity lacks the sparkle you had expected — perhaps you're overdoing it. Be somewhere, and nearly everyone is distracted by personal interests. Find time to meditate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Social doings are unlikely to fulfill your expectations. Don't try to pull the party spirit to make your own. Patience is needed to keep your home peaceful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You can have a splendid Sunday if you will put limits on self - expression, and tactfully avoid tense strangers and certain in-laws. The evening is for serious study.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): All things in moderation applies to this gently balanced Sunday. Keep it balanced, instead of pressing to have your views prevail. Meditation is helpful tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Today it seems you must compromise, although the situation is not your responsibility. Wait for others to come to the same realization. Your turn comes later.

For November 16

Your birthday today: Accumulation is your keyword for the coming year. Your inner nature finds wide latitude for upward evolution while the world thrusts responsibilities on you, chances for earning — redeemed with some struggle and sacrifice. You should achieve much in both material gain and character development. Sentimental, romantic interests are complex with many poignant episodes. Today's natives are adaptable, industrious, nearly always much admired by the opposite sex.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Today is a push to tax your ingenuity: nothing of major importance unless you make it so, but many discrepancies, false starts. Your calm assertiveness can help.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): An erratic mixture of coincidences show you some new expedients. Expect nothing to stay put. Later a sense of worthwhile comes at the complexity of your achievement.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You have energy in not seeing clearly what most productive course to follow. Stay on your regular job, settle routine. There is much to discuss this evening.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Be prepared with another plan if conditions don't meet your original idea. Don't take opposition, competition personally. Some unexpected help is intended.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Tact opens the way; the problems are not new although the distractions are. Get as much done as you can. Evening brings a different mood, the anticipation of personal triumph.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Friends and financial matters are not to be mixed today. Your temptation is toward detailed explanations, none of which seems to be taken in the spirit intended.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): There is a restlessness, a deep, unconscious call within you for constructive change for its own sake. Nothing superficial will keep you from regular work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22—Nov. 21): Many impractical or visionary ideas are available — take a well-tested approach and work out the details with care. Avoid an incidents. Evening is for planning.

SAGITARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Double-check your facts. Even routine transactions have unaccountable errors. All your friends have complex, interesting but unlikely schemes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Today tests the strength of your relationships. The news is full of incomplete stories, and you are not psychic. Consideration for others is more important than ever.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): An unconsciously directed notion of yours complicates matters. Reckoned the energy, discard the caprice, don't let anybody rush you into an unrealistic deal.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Your adaptability is still of prime importance in the run of perplexing incidents. Events show at least two sides; wake and learn rather than strive to control.

Canadian Stock Markets Record Sharp Losses

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets posted sharp losses in most sectors this week despite indications of easing in the domestic monetary situation.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's industrial index, a prime indicator of market movement, was down 1.19 points to 162.42 following three losing sessions during the week.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index dropped 1.04 to 161.42.

Wall Street also showed signs of price erosion. The Dow Jones average of key blue-chip industrial stocks dropped 12.18 points to 759.79. Trading at the New York Stock Exchange was light to moderate throughout the week.

Markets had a one-day show of strength Wednesday as the Toronto exchange posted its best one-day advance since Oct. 5.

Analysts said the advance was due to a reduction in the Bank of Canada's bank rate, or the interest charged on loans to chartered banks.

Canada's central bank reduced its bank rate to 6 per cent from 6¼ per cent. It was the fourth such reduction in five months and was generally interpreted by observers to mean further easing in tight money.

The reduction followed a cut in the United States Federal Reserve Board's discount rate to 5½ per cent from 6 per cent.

Several U.S. banks responded by lowering their prime rate, or the interest charged their best customers.

Canadian chartered banks, which lowered their prime rates to 7½ per cent Nov. 2, gave no indications this week of a further reduction.

Another factor in the rally Wednesday, say analysts, was news of an impending settlement between strike-bound General Motors and the United Auto Workers.

However, markets moved sharply downward Thursday and Friday, owing, say analysts, to fears that the GM strike settlements might have possible inflationary effects and disappointment that the long-awaited prime rate reduction by major U.S. banks was not larger.

Grocery store chain stocks, which moved downward last week after a price war erupted in Ontario supermarkets, showed further signs of erosion this week.

Dominion Stores, which touched off the discount war last week by slashing prices, dropped ¾ to 23¾. The company said it had extended its discount policy to 104 Quebec stores, in addition to the 240 stores in Ontario and Manitoba where the reduced price policy first went into effect.

Shares of Weston dropped ¼ to 52¾. Weston controls Loblaws, which entered the price war late this week. Loblaw issues were unchanged.

On index futures, base metals were down 2.81 to 29.74 and western oils 4.40 to 178.02. Gold advanced 4.79 to 163.44.

Volume was 8.86 million shares, compared with 8.35 million last week.

Losses outnumbered gains 197 to 141 with 122 issues unchanged.

British Shipping Interests Alarmed By Canada's Anti-pollution Measures

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's anti-pollution measures for the Arctic and other coastal waters have alarmed British shipping interests, Lord Kennet, chairman of the British Committee on oil pollution of the seas, said Friday.

However, the shippers should realize that the legislation passed or before Parliament is only permissive. Any real punch would be in regulations to be enacted later by the federal cabinet.

And the shippers "will be consulted on the regulations," he said shortly before returning to Britain after talks here with Transport Minister Don Jamieson and government officials.

Discussions centred on the Arctic Waters Pollution Prevention Act passed at the last session and the amendments to the Canada Shipping Act, now before a Commons committee.

The legislation should be looked at against the background of Canada's failure earlier this year to convince the shipping nations to agree to tougher anti-pollution measures, Lord Kennet said.

Canada "then took a bold decision to jump a couple of hundred miles ahead of the pack, hoping everyone will join them."

He said a lot will depend on Canada's proposed arctic shipping conference and whether the kind of protective steps in the Canadian legislation can be put under an "international umbrella."

It was clear that something is going to be done within four or five years about sea pollution.

"My personal view is that it should be done as quickly and as internationally as possible," Lord Kennet, a former junior minister in the Labor government responsible for environmental affairs, he said Britain NATO sea pollution talks two weeks ago "probably because we are in a slightly schizophrenic state" on the whole issue.

Not only has Britain a lot of sea coast that could be fouled by sea pollution but there are very large shipping interests there.

He said it is natural that Canada should be out in front on controls since she has a long coastline but relatively little shipping of her own.

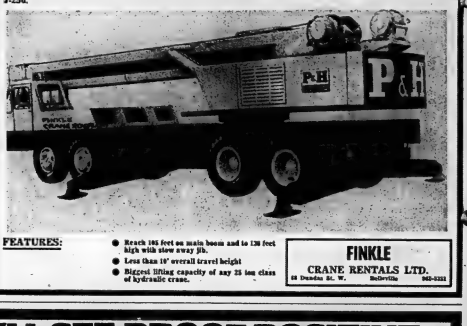
The committee Lord Kennet heads is a non-political body composed of local authorities, hotel and resort owners, wildlife protection agencies and, as observers, the oil and shipping companies.

"A pressure group" he said he will report his findings to the committee "to help them make up their minds which way to push the British government."

Santa Claus Parade Held

TORONTO (CP) — Fairies, gnomes, storybook characters, cartoon heroes and a 40-foot cat were unleashed this morning to dazzle youngsters watching the annual Santa Claus parade.

Cool temperatures were not expected to keep 60,000 spectators from lining the six-mile route of the annual extravaganza.



The spectacle reached millions through the two Canadian television networks. A Columbia Broadcasting crew was on hand to film it for showing Nov. 28 with American parades.

SOLD FOR SCRAP

VICTORIA (CP) — The veteran lighthouse and buoy tender ship Estevan left this summer on the longest—and final—voyage of her long career. The 57-year-old ship, retired last November, was sold to a Japanese scrap yard.

Pakistani Islands' Toll Now 300,000

Disaster Now Ranks In List of Worst

DACCA (CP) — The Associated Press today quoted officials as saying 300,000 persons may have died in the cyclone and tidal waves that struck East Pakistan last Thursday, making it one of history's greatest disasters.

The world's greatest recorded disaster occurred in China's Honan province in 1887, when a flood took 900,000 lives.

Four Pakistani islands 40 miles south of Dacca in the Ganges River Delta were lashed by the brunt of 150-mile-an-hour winds and 20-foot waves from the Bay of Bengal.

Officials said so many were dead or missing that rescue teams were counting survivors, not the dead.

The 1961 census listed 1.4 million persons on the four islands —Hatia, Ramagail, Charjabbar and Bhola—but other sources estimated the population was less than half that when the storm hit. However, there had been a record influx of workers for the rice harvest.

Reuter news agency quoted Radio Pakistan as saying today the official death toll now stands at 41,000 and officials have information that may push it above 100,000, thus making it the deadliest natural disaster of the century.

Fatality estimates grew hourly from scores of reports. A former assemblyman said local officials indicated 65,000 had died in Patuakhapi district to the west of the four islands. A utility official said thousands of farmers were swept into the sea when a tidal wave roared over the 15-foot dam which had reclaimed the land on which they were living.

The area is a cyclone alley, with storms hitting almost every spring and fall and with huge tolls because of the lack of a warning system or of speedy transport for the masses of farmers and fishermen.

In June 1965, 30,000 died in a cyclone there, and historians say 300,000 died in a storm and tidal waves in 1737.

Many islands and coastal districts still were out off by high water.

A rescue official who flew to the delta area reported seeing at least 5,000 bodies in graves, 100 to 150 in each grave.

One ship that may have gone down in the storm was the 5,500-ton Mahajagmitra, an Indian freighter that was en route from Calcutta to Kuwait with 49 men aboard.

As rescue work continued, an American official of the World Bank described today how he and 100 other persons survived the killer wave which smashed across offshore islands and coastal lowlands.

H. P. Dougan, a 57-year-old official of the World Bank, returned to Dacca early today and told reporters of his experience in a bungalow as the tidal wave swept death and ruin all around.

Dougan and his team of World Bank and U.S. aid officials were in a boat near the mouth of the Ganges Thursday, inspecting a flood control project—which he said probably saved their lives.

Dougan said he and his party of 13 moved into a bungalow belonging to the Water and Power Development Authority in an area where flood protection work already had been carried out.

They stayed in the bungalow as the massive tide swept past, he said, and were finally forced to take shelter in an upstairs room when the ground floor became flooded.

Crash Kills Grid Team

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — Federal investigators have found "no evidence of any particular problem" with a jetliner in which all 75 persons aboard, including most of the Marshall University football team, died in a fiery weekend crash.

This was reported Sunday by John Reed, chairman of the national transportation safety board. He said there was no evidence so far of mechanical failure in the chartered Southern Airways twin-jet DC-9 and no initial indication of pilot error.

The DC 9, returning with the Marshall team, coaches and followers from an afternoon game with East Carolina University at Greenville, N.C., cut a swath through treetops before crashing into a hillside short of the Tri-State Airport runway Saturday night.

the city Public offices and

The crash occurred about 7:40 p.m., after the DC-9 roped the tops of trees about 75 feet tall on a ridge some 100 feet higher than the airport runway.

"The airplane was shedding parts from the first impact," Reed said. "Ten feet higher and he would have made it. That's all he needed."

He said about 90 seconds before it crashed the plane was on target for a safe landing. He added that the pilot never reported any trouble in conversation with the Tri-State control tower.

It was three seconds from the time when the plane clipped the treetops until it plowed into the hillside, cartwheeled and exploded into flame, Reed said.

Witnesses said about 15 bodies were scattered outside the wreckage, but most were inside, buried in piles of burning metal.

Bourassa Called Screen for Ottawa

RIMOUSKI, Que. (CP) — Rene Levesque, leader of the separatist Parti Quebecois, said Saturday that Premier Robert Bourassa acted as a screen for Ottawa after the kidnap of Pierre Laporte "and he had no choice in whether or not to negotiate with" the abductores.

Mr. Levesque told a news conference that four days after the kidnap of former Quebec Labor Minister Laporte, I learned from a very reliable source that Bourassa was merely a screen for Ottawa and had no choice whether or not to negotiate" with the Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorist kidnappers.

Red Cross Sends Help

TORONTO (CP) — J. R. M. Wilson, chairman of the Canadian Red Cross executive committee said Sunday the organization is sending $10,000 to aid victims of a devastating cyclone and tidal waves which hit coastal districts and offshore islands of East Pakistan Thursday.

The grant was in response to an appeal by the League of Red Cross Societies in Geneva, Mr. Wilson said in a statement.

He said persons wishing to donate should send cheques and money orders to the Canadian Red Cross Society, 95 Wellesley St. East, Toronto 5. They should be marked "Pakistan Relief."

First Snowfall of the Winter

The promise of winter frolics to come brought out tykes Sunday to romp in the wet snow that blanketed the district. Three of them on Eleanor Gardens found enough material for their first snowman of the season by scrounging on neighboring lawn. Slightly warmer weather predicted for tomorrow will temporarily delay winter's full onslaught on the Quinte district.

Escape Proof FLQ Men No Amateurs -- Bourassa

MONTREAL (CP) — Police today were checking the authenticity of a note purporting to be from the Fron de Liberaion du Quebec which said that three men wanted for conspiracy in the kidnapping of Pierre Laporte escaped arrest in a Nov. 7 raid that netted suspect Bernard Lortie.

A provincial police spokesman quoted a statement in the note that two police firearms "left behind through excessive negligence" by guards had been taken by the three suspects fleeing the apartment where Lortie was picked up.

"We spoke to the investigators and there was no firearm lost or stolen in the raid on the apartment," he said.

Montreal Police Director Marcel St. Aubin said none of his men lost any weapons in the operation at the west end apartment building.

Quebec Provincial Police and the combined anti - terrorist squad of RCMP, provincial and municipal police were involved in the raid.

In an interview on a French-language television station Sunday night, Premier Robert Bourassa said the raid which resulted in the capture of Lortie provided further proof of how well-organized the FLQ is.

"We can see that we are not dealing with amateurs," he said. "The secret hiding-place in the apartment on Queen Mary Road had obviously been prepar-d long in advance."

A police spokesman said today that fingerprints of the three found around the hiding place do not prove the men were there when the raid took place.

"They might have been there when we raided the apartment and they might have been there before."

Bertrand Supports Bourassa

MONTREOL (CP) — Jape Jacques Bertrand, former Quebec premier and leader of the Union Nationale, said Sunday he would have applied the same strategy as Premier Robert Bourassa in the kidnap crisis begun last month and that explanations provided by the premier on the matter appeared sufficient.

Mr. Bertrand said on the French-language television station CFTM that the government "did what it had to do in the circumstances."

The former premier added that Mr. Bourassa made him aware of certain facts in the kidnappings of former Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, subsequently murdered by his captors, and British diplomat James Cross, "and these seemed to me that the government's stand was correct."

U.S. Embarrassed

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Recognition of Communist China by Canada embarrassed the United States, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations said Sunday.

Glenn A. Olds told a news conference admission of China to the UN would mean expulsion of Taiwan.

He said President Nixon would support a nation which attempted to have UN membership rules changed. However, the U.S. would "not presume to tell Canada" what its foreign policy should be.

El Salvador Reports Fishing Boats Strafed

SAN SALVADOR (Reuter) — El Salvador, Central America's smallest republic, has accused Guatemalan air force planes of attacking its fishing fleet off the Pacific Coast.

The Guatemalan government denied the charge, claiming that the weekend incident was prompted by a planned invasion of Guatemala.

Salvadorean sources said 13 fishing boats were strafed Saturday, killing one fisherman and wounding 11 others.

Six trawlers caught fire and the others were severely damaged when they were attacked some [illegible] miles off the Salvadorean coast near the Guatemala border, the sources said.

But the Guatemalan version of the incident said more than 15 flagless vessels inside Guatemalan waters were strafed when they refused to identify themselves.

An army communique said some of the ships were within a mile of the Guatemalan coast "with the evident purpose of disembarking." It gave no details.

New Ruler of Syria Encounters Protests

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria's new ruler, Gen. Hafez Assad, tightened the army's grip on his country's politics today and tried to form 'a new government as some of his supporters clashed with supporters of the ousted regime.

Weekend demonstrations were reported in Damascus, the Syrian capital, after Assad, the defence minister, overthrew President Nouredin Atassi and a government dominated by Gen. Salah Jadid Friday. All are members of the Baath Socialist party, but Assad is considered more of a moderate.

University students clashed in the streets of Damascus. An unconfirmed report said one man was killed and 33 were injured when Assad's security guards charged into the crowds, hitting with batons.

The newspaper Al Moharrer said the governor of Suweida, in southern Syria, resigned to protest the coup, and demonstrators in the town supported the ousted government.

Mixed Opinions About Parade

These two youngsters, left and right, seem to have mixed opinions on the 66th annual Santa Claus parade as it passes through the streets of Toronto Saturday. A crowd estimated at 75,000 lined the six-mile route to see such folk heroes as Santa Claus and Mother Goose. (CP Photo)

Variety Show Delights 500

Belleville's Santa Claus parade got a musical boost Saturday night when 500 persons showed up at Belleville Collegiate for the variety night sponsored by the Quinte Exhibition parade committee.

And variety night it was as the two hour and 40 minute show switched from spirituals to western music, broadway shows to comedy.

Talent show winners at the Ted Mack auditions during Belleville Week a year ago opened and closed the show with Scottish balladeer Gordon Tocher starting the toe tapping and hand clapping with a half a dozen numbers. The Post family closed out the show with a number of songs from their record album either on the market or soon to be released.

A Belleville favorite for the past 10 years, the singing duo of Hanelaine and Bob Reid — with S. Alec Gordon on the organ — again captivated an audience with medleys from Broadway shows being top crowd pleasers.

Two television and night club acts added in the crowd's enjoyment as baritone Frank Palmer drew repeated applause with his powerful voice and entertainer Benny Silverton used comic sketches to illustrate his versatility with the violin.

Proceeds from the show, not yet tabulated in full, will be turned over to the Santa Claus parade committee.

Hunter Appears

SHARBOT LAKE (Staff) — A Kingston soldier, missing on a deer hunt north of here, walked out of the bush Saturday, shortly after provincial police began searching for him.

Cpl. Ken York, 45, was last seen Friday afternoon by a companion while both men were hunting near Ompah.

Police said he showed no ill effects despite a night spent in the bush during which temperatures edged below freezing.

Bicycle Stolen

Belleville city police are investigating a weekend break in that resulted in the theft of a bicycle valued at $50.

Chief Douglas Deacle said this morning that the breakin and theft occurred sometime between midnight Saturday and eight a.m. Sunday at the residence of Ray Irvine of 16 Harriett Street.

The bicycle was in a shed at the back of the residence.

Harry Fast to Manage Railway in Zambia

Harry J. Fast, formerly manager of Canadian National Railways Rideau Area, Belleville, has been appointed general manager, Zambia Railways, it was announced today.

The appointment of Mr. Fast to be the senior executive officer of the 750 - mile African rail system coincided with the official signing in Zambia of an agreement under which Canadian National, through its International Consulting Division, will send a 25-man team of senior personnel to that country to administer the management, operation and reorganization of Zambia Railways for a minimum period of five years.

Mr. Fast joined CN in 1938 and has held a number of senior positions, mainly in the company's engineering department.

In his new position, he will report directly to the Board of Directors of Zambia Railways.

Members of the CN management team, who have been selected from all segments of the railway's operations across Canada, will leave for Zambia almost immediately.

The group includes specialists in data processing, office management, civil engineering, freight sales and marketing, personnel and labor relations, purchases and stores, transportation, equipment and maintenance of way.

Taking part in negotiations leading up to the management agreement, in addition to CN and Zambia Railways officials were representatives of the Zambian Government, which owns the national railway, and the Canadian International Development Agency, which is assisting in the financing of the project through a loan, agreement with the Zambian Government.

Manager of the Rideau area at Belleville for five years, Mr. Fast left for Zambia last spring and after a four month on the spot study of the operation returned to the city to wind up personal affairs.

In mid-September Mr. Fast and his wife Edythe were tendered a farewell banquet before returning to Africa.

Employment News

Resort Receives Government Loan

TRENTON (Staff) — A familiar Quinte area resort is going to have considerable facelifting in the coming months.

Northumberland MPP Russell Rowe says a provincial government development loan has been awarded to the owners of Twelve O'Clock Lodge near Carrying Place.

The $65,000 term loan authorized by the Ontario Development Corporation is part of a $1 million tourist loan program, he says.

Twelve O'Clock Point Lodge is the first district tourist facility to enter into an expansion and modernization scheme under the terms of the new Ontario loan plan.

Not only will the local resort be remodelled, but guest rooms will be winterized in order to extend the tourist season.

During the past two weeks there has been a very slow employment market for either men or women seeking work. This trend is obtained from analysis of the employment vacancies listed by local employers with the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre. Construction and its related businesses still continue to dominate the local labor demand. Since everyone cannot work in the construction field it is disappointing that other areas of employment offer such a limited requirement of additional workers.

It is understood of course that tehre is a considerable shopping around being done by unemployed workers themselves.

In view of this situation, employers are reminded that an excellent supply of workers possessing a wide range of experience and skills are now registered at the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre If you have a labor requirement at your plant or business you are invited to contact your nearest Canada Manpower Centre and list this requirement with the manpower counsellor responsible for the respective occupation The Belleville Canada Manpower Centre is located at 324 Church St., Belleville with the telephone number 962-9621.

At the present time the unfilled vacancies include a fourth class stationary engineer and experienced auto body repairman for out of town, a qualified diesel engine mechanic, experienced key punch operators and verifiers, experienced egg grader and hotel teller together with a qualified hotel cook.

Pollution Meeting At Legion Tonight

Organizers of Belleville's first citizens' anti - pollution committee are hoping for a "good cross-section" of civic response to their founding meeting tonight.

The meeting has been called for 8 p.m. at the Canadian Legion Hall.

The campaign for pollution control is an individual's responsibility, organizing chairman Robert Andrus said today.

Individual acceptance of necessary action is needed to help create an environment which can be left future generations without "a feeling of shame and guilt," he said.

Mr. Andrus is president of the Quinte District Labor Council which is underwriting expenses for the meeting.

The project is the result of the recent anti-pollution seminar jointly organized by the AFL-CLC and Loyalist College.

The latter indicates that the Quinte situation is under review but that other Ontario communities do pay the costs of transporting prisoners without provincial aid.

Mayor Duncan McDonald raised the matter of the high cost of the policing service six weeks ago and mayors of Picton, Belleville and Kingston voiced similar concern.

Prisoner Shuttle Help Doubtful

TRENTON (Staff) — It is doubtful whether the town of Trenton and other local municipalities will get assistance from senior governments toward the cost of shuttling prisoners to the new Napanee regional jail.

A communication from the minister of justice on the matter will be dealt with when council meets tonight.

Picton Play Well Received

PICTON (Staff) — The Quinte Island Theatre production of Neil Simon's Barefoot in the Park starring Liz Hirst and Jerry Vincent earned enthusiasm from local theatre buffs last weekend.

About 800 persons attended the three performances of the play which opened in Prince Edward Collegiate Institute last Thursday.

Barefoot represents the QIT's first adult presentation consisting of "over 21" cast, as formerly the group had exclusively used secondary school level students.

Newly - formed children's teenage actors and actresses.

The supporting cast for Barefoot included Liz Harris, Larry Taylor and Jack Evans.

The production of Barefoot will be followed next spring by an adult play Cactus Flower.

Pope Wants Arms Cost To Aid Poor

ROME (AP) — Pope Paul appealed today for an end to the arms race so that vast sums can be used to feed, clothe and educate the world's poor.

Quoting his 1967 encyclical Populorum Progressio, the Roman Catholic pontiff told a conference of the UN Food and Agriculture Organization that when so many people are hungry, destitute and "steeped in ignorance . . . all expenditures prompted by motives of national or personal ostentation, every debilitating armaments race, becomes an intolerable scandal."

"Exaggerated nationalism, racism engendering hate, the lust for unlimited power, the unbridled thirst for domination: who will convince men to emerge from such aberrations?

"Who will be the first to break the circle of the armaments race, ever more ruinous and vain? . . . Will man, who has learned how to harness the atom and conquer space, finally succeed in conquering his selfishness?"

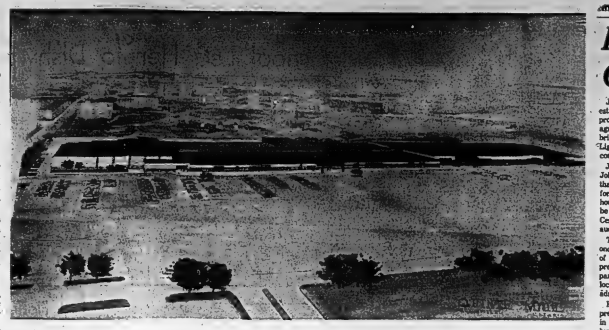
The Pope once more ruled out present artificial methods of birth control as a means of solving population problems. But he also repeated his call in his last birth encyclical, Humanae Vitae, for scientists to develop new birth control methods his church could approve.

In a new papal theme, he pleaded for steps to curb pollution of "the air we breathe, the water we drink" and for the prevention of "a veritable ecological catastrophe."

After hailing technology that improved soil fertility and reclaimed marshes and developed higher yield grains, he warned that "the carrying out of these technical possibilities at an accelerated pace" has accomplished without dangerous repercussions on the balance of our natural surroundings."

Sea Serpent Proves to be Basking Shark

SCITUATE, Mass. (AP) — The remains of a giant sea creature which washed ashore near here and for a time defied classification were identified tentatively today by an oceanographic expert as those of a basking shark.



Thousands of spectators lined rocky Mann Hill beach Sunday after the creature rolled to the shore on a high tide and touched off reports that the remains of a "sea serpent" had been found.

Andrew Konnerth, a research associate at Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute, said after an inspection today that the creature was a basking shark, largest of the Atlantic sharks.

They attain a length of 40 feet.

Urge Cleanup

VERNON, B.C. (CP)—Stop using our fresh-water lakes as toilet bowls, the British Columbia Medical Association has warned. A report from the association's environmental health committee said weeds and minute algae are blooming in troublesome numbers as a result of feeding on sewage in the Okan agan lakes. Serious public health and recreational problems will result if pollution is not stopped, the association said.

Big Bid for the Consumer Dollar

Artist's sketch outlines dimensions of Quinte Mall — regional shopping centre to northend Belleville, planned as magnate for consumer dollars in the Quinte district. Ground already has been cleared on the site and city hall approval of on-site building plans now is awaited before permit is issued to authorize actual construction of project. Above conception shows facade of building looking west.

We All Pollute, Historical Group Told

"To live is to pollute" was the theme of the guest speaker at the recent annual meeting of the Quinte Historical Sites and Parkways Association, held at the Royal Military College, Kingston.

David Adlam, Resources Manager of the Cataraqui Conservation Authority, told the members that men take a great variety of raw materials, process them, consume the product, and then discard the wastes.

Nature tends to purify these waste products through recycling; however, the geographical concentration of people and the rapidly increasing population make it more difficult for nature to deal with these waste products. Urbanization overloads nature's own waste nature must be given a helping hand.

Mr. Adlam commented that not all pollution is equally serious. For example, car graveyards, plastic containers, and slag heaps may be unsightly, but they are not the great threats to Man's health that other types of waste may be.

Chairman for the meeting which brought together members of the Association from Kingston, Collins Bay, Bath, Napanee, Melrose, and Belleville was Judge Gerald F. Smith of Napanee.

A. R. M. Lower, former chairman and noted Canadian historian, reported on the association's recent executive meetings to consider the plans for the hydro plant and the cement works on Highway 33 west of Bath. The association is keeping a watchful eye on these projects and doing what it can to encourage the development of that highway (especially between Kingston and Adolphustown) as a scenic parkway.

Elected as chairman of the association for the next two years was Professor Ross Beharriell of the Royal Military College while Gerald E. Boyce of Belleville was named as vice-chairman. Representing Hastings county on the board of directors is James Connell, head of the history department at Quinte Secondary School.

ANAF Weekly News Notes

It was a dull, misty and showery days as the Remembrance Day parade formed up on the armories floor. The temperature, hovering around 55, was quite mild for November. Whether it was a realization that the Armed Forces still have a useful purpose as proved just lately or the mildness of the weather but much bigger crowds attended the cenotaph service and lined the sidewalks than have been seen for quite a few years. About 250 veterans either marched or were transported and with the armed forces and cadet corps made a fine showing.

With the ladies being invited to attend the banquet and the dance afterwards for the first time, approximately 400 were on hand for the evening where they enjoyed a very tasty dinner and the speech by the guest speaker, Archdeacon A. S. McConnell. The Veterans of Belleville Committee is to be strongly commended for the fine organization and hard work that made the day's events most successful.

The fur lining has been cleaned and the Tamous trophy has been polished to a high degree for the forthcoming clash between the Legion Lions and the ANAF Dukes. Both teams have gone into secret and intensive training with the Lions vowing to have their revenge for last year's defeat.

Watch for the date and be sure to attend. It should be a lot of fun and at the same time provide much needed revenue for the hockey playing youngsters. Players can park their wheelchairs and crutches at the entrance.

A good crowd was on hand again both for the afternoon darts and the evening matchees of the Mr. and Mrs. darts last Saturday. Results of the competitions are as follows. No. 1 Doubles winners, Jack Fitzgerald and Lyle Clark; runners-up, Johnny Browning and Hugh Northey. Doubles winners, Rick Hay and Doc Burtt; runners-up, Dick Burns and Jim Asselstine. No. 3 Doubles winners, Dick Burns and Jack Fitzgerald; runners-up, Rick Hay and Len Temporale. Results of Mr. and Mrs. Darts winners, Tom and Sis Coolens; runners-up, Russ and Betty Blaind. Lad and lass high three darts, Gene Browning, 120. Men's High Darts, three darts, two winners, Bob Totten and George Benn, 140.

Refreshments were served at 11 p.m. and the nice prizes were awarded at the end of the competition. Your guest's are welcome to play and enjoy the fun. Next Mr. and Mrs. Darts Sat. Nov. 28 with men's doubles every Saturday afternoon.

Still a short sick list with Cdes. Doug Locke in Room 623 and Wally Turner in Room 512 of the Belleville General Hospital.

$17,000 for Cow

Mountain Lake Farm of Picton has paid a top price of $17,000 for a four-year-old full French Charolais cow sold at the Charolais sales of stars at the Royal Winter Fair.

The cow was consigned by Kingfield H. B. Charlosis Farm of King, Ontario and purchased by the Picton area farm owner on Saturday.

A bred heifer sold by Pinnacle Charolais Farm of Abercorn, Que., brought the second highest price of the auction — $11,000. Five bulls sold for an average of $2,750 and 17 cows and heifers at an average of $3,709.

Last year's top Charlosis, an open heifer, also sold for $17,000.

Rock Concert On Schedule

Jeremy, Belleville's newest and most exclusive rock promotion company, is at it again this week when it brings Canada's outstanding Lighthouse to town for two concerts.

Jeremy's organizer, Gordon Johnston, said this morning that tickets were selling well for the concert with Lighthouse and Bill the Lizard to be held Saturday night in the Centennial Secondary School auditorium.

The concert will be the second effort in a long series of rock music events to be presented by Jeremy, a company designed to improve local rock music and to keep admission prices down.

Formed with this aim, it presented a four - band dance in October that saw several hundred rock music fans in attendance. Besides the Lighthouse concert, it has a series of "dollar dances and concerts" slated to begin in December, promising one a month.

The first dollar dance will be held Dec. 11 at Centennial Secondary School featuring Meadow and Malnabla. The second, Dec. 28, will feature George Oliver and the Natural Gas, and Powerhouse.

Everything is moving along on schedule for the Lighthouse concert which could be the most spectacular rock event in the city's history.

"People should get their tickets right away," Mr. Johnston told The Intelligencer. "They shouldn't wait until the last minute because we are sold out soon."

Tickets are priced at $2.50 in advance and at $3 at the door.

Everything's right on schedule as far as arrangements are concerned. There were rumors going around that it had been cancelled but they weren't true."

Tickets are on sale at Sam the Record Man's store on Bridge Street.

Both Lighthouse and Bill the Lizard will be featured in two shows at its auditorium, running until 10 p.m., the other starting almost immediately to run another two hours.

Greg Stewart, Radio Station CKWS disc jockey will act as master of ceremonies for the event.

It will be the first occasion in which Lighthouse has performed in Belleville. Featuring 13 top Canadian musicians the group has recorded three record albums for RCA Victor and has played all over the United States, Canada and Europe, at several large pop festivals and in concert at Carnegie Hall and Massey Hall.

The group features a blend of standard rock instruments with the instrumentation of a horn and string section.

Bill the Lizard, since basing i's operations locally, has not appeared in Belleville since early in May when it performed a farewell concert prior to performing a series of concerts and dances in other Ontario centres and commencing its recording career.

One-Car Crash Injures Two

MADOC (Staff) — A Toronto man and his father were injured Sunday when their car crashed off Highway 62 on the Moira Lake hill, south of here.

James Thomas Hill, 30, suffered rib and neck injuries and his father, Thomas Hill, 54, reserved chest injuries and were under treatment today at Belleville General Hospital.

Damage to the 1970 automobile, driven by the younger Hill, was estimated at $3,000.

Beautiful People!

These days of communication, image, projection and television advertising of beauty aids should be known as the well-groomed age. That it is not necessarily so is one of the paradoxes of our time. Never before has there been so much hirsuteness in the male of the species, so much emphasis on the casual look in the female.

For all that, society at large does pay a great deal of attention to looking its best and we see this premise is being taken an interesting step further — in the sphere of athletics of all things. In order to the need for a good appearance on color television, the organizers of the Olympic Games in Munich in 1972 will have special cosmetics cabins in the main stadium, near the victory rostrum. Everything a bedraggled girl or exhausted male competitor needs to freshen up will be available. Even officials who present the medals will have access to the facilities.

Thus, television viewing of the Olympics of 1972 is an interesting prospect, particularly for those with color sets. Will the athletes make themselves up, or will there be makeup artists as in the movies who will size up competitors according to their features, coloring etc. What of the competitors who are so exhausted that they need a few minutes on th ground to recover . . . will they be dragged off, protesting, to the beauty shop? What about female entrants who do not ordinarily use makeup?

The Olympics traditionally produce some disputes and tension. This new caper may add another dimension to such a prospect!

Begin Early

We are forever hearing advice to the effect that education should begin at the earliest stages in a child's life, and we agree with such a precept. How often though is it translated into reality? How much do parents point out and explain of the world around them to small infants? One can almost tell from a child's expression to what extent its mind is being stimulated by parents.

And what about the primary school years and high school too? A fine example, we believe, has been afforded by St. John's Ravenscourt school in Winnipeg, Manitoba. There Grade 11 students have been taking lessons on the great religions from the Right Rev. Barry Valentine, Bishop of the Anglican archdiocese of Rupert's Land.

And that is not all, for Bishop Valentine played soccer for Cambridge University in 1949 and was offered a professional soccer scholarship in England. What could be more appropriate then that the bishop should get out during recess for a bit of soccer with the Grade 11 boys. He has been doing just that, as a recent picture in The Winnipeg Free Press illustrated.

This is the kind of combination of talents in a man which can be so beneficial to the rising generation, not to mention those of us of more mature years.

Hazards to Children

It comes as a shock to learn from the Canadian Appliance Manufacturers' Association that abandoned or disused refrigerators, freezers and ice boxes continue to take a toll of children's lives.

For a number of years, all Canadian-built refrigerators and freezers have been equipped with a safety door that can be 'pressure released' from the inside. In addition, most of the 625,000 units sold this year bear this warning: "Protect Your Children. When discarding or storing, remove doors of refrigerator." The Doors.

If removing the door is not feasible, householders are urged to block the door open permanently or chain it shut. Parents are also urged to teach their children the dangers of entrapment in any airtight appliance. Most victims range in age from three to six years. Citizens moreover are asked to report to their municipal authorities the location of any abandoned refrigerator with its door in place.

Companies Want Experience—But Will Not Train

Thirteen Years of School Led Her to Dishwashing

Letter to
The Hamilton Spectator

This is the time of year when high school grads return to their "Alma Mater" for the glory of receiving their diploma. With Grade 13 behind them and the whole future lying ahead, things should be relatively easy, now that they have their valuable certificate. What a joke!

I was graduated from David and Mary Thomson Collegiate with a 65 per cent average. Great if you want to continue your schooling because that is about the only use you can get from it.

Unlike most grads, I decided that it would be to my advantage to work for a year and then resume my education. I found that I was mistaken about many things and as it turned out, my education had only begun once I started looking for work.

I've applied to about 100 companies in Hamilton. Virtually every business asks who sent me or who do I know that works for the company. Unfortunately, I don't know anyone from Hamilton so I don't have the "initial pull" that seems to be required for jobs here. The next question is, "how much experience do I have?" Since I've been in school for the last 13 years, I've not had any opportunity to acquire a knowledge of anything but learning. There doesn't seem to be any job to which this type of experience is beneficial. (Although companies demand experience, there is no one willing to train you.)

I find it extremely difficult to comprehend how a person with Grade 10 or 11 education should have an advantage over me by the fact that they dropped out of school and now have job experience. Fortunately, I've managed to find a job as a dishwasher. It seems that Grade 13 will give an upper hand here. Is that all Grade 13 education is worth?

Throughout school, one is led to believe that the five - year arts and science program is the most adaptable if you are uncertain as to your future plans. With all the brainwashing it was doing, the Guidance Department seems to have been inadequately prepared to meet the possibility of someone in the five - year stream not going to university. All booklets and pamphlets in that office deal with post - secondary education of one type or another. Any material on jobs just outlines what courses to take at which universities in order to get into your chosen profession. There is no information on just getting a job.

Hopefully, the system is changing with less emphasis being placed solely on continued education. In the meantime, what are people such as myself supposed to do? Even with typing and bookkeeping from high school, I apparently don't have sufficient background for office work. I don't want to stand in the unemployment line to pick up a cheque or go on welfare — I really want to earn my own way. How can I do this if no one will give me a chance to prove myself?

Parents, take steps to insure that these sort of things don't happen to your child after you've spent all that money to get him a good education.

Louise Cottisen,
Dundas.

Fire Fighters Need Toys For Christmas Distribution To Underprivileged Children

The Intelligencer.
Editor,

The letter from "Frustrated Givers" published in your paper Wednesday indicates that all organizations are specifying cash donations.

This is true in the case of food hampers, but as they state in their letter: "Our point is that it is so easy for all of us just to write a cheque and be done with it. No extra shopping, no searching for the right toy on our lunch hour."

I assure the "Frustrated Givers" that although the Christmas Exchange, which we work with are doing this, this year, it is not the case as far as the Belleville Fire Fighters are concerned with toys.

We have raised considerable money through hockey games and motorcycle races this year but I again assure you it is not nearly enough to buy all the toys necessary to take care of all the under - privileged children.

The Belleville Fire Fighters' Association at this point, needs all the new and used toys (if they are in good repair) that we can get.

To my knowledge, "Frustrated Givers" did not approach our organization as far as toys are concerned, for this is all that we handle.

If they wish to donate toys to the Belleville Fire Fighters Association for distribution or even if they wish to look after a family by themselves we would be more than happy to hear from them.

I would again repeat we need all the toys that we can obtain and I hope to hear from the readers of this letter if we can be of service.

Toys can be left at either Fire Station: Dundas Street East or Moira Street West.

PAUL STEPHENSON,
Co-chairman, Belleville Fire Fighters Association Local 497,
Underprivileged Children Fund.

Humane Trapping Sought

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

The Canadian Association for Humane Trapping is an organization which is working in conjunction with McMaster University and private investors to perfect a trap which will kill the animal instantly and so eliminate its death by torture, exposure or predators.

Many trappers are concerned over the existing traps and are co-operating in trying out new ones. This is expensive for them and they should be subsidized by the government while doing so.

Research also, is expensive and the Association would appreciate new sponsors. The fee is $2 and the address is:

LOOKING BACKWARD

20 YEARS AGO

November 16, 1950

The Community Concert season starts locally next Monday night with the appearance of Oscar Natzke, basso. A New Zealander by birth, Mr. Natzke served six years with the Canadian Navy during the war, and the artists committee of the series considers itself fortunate to have secured him for the opening concert.

Members and guests gathered at the Prince Charles School Auditorium to the strains of beautiful recordings for the November meeting of the Presto Music Club. Hostesses for this delightful occasion were Mrs. E. M. Hubbs, Mrs. A. C. Miller, Mrs. Charles Earle and Norma Arkles.

30 YEARS AGO

November 16, 1940

In the absence of a principal speaker at the Kiwanis Club, the progress and the achievement of organization during the past year was reviewed for the benefit of the younger members. Ross Silver compiled the report of the delegates to the District Convention at Toronto. Jack McIntosh, chairman of membership, said there had been 14 new members join this term, and that a larger number could be secured if room was available.

40 YEARS AGO

November 16, 1930

The YMCA Conference for Eastern Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes will be held at Montreal Nov. 28-30. Belleville YMCA will be represented by B. F. Jenkins, representing the board of directors.

By early next week it is hoped all pouring of concrete at Belleville's magnificent new filtration plant will have been completed.

50 YEARS AGO

November 16, 1920

Belleville was visited by a disastrous fire which broke out shortly after 1 p.m. in the Palace Theatre on Front St. The fire spread rapidly and shortly after it was discovered, flames burst from the main entrance of the theatre and it was evident that the building was doomed as the flames were spreading to the upper floors. The fire department, under the direction of Chief Brown, arrived promptly and did heroic work but the building was beyond saving.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Herbert Hoover Jr., acting United States secretary of state, told the United Nations General Assembly 14 years ago today—in 1956—that the UN would be obliged to take action if so-called volunteers were sent to the troubled Middle East. He reminded the assembly of President Dwight D. Eisenhower's statement that the U.S. would fully support such action.

War Measures Act Would Opposition Have Done Otherwise If It Had Been in Hot Seat?

Granby La Voix de l'Est:

The Conservative and New Democratic opposition in the Commons is still insisting on getting the reasons for the Canadian government's decision to resort to the War Measures Act to re-establish order in Quebec. . . .

We do not know any government in the world that would have acted otherwise in the circumstances. There are explanations that it cannot give, and will not be able to give, until the day when everything is back to normal.

If Mr. Stanfield and Mr. Douglas had the responsibilities of government, they would act just as Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Turner have done. Mr. Stanfield and Mr. Douglas might want to start a witch hunt, but the people seem to be satisfied with the attitude of their leaders. What they want is order, and safety. . . .

The government is trying to give police forces the means to combat terrorist action which has been increasing rapidly in our province for several years.

It is determined to end it, because otherwise Quebec will never climb out of the economic morass and solve the problems of unemployment and poverty.

Political leaders should know when to keep quiet. . . . This is not the time for beating around the bush, for criticisms, denunciations or controversies.

Dropouts Have Another Try at Twin Cities College

By Sue Hudspeth in the Kitchener - Waterloo Record

"The secret of education lies in respecting the pupil." — Emerson

Ash Jeanne, an attractive 17-year-old student, about her second stab at education and she's likely to describe night and day differences from her first try.

As a Grade 9 dropout, she found the regimentation of the public school system which was too rigid to bend to an individual's needs. In her next breath she'll tell about her new learning experience.

Jeanne is one of 38 teen-age students enrolled in the young adult program offered at the campus. Classes officially began this fall.

The program is an attempt to cope with the increasing number of students leaving high school for a variety of reasons. It grew from a pilot project for a dozen students held for three months this summer.

The course proceeds from the premise that each student matters as an individual and should be involved in the decision-making process.

The conventional classroom is replaced by a "resource centre" where students may work on things as an artist's attic studio, the Fat Angel drop - in centre and professors' homes provide the backdrop.

Examinations, report cards and attendance records have been eliminated.

Students can change courses as often as once a month and the introduction or elimination of courses from the over-all program is decided by students at monthly plenary sessions by majority vote.

Tuition is $15 a month. There is no minimum course load and some of the topics have wide appeal: business, poetry, sociology of cities, studies in revolution and comparative government.

Faculty adviser and one of the originators of the program is Dr. Gerald Gerstle [illegible] on leave from Wilfrid Laurier University.

Now a PhD candidate, Mr. Gerstle firmly believes in the need to cater to individuals and says the entire program is geared to this.

Aiding him in teaching the program are Conestoga lecturers as well as a spectrum of people from the community ranging from professors to housewives.

Students and lecturers at both universities are offering their time to the program. Several regular lectures at the college and universities have been opened to the students on a drop-in basis.

Other special features include out-of-town trips to places like the Toronto Science Centre, [illegible] of the program is to [illegible] the young adult program [illegible] ranging tours of court facilities.

A small number of the students enrolled in the program have been referred by judicial personnel. It is hoped, said Mr. Gerstle, that in future admissents will be enrolled in the young adult program in preference to a corrective institution.

But not all of the program is undisciplined freedom. At a recent plenary session, the student body was deciding what to do about mavericks who insisted on interrupting classes with bad behavior.

Students are also discovering the need for discipline in establishing and keeping a timetable with classes scattered at various centres throughout the Twin Cities.

Another aspect of the program is [illegible] to the young adult program are finding tuition and apartment payments prohibitive, Mr. Gerstle said.

Some financial assistance is being given through the school and various social agencies, but individuals or groups wishing to sponsor an individual student are encouraged to contact the college's Waterloo campus.

STEPHEN SIDNEY ESFORD, 127 Wright Ave., Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Esford of Kingston received his Bachelor of Arts degree at convocation ceremonies held in Waterloo Lutheran University on Sun. Nov. 8. Mr. Esford is now teaching at Sir Mackenzie Bowell School, Belleville.

Toronto Livestock

TORONTO (CP) — Quality considered prices were under pressure for a light supply of slaughter steers and heifers at the Ontario public stockyards today.

Ontario.
Is there any place you'd rather be?

Ontarians are the kind of people who would not be here if there was any place better. We are people who came from a hundred lands and stayed to build. People with backbone and brawn and a hunger to succeed. Men and women who've created a standard of living in decades that other lands worked centuries to build. If we have a flaw it's our chronic modesty. Ontarians may be proud to be Ontarians and Canadians . . . they just seldom tell anyone. From an economic point of view that's wrong. The more people we have boosting Ontario and Canada the better it is. And we've got a lot to boost with. In the fight against pollution for example, Ontario has become a world leader. Everyone talks about pollution, we do something. More than a billion dollars has been invested to date to build water supply and sewage systems in dozens of communities throughout the province. We've got laws to prosecute industries that pollute the air and water; loans and grants to help industries that want to do something to stop it. We need a vigorous economy of course, to support these important programs. And, that's where you come in. Though our productivity has doubled in ten years and our incomes in twelve, Ontarians don't sit on their successes. There's a demanding decade ahead full of challenges and opportunities to make the quality of our lives better yet. To meet these challenges we've got to believe in ourselves. Which, when you think about it, isn't such a bad idea.

Everytime you boost Ontario . . . Ontario and Canada get a little stronger.
Government of Ontario (W) John Robarts, Prime Minister.

Former Paris Model Now Designer Prefers Quiet Life in Laurentians

MONTREAL (CP) — Cathy Lullier, Paris-born model-turned-designer, is right in the midst of the Montreal fashion scene, but much prefers her one-room cottage near Mont Tremblant in the Laurentians, where she can ski during weekends.

Cathy and her photographer husband, Mark Lullier, met at fashionable Deauville, France, when Cathy was a child. Her family lived there for five years and the Lulliers were also making it their headquarters.

Years later Cathy and Mark met again in Paris. Then Mark came over to Montreal as a photographer. Once established, he returned to Paris and married Cathy who, in the meantime, had been doing fashion modelling. She'd also had a fling at helping in the salon of the famous designer Jacques Heim, a friend of her parents. Today the Lullliers are confirmed Montrealers of 13 years standing.

Cathy loves clothes and has designed her own for years. She also loves to entertain and often has a dinner party of eight to 10 friends." If you have more than 10, you cannot do a good cooking job," she said. "I love candles on the dinner table and indeed I have candles everywhere. Her favorite dinner piece de resistance is small birds burned with cognac and cooked in wine, with mushrooms and chestnuts.

Her apartment on fashionable Sherbrooke Street West is furnished mostly with antiques. She's especially fond of the French Empire and Directoire periods. Owner of the whole place, she said, is her cocker spaniel, Push.

Some five years ago, Cathy started a boutique of her own designs. Then three years ago Dolman Couture, a traditional manufacturer, asked her to design a Cathy line for them. She does 15 to 20 garments for each of the four yearly collections—spring, summer, fall and cruise.

She still carries on her boutique, in the apartment below her own, for her private clientele, and has added some of her Delman ready-to-wear line for off-the-rack buyers.

Last spring she designed the stage costumes for Michel Tisseyre, a well-known TV personality who was appearing in a play presented by the Montreal company, Le Rideau Vert. Cathy hopes she will have more opportunities to do stage clothes.

The skirt length controversary is summed up by Cathy as depending on your own moods. However she does feel that just below the knees is old-fashioned. And a hat is essential for any longuette look.

Whispers of Liberation Movement in Pakistan

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Faint whispers of the women's liberation movement are being heard in this Moslem land where city women still wear purdah veils and rural wives do the hard work on the farms.

"We will demand equal work for equal pay," is the promise of Begum Raana Liaquat Ali Khan, widow of a prime minister and leader in the All Pakistan Women's Assn. She believes reactment against her efforts to raise the status of women played a part in the 1851 assassination of her husband.

Mrs. Saadi Zaidi, wife of a journalist and the mother of two, has been one of the few women running in a December election to choose a National Assembly. "Women can improve the morals of the community," she says. "Asia already has two women as heads of government, in India and Ceylon."

In 1964 the major presidential candidate opposing Field Marshal Ayub Khan was Fatima Jinnah, the sister of Pakistan's late founder, Mohammed Ali Jinnah.

Some women are suggesting an all-female political party. Several thousand held a women-only rally recently in Nishtar Park. Police guarded the gates against male intrusion, and said they found two disguised men trying to sneak in.

The women's magazine She likes the slogan "If God had wanted women in the kitchen He would have given them aluminum hands."

"In Pakistan women have not yet made a bold bid to take out male domination," she observed. "But realization seems to be dawning . . . unless women band together they will continue to be a suppressed and subjugated 47 per cent of the population."

Begum Liaquat served as ambassador to Italy and Holland for 12 years. She says her All Pakistan Women's Association, the best organized group of its kind in this land of 120 million, "is not a militant body."

But it is beating back conservative opposition to 18-year-old family laws which give a first wife a veto over her Moslem husband's taking of another spouse.

When women demanded 20 per cent of the 300 seats in the new National Assembly, the military government awarded them 13—to be filled by an election among the popularly-elected members, most of whom will be men.

"At least the men will get used to having the women around," said the begum.

The vast majority of Pakistani women submit obediently to male domination and to such customs as arranged marriage. Some, like Lahore lawyer Shireen Ikram, daughter of the head of Pakistan's Family Planning Association, defend the practice as more stabilizing than romantic Western marriages.

About five per cent of Pakistani women are literate, a rate one-third that of the general population's literacy. Women marry as young as 13 in East Pakistan and often bear a half dozen or more children.

City wives, even those with expensive educations, often live secluded at home.

Neither family nor husband proved an obstacle to the professional practice of Yasmeen Lael, a rising British-trained architect. A younger sister was emancipated enough to learn to fly. Then she married, Yasmeen says, "and that was the end of her."

Many respectable families consider medicine or teaching the only decent professions for daughters.

But times are changing. The Communist head of several of Karachi's big labor unions is a 35-year-old mother, Kaniz Fatima. A young Parsi, Mami Mehta, graduate of Karachi University, is director of a shipping company.

Burmese-born Lily Khan runs a plastic pipe factory in Dacca.

Because of the shortage of educated women, a good Karachi stenographer can earn up to 900 rupees or $187 a month in a city where per-capita income is 800 rupees a year.

"We don't want to take men's jobs," said Begum Liaquat. "We want to be in jobs women can do better than men."

But one woman doctor wants to banish males from the faculty of Fatima Jinnah Medical College for Women in Lahore. "Properly qualified ladies are available in sufficient numbers," said Dr. S. A. Khan.

In Lahore, journalist Farzana Bokhari, 29, has a master's degree and a thick portfolio of articles she has written demanding greater freedom for women. When a visiting foreign journalist invited her to dinner at a restaurant to discuss her writing, she declined regretfully.

"My mother won't let me out after 7:30," she said.

Men Pay More

TOKYO (AP) — British photographer Sam Haskins opened a one-man exhibition, charging twice as much admission for men as for women. He said the show featured "the beauty of women, many in the nude," which would probably attract more males than females and he wanted to redress the balance.

Church Groups

ST. ANDREW'S WMS

A special program marked the 85th anniversary of the organization of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at a meeting held recently in the Sunday school auditorium.

Mrs. J. Craig was in charge of the program and dealt with the past, present and future. Those taking part were Mrs. M. Barlow, in period costume, who presented a review of past activities according to available records; Mrs. V. Weir who spoke on the aim and purpose of the group; Mrs. WMS and Mrs. W. Clendenan who in her remarks took a look at the future.

Those assisting in the devotional were Mrs. D. Kane, Mrs. J. Miller and Mrs. F. Matthews.

The president Miss L. Burnside conducted the business period when the usual reports were received. Mrs. Weir reported that four cartons of warm clothing, toys, sewing supplies and quilts had been shipped to the West. Mrs. F. B. Sheffield reported on the progress of the English language class held each Thursday morning at the church.

Mrs. H. Elvidge presented the slate of officers for 1971 and Mrs. A. L. Sutherland conducted the installation as follows: honorary presidents, Mrs. A. L. Sutherland and Mrs. W. H. Walker; past president Miss L. Burnside; president Mrs. L. Clendenan; 1st vice - president; Mrs. C. Hisner; 2nd vice-president Mrs. J. Craig; secretary Mrs. E. Shier; treasurer Mrs. R. Jones; literature secretary Mrs. P. Jones; press Mrs. M. Barlow.

Others are: Mrs. V. Weir; Glad Tidings Mrs. R. Jones; card secretary Miss N. Bell; Horse Helpers Miss F. Matthews; Friendship and Service Mrs. H. Yorke and Mrs. D. Kane; pianist Mrs. W. Mandle.

A social period followed during which the decorative birthday cake was cut by Miss H. Blair.

MARYSVILLE CWL

MARYSVILLE — At the recent meeting of the Marysville Catholic Women's League held in Holy Name of Mary School, president Mrs. Don McLaren reminded members to remember the elderly and residents of nursing homes with gifts or a donation at the Christmas season.

The achievement day for 4-H Club members will be held at Moira Secondary School on Nov. 28. Parents and friends, are invited to attend the afternoon program and to view the work done by the girls in the community.

Mrs. Bernard O'Sullivan has written the history of the Marysville CWL from its formation in 1931 up until 1967, a long with keeping a scrap book of some of the highlights. She has been requested to continue with bringing it up to date. Anyone having any information or clippings is asked to assist Mrs. O'Sullivan in this project.

Plans were made for the sick and shut-ins of the parish to be remembered by gifts at Christmas and members voted in favor of contributing $100 to Father Jim Farrell for missionary work.

At the close of the business session the president introduced the guest speaker Mr. MacLeod, Hydro Accident Prevention Officer of the area. He demonstrated the many ways accidents do happen and how these can be avoided. It is especially important that adults are aware of the hazards and they in turn make the young, especially boys, aware of the dangers. Young boys are inclined to be adventurous and should be warned of the danger of making contact with high tension wires resulting in being badly burned or fatally injured.

Mr. MacLeod answered questions from the audience after which Mrs. John Sexsmith thanked him for a most interesting talk and presented him with a gift in appreciation.

Next will be the Christmas meeting on Dec. 8.

A Battle Of Baby Foods Shaping Up

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — A battle of baby foods is shaping up in Argentina.

Until recently, prepared baby foods were rare in this predominantly middle-class country. Then with a great deal of advertising, an Argentine subsidiary of the British-based Rickard-Colman group has begun selling 20 varieties of "Fortivi" in Greater Buenos Aires markets.

The company, called Brassobaby, has thus jumped the gun on the U.S.-based Heinz company, which has been conducting a test market for its baby food since last May in Cordoba, the third largest city. There are rumors that another U.S. giant, Gerber, will plunge into the fray.

Up to now the Argentine mother has had to cook meat and vegetables, then scrutch, strain them and then coax junior into eating the stuff. A marketing study showed it took about four hours of the Argentine mother's day to do all this. The food is also a status food of prospective baby food consumers. There are about 1½ million children under the age of two in the population of 23 million.

Besides taking a long time, the operation of feeding baby is a ritual in some Argentine families. Everybody pitches in to aid mother. The Brassovora advertisements are careful not to make the mother feel guilty that she may be selfishly buying prepared foods just to save time.

Rather, they stress that she will be taking better care of baby by providing a well-balanced meal containing vitamins.

"We'll let the mother think out for herself that it's saving her time," a baby food appeal says.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

STIRLING WI

At the November meeting of the Stirling WI held at the home of Mrs. Arnold Wannamaker, the guest president Mrs. Jeffrey spoke on the generation gap and pointed out that the majority of young people do not feel it and many help in hospitals and with senior citizens Troubles, when they occur can usually be traced to the home environment and to causes such as a working mother. She designed "Keep up with the Jones" and the expression of hostility towards other people". She recommended the reading of "Humanity and Happiness" by Ethel Chapman. Mrs. Jeffrey was presented with a gift.

Plans for the Christmas meeting were discussed. Mrs. Jones presented the Remembrance Day program.

The agreement with the village council was read and approved. It was announced that the achievement day be the 4-H group is to be held in Centennial School on December 5. A card party is to be held at the home of Mrs. Cook on November 18. Members were told that one quilt was already sold and another one was being made.

Earlier Mrs. Everett Cook welcomed the members.

MOUNTAIN VIEW W.I.

Mrs. W. Barber and Mrs. Leo Wood were appointed leaders of the 4-H group at the November meeting of the Mountain View W.I. held at the home of Mrs. William Nightingale with Mrs. Allan Wallbridge as co - hostess.

A dessert party was planned to be held at Kente School on November 18. Other county curators have been invited to attend.

Mrs. Clifford Barber gave a report on her attendance at the FWIC convention held at Winnipeg in summer. She also showed slides of her trip and the convention. Mrs. Ken Manley gave a report on the area convention of women's institutes held recently in Belleville.

Assisted by the lunch committee Mrs. C. Barber and Mr. G. Flower the hostess served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed. The meeting was attended by 26 women.

Curb Population

TORONTO (CP) — People would be discouraged from having babies if the baby bonus paid for doctors' fees and hospital costs, Dr. Frederick Knowles, head of the zoology department at the University of Toronto told the audience at a pollution debate. Dr. D. A. Chant said the federal government should adopt a "zero population growth" policy for Canada and help set up abortions and free birth-control clinics.

Quinte W.I. Euchre Party

The Quinte Women's Institute held a euchre party on Friday night with 14 tables in play. The event was convened by Mrs. Jack Parrett.

Prizes were won by Mrs. B. Fairbrother, Mrs. K. Ferguson, Mrs. W. Way, Mrs. E. Lloyd, Harry Gosline and C. Hoskin. Lucky draw was won by Harry Taylor.

Lunch was served and a social time enjoyed.

Disappointment from Lack of Communication

By DORIS CLARK

Back home again! Karen was rejoicing in the warm welcome her husband had given her, and now she was walking back in her own front door.

She was aghast at the sight which met her eyes. There were dishes in the sink, clothing, shoes, newspapers scattered around in places where they shouldn't be. She burst into tears over the mess she had come back to.

Billy was surprised and alarmed. For the first time he realized the load his wife had been carrying so cheerfully in the past.

So he comforted her. Pointed out that in the home he was raised in, no one had ever asked him to do any housework. He thought he was doing pretty well if he could make himself a sandwich or fry an egg. And then he said, "Karen, tell me when you want me to do anything. I just don't see it if you don't."

DORIS CLARK

Karen felt better. Then she reviewed her own conduct and realized that she had been bottling up her feelings of resentment; had been playing martyr and feeling unnecessarily virtuous over doing every scrap of housework herself.

This was the beginning of better communication between Karen and Billy.

Dear Doris: This party I was supposed to be going to was just a simple wiener roast. Parents were to supervise so there would be no necking or liquor, but Dad said I would "burn around" or go parking with boys. I wouldn't. I would have gone to the party and when it was over gone straight back to my girl friend's house.

I am 16. I have tried talking things over but they won't listen. This boy only came here to bring my girl friend in his car last night. He was only transportation, and even this made them mad. They keep asking me why I don't pick a Ukrainian boy since I'm Ukrainian. But I'm not planning marrying whomever I go out with!

Please tell me what to do, Doris. I can't stay cooped up forever and I have to let go of the apron strings some time. — Bored and Unhappy.

Dear Unhappy: Your parents were raised where dating was not as free and easy as we do it in Canada, and when a girl did go out with a boy his intentions were likely to be serious right from the start. Here we believe better marriages are made when young people have a chance to get to know the opposite sex through friendly get-togethers and an assortment of casual dates.

There's much to be said for similar backgrounds. If you could make friends with a Ukrainian boy, your parents might begin to see that another Ukrainian family isn't against letting the series get together. Show them this column.

Dear Doris: Could you tell me if there is such a thing as borrowing books from a library through mail? This would be for people in isolated areas who cannot patronize regular library facilities. — Book Lover.

Dear Book Lover: I'm delighted to say there is such a thing; a service more people should know about.

To find out just how it is done, write to the chief librarian of your county library, your regional library, or the main branch of the public library in your nearest large city.

Books you want will be mailed to you in a padded envelope, along with a return label. This way you can enjoy all the books and how to literature the city stickers have on their doorstops.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

New Method of Cooking Cabbage

By MARY MOORE

Cabbage, onions and mushrooms were all on our table for dinner last night because readers are running out of ideas for serving them.

The cabbage recipe comes from Ken Coope who is a realtor and insurance man in our town.

STEAM-FRIED CABBAGE
(Serves 4)

4 cups shredded cabbage packed (see below)
2 or 4 tbsps. butter
1 med. onion chopped
¼ to ½ tsp. salt

In large frying pan gently saute together the butter and onion until just limp. Add cabbage shredded, but not as fine as for slaw. Cover and reduce heat to simmer for 15-20 min. turning two or three times, until cabbage is crisply tender. Sprinkle with salt. I loved this.

CREAMED MUSHROOMS
(Easy; serves 4)

½ - lb. small whole mushrooms, well washed
2½ cups hot milk
3 tbsps. butter
2½ tbsps. flour
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. MSG

Over direct heat in top of double boiler blend butter, flour, salt and MSG then stir in hot milk until thick. Add washed mushrooms, place over boiling water, cover and cook about 15-15 min. Marvelous with broiled meat cakes or, of course, steak.

CREAMED ONIONS
(Serves 4)

8 med. cooking onions
2 tbsps. margarine
3 tbsps. flour
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. MSG
1¾ cups hot milk

Grated cheese (optional)

Peel and cook onions in boiling water to cover until tender — nearly 1 hr. Drain. Turn into preheated vegetable dish. Make sauce by blending margarine with flour, salt and MSG, then stirring in hot milk until thick. If desired add ½ to 1 cup grated cheese. Pour over onions in vegetable dish.

Readers Surprised Ann Not A Christian

DEAR READERS: Here is a Confidential to the hundreds who wrote to express surprise or disappointment that I am not a Christian: In a recent response I said, "As a non-Christian who receives thousands of Christmas cards every year I do not resent the religious messages . . . etc." I was disturbed by the number of readers who don't know there are other religions beside Christianity and equate "Non-Christian" with Communist, Athiest and Anti-God. My religious faith is Judaism, the basic concept of which is One God.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am glad you printed the letter from the woman who had a miscarriage at five months. She urged you to educate the ignorant fools who ask embarrassing questions (such as, "Was it a boy or a girl?"). Now I hope you will print my letter.

I had a premature baby (seven months) and she lived only 24 hours. Five days after I returned from the hospital, a cheerful voice on the telephone congratulated me on the new baby. The following day a photographer came to the front door with a camera — he wanted to take pictures.

Calls from insurance companies, diaper services, baby furniture stores and toy companies drove me crazy. I was bombarded by offers for gifts in the mail. I became so depressed I could barely do my housework.

I know these companies are trying to get business, but why can't they at least check to learn if the baby lived before they begin to hound people? Or better yet, why aren't the hospital records kept private? This leaking of information should be stopped. Get busy, Ann, there's work to be done. — BEEN THERE, TOO.

* * *

DEAR TOO: I agree, but don't blame the hospitals. They do not leak the information to commercial companies. Births are a matter of public record. Anyone can get them.

A check should be made to learn if there is a baby in the house before the promoters descend. It can be done tactfully and tastefully — and I strongly recommend it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My problem is too hot to handle because of the size of this town and the prominence of the person involved. A very fine woman (Mrs. A.) whom I've known for many years, has been sending things out of the homes of her friends — mine included. At first I thought I must be imagining things but now I'm certain my suspicions are correct. Another woman in our club has spoken to me about this friend also.

The items Mrs. A has lifted were not very valuable —the most costly was a pair of $20 earrings. But I'm terribly upset because I believe she is sick and might get into serious trouble.

My husband says, "Keep quiet. Just look up things when she comes over." This approach might not be the act of kindness he intends it to be. By keeping silent, I could be unwillingly encouraging her to continue stealing. Will you advise me? — CONCERNED FRIEND.

DEAR CONCERNED: Tell the woman at once that you are aware of her compulsion. Be gentle and non-accusatory. Let her know you believe she is ill and in need of professional help. In the meantime, keep items that might tempt her locked up when she is a guest in your home.

Points for Parents

Mother: "Take a big bite of Potatoes for Daddy; now take a bite of carrots for Grandma. That's a good boy to eat for us."

Grandmother: "I hope he gets over his loss of appetite soon."

Coaxing a child to eat may help temporarily, but you have to make a greater and greater effort every day. Eventually, the tactics will bog down. If a child is well, his appetite will return in its own good time.

Don't try to overcome a 2-year-old's resistance to food by games and distractions. Put the food in front of him, help him if he needs help, but don't direct him simply to get him to eat.

MELROSE — William Walsh, clerk - treasurer of Tyendinaga Township was guest speaker at the Women's Institute meeting held in the Township School. He spoke on "Regional Government", explained its meaning and told of the problems that had already been made in arrears in the Province of Ontario.

A number of questions asked during the discussion period showed the interest that had been aroused from the speaker's remarks.

Mrs. H. McMechan, convener for this citizenship program, spoke on the qualities of a good citizen, and her assistants, Mrs. G. Milligan and Mrs. J. Macfarlane, gave readings along the same line of thought.

The hostess, Mrs. Don McLaren, and social committee received a vote of thanks for the hospitality they had shown to members of Lonsdale WI and the large turn out of members from the Melrose Branch.

Mo-Hawks Scramble to 5-4 Win Over Woodstock

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

While the Mo-Hawks 8-4 win over the cellar dwelling Woodstock Athletics could hardly be classed as an artistic success, it did provide first rate entertainment for the small crowd of 1,200 who braved the Sunday afternoon weather.

A long bouncing shot by Rick Bradford opened the game for the Athletics to pump another pair of markers past Steve Rezo and threaten the Mo-Hawks who were coasting along with a 4-0 lead.

Both clubs played wide open hockey, and both were guilty of defensive lapses. Outstanding goaltending by Woodstock's Art Fraser helped keep the Belleville club's lead at four in the first two periods, while Steve Rezo was unbeatable at the other end.

Al Ferguson opened the scoring for the Mo-Hawks at 2:37 of the first period. The hefty right winger took a lead pass from George Godson that put him into the clear and he dented Fraser for the score.

Some good stops at both ends of the rink prevented any further scoring in the opening 20 minutes. Rezo appeared to be making a strong bid for a shutout, kicking out 18 Woodstock drives, including a breakaway attempt by Garry Harrigan, Fraser's best stop among the 12 chances he handled was on a quick 13-footer by Doug Senior.

The middle period was far and away Belleville's best as they outshot the Athletics 19-8. Dave Jones, who had had his ups and downs as a defenseman, moved in to centre of the team's third line and helped spark the unit to its best showing this season.

The playing coach's nifty playmaking helped shake wingers Ray Johnston and Wayne McConnell loose for some good scoring chances, while the pair aided their own cause with some hustling, aggressive hockey.

Jones added the second marker for Belleville on a rink - length rush, beating Fraser with a 20 - foot drive.

Greg Marchen, who was outstanding on the winners defence, added some offensive punch at 7:21 of the middle frame, intercepting a Woodstock clearing attempt and scoring on a drive from the blueline.

Ray Johnston notched the fourth Belleville score, late in the third period with a low drive to the corner after Wayne McConnell centred a pass from the corner.

An apparently harmless hit from centre ice almost turned the game completely around in the closing minutes as Bradford's soft shot from the red line bounced over Steve Rezo's stick.

The Athletics added a second marker just 30 seconds later when Wayne Goetz backhanded a pass from behind the Belleville net past Rezo.

Mike Enshro narrowed the edge to one goal bouncing a shot in off Ray Johnston, seconds after the Mo-Hawk left winger had deposited Goetz in the Belleville net to foil a good scoring chance.

Larne O'Donnell took most of the pressure off the sagging Mo-Hawks on a pretty passing play with Al Ferguson. The speedy portsider collected a drop pass from Ferguson and beat Fraser with a low screened drive.

Dave McGowan scored with only six seconds remaining in the game for Woodstock's final goal.

Hot Goalie Helps Hold Mo-Hawks

Doug Senior of Belleville and Woodstock's Rick Bradford eye a loose puck in Sunday's OHA Senior A contest. Bradford's third period goal almost sparked a comeback by the last place Athletics after Belleville had built up a 4-0 lead. The Mo-Hawks held on to win a 5-4 decision despite the efforts of Woodstock goalie Art Fraser, who turned aside 37 shots in a standout performance. Belleville's next home game is Friday night against the Owen Sound Crescents.

Lancers Bounce Back to Tie Mohawk College

By PETER SCOTT

Skating and teamwork brought the Loyalist Lancers hockey team back from a 3-1 deficit to tie 4-4 with Mohawk College Saturday night.

The Lancers scored three times to the a fast skating Mohawk College in the third period.

In the first frame Mohawk got on the scoreboard three times with goals from Terry Bradley, Warren Labadie, and Rick Dobrucki.

Loyalist goalie Dick' Beare looked shaky on two easy goals which dribbled past him.

Loyalist had trouble in clearing the puck out of their zone.

In the second period it was a different story as the Lancers abandoned their hard-hitting style for puck control.

Dick Beare was great, stopping breakaways from Ralph Schmidt and Warren Labadie.

This seemed to perk the Lancers as Dave Blakely drove the puck home from Gary Thompson at 1:25. From then on it was all Loyalist. Mohawk goalie Brad Hollister made some key saves.

Treviton Jr. B graduate Randy Castellerin and Gary Goyer played exceptionally well on defence. The duo stopped rushes side the puck and led the returning rushes to set up key plays.

In the third period the score was 3-1 in favor of Mohawk but a determined Loyalist team managed to fight back.

At 8:16, Tom Fuller fired a low slapshot into the bottom corner. Loyalist digging paid off again at 13:44 when Len Taft scored from Gary Goyer.

Mohawks looked as if they had it wrapped up when Joe D'Agostine scored with five minutes remaining.

A tired Randy Castellerin finally drew Loyalist even when he fired a shot from the blueline into the lower corner at 18:37 of the final frame.

Mohawk Fast Break Hoops Loyalist

If you control the rebounding, you control the game and with an average height of 6' 2", the Mohawk College basketball team did just that defeating the Loyalist Lancers 114-48. It was the first regular season game for both teams.

Mohawk College in Hamilton is a very highly ranked team, shaved the reason by causing in on Loyalist mistakes. The Mohawks had a strong fast breaking offence which accounted for many of their points.

Rick Webster played a great game for the Lancers, scoring 16 points, and getting most of the Lancers rebounds. Another bright spot in the Loyalist lineup was Blair Cobham, a graduate from Centenbourg High School, who hit for nine points.

The Mohawks controlled play at both ends of the court while shooting 62 per cent from the field.

For Hamilton it was Dewitt Hanna who scored 22 points and stole the ball on some key defensive plays. Dave Hill the game's second high scorer, netted 17 points.

Towers, Mulroney Novices Set Pace In Weekend Minor All-Star Action

Belleville's novice hockey team met with the most success in all-star action over the weekend as the Towers Ford City A team came up with a win and a tie, while the Mulroneys Minor Novices were their game.

Brian Cook and Drew Stotesbury combined to hand a 3-0 shutout to Napanee, Sunday for Towers. Dan Duffy counted a pair of goals and Gary Frederick one.

Sunday, the Food City team split a 2-2 game with Cobourg, getting goals from Frederick and Tim Coates.

Mulroneys got two goals from Mark Crawford and singles from Wayne Deighton and Shawn Hubbs to stop Oshawa 4-2.

The Western Tire Juvenites got superb goaltending from Paul Mathison and strong positional play from the rest of the team to hold Kingston to a 4-4 deadlock, Sunday.

Mike Gorgan, Terry Pope, Gary Christopher and Wayne Chapman counted for West - ern Tire.

The Blaire Kerr Imperial midgets didn't fare so well with their Kingston opposition, dropping a 5-3 decision Sunday. Peter Senkes and Brian Cousins scored the Belleville goals.

Saturday, the Kinsmen Bantams played to a 3-3 tie with Trenton as Tim Whelan, Kris Kalmay and Rick Barbeau counted goals. The Kinsmen dropped a 6-1 decision to Kingston, the following day with Bruce Sutherland notching the losers only goal.

Maurice Rollins peewees got some measure of revenge by downing Kingston 5-1. Tony Meagher and Peter Coates lead the way with two goals each, with Andy Lupenec counting the other.

Goods Guys Bounce Northern No-Stars

The Good Guys lived up to their names in Northern Electric Hockey Sunday with a 9-5 win over the No Stars, while the Hornets and Dukes battled to a 4-4 tie.

Bob Bulkley had four goals and an assist to pace the Good Guys, while Randy Longhurst added a goal and two helpers.

Other scorers were Gerald Gerald Hamilton, Doug Bolin and Doug Bolin counted twice for the losers, while Bob Moon had a goal and two helpers. Rob Brownlee and Tom McDonald each scored once.

Steve Rosebush's hat trick helped pace the Dukes to their 4-4 split. Rosebush also assisted on Tom Pierc's marker. Russ Foster had two goals for the Hornets with the others going to Bill Goodfellow and Chuck Reynolds.

Cranmer's Touchdown Run Puts Calgary in Driver's Seat

REGINA (CP) — Calgary Stampeders gave away a 10-point first-quarter edge, then erupted in the second and fourth quarters to register a 29-11 win over Saskatchewan Roughriders Saturday in the first game of the best-of-three Western Football Conference final.

Halfback Dave Cranmer took a short pass from Jerry Keeling and romped for a 94-yard touchdown play in the first minute of the fourth quarter, putting the game beyond the reach of the Roughriders, the club that finished the regular season with 14 wins and only two losses.

"We made a mistake and it was a touchdown," said Saskatchewan coach Eagle Keys. There was a special call on, for a linebacker blitz on Keeling deep in Calgary territory. Bill, Keys said, "one player didn't get the call."

"I don't know whether they were lucky or caught what we were doing but that was the real breaker-upper," Keys said in the Saskatchewan dressing room. The touchdown came when Calgary was nursing a 15-11 lead.

Larry Robinson, who earlier had converted touchdowns by pass receivers Herman Harrison and Uriel Johnson and booted a 45-yard single, kicked the convert on Cranmer's score, then added two field goals, from the 17-and 38-yard lines.

Saskatchewan's only touchdown came on a George Reed plunge, after Calgary fullback Hugh McKinnis fumbled on his own 11-yard line. Defensive end Ken Frith recovered for Roughriders on the two. Jack Abendschan kicked the convert and a 20-yard field goal and booted the single that was the only score of the third quarter.

Calgary coach Jim Duncan said: "We were a little shaky at the start . . . and it was quite a comeback."

Keeling he said, stood up against the Saskatchewan rush, had fine protection and "we got better passing than we expected."

Stampeders, who defeated second-place Edmonton Eskimos in a two-game-total-point semi-final a week ago to enter the series against Saskatchewan, tangle again with the Roughriders at 1 p.m. EST Wednesday in Calgary. The game will be broadcast nationally by CBC television.

A third game, if one is necessary, will be in Regina Sunday, Nov. 22.

Duncan, whose club had nine wins and seven losses in regular-season play, said Saskatchewan made a vain attempt to disguise a zone pass defence by lining in a man-to-man position, then dropping off into the zone, and Keeling was able to find the flaw.

"Jerry was finding his receivers in the alley the Riders created." The Calgary defence, meanwhile, was making life tough for quarterback Ron Lancaster of Saskatchewan, who completed only eight of 34 pass attempts for 87 yards.

Halfback Cranmer, with four catches for 126 yards gained, led the pass receivers as Stampeders connected on 14 of 39 pass attempts for 224 yards. Calgary rushed for 83 yards, 52 by McKinnis, who carried 19 times.

The game marked the return of Reed, the Saskatchewan fullback who had been on the sidelines for 20 days with a leg injury. He carried 13 times and gained 54 yards, about two-thirds of the Roughriders' total ground gain.

Lancaster was presented at half time with the Jeff Nicklin Memorial Trophy, given annually to the WFC player considered most valuable to his team. He left the game in the fourth quarter and backup Gary Lane had his first throw intercepted by Robinson, the place-kicking defensive half.

The game was played before 15,530 fans with temperatures in the low 30s and a 12-mile-an-hour wind blowing downfield. The wind caused extra problems for the punters. Al Ford of Saskatchewan and Calgary's Ron Stewart. Both had some short ones into the wind and averaged about 35 yards.

Game of Give Away

Ticats Not Down Despite 10-point Loss

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes beat Hamilton Tiger-Cats 32-22 in the first game of the total-point final of the Eastern Football Conference, but Ticat coach Joe Restic says the Als are in for a heck of the time when the second game is played in Hamilton next Saturday.

And despite the Alouettes' 10-points lead after Sunday's game, Montreal coach Sam Etcheverry isn't complacent.

"Just forget about the points," said Sam, "I'd like to think we're going there to start off nothing-nothing."

Restic said: "It's half time. We're down 10 points and they've got to come to Hamilton now.

"One score will put us back in the ball game. They're in for a heck of a time when they come back to see us."

Although Etcheverry did not talk as if his team had already won itself a place in the national championship against the Western Football Conference champions, he was obviously elated with the win Sunday.

"Playing on a muddy field soaked by overnight show and some rain, the Alouettes fell behind 14-0 in the first quarter before beginning the comeback which brought 32,213 fans to their feet during the Alouette-dominated second half.

The crowd was the largest ever to see a football game in Montreal, or more than witnessed the 1980 Grey Cup at the Autostade.

"This football team can come back when a comeback is needed," Etcheverry said.

"We've been doing that all year."

The rookie coach said Montreal had done best with plays it used throughout the regular season.

"The only changes we made was to throw the ball a little longer today."

The Alouettes took full advantage of their aerial strength with quarterback Sonny Wade throwing for three touchdowns, one a 55-yard pass-and-run play to flanker Garry Lefebvre in the third quarter. The fourth Montreal major was scored by Bruce Van Ness on a run.

Wade completed 15 of 23 passes for 265 yards and was intercepted only once. Running back Van Ness threw the only other Montreal pass that was picked off by the Ticats.

Lefebvre, returning to action after missing most of the season because of injuries, was the game's leading receiver as he caught three passes for 108 yards. In addition to his touchdown pass it was a Lefebvre reception on the Hamilton 18-yard line that set up Van Ness for his touchdown run.

Hamilton could mount only a feeble passing attack which accounted for 194 yards and four interceptions, two from the arm of starting quarterback Wally Gabler and one each from Dave Fleming and Joe Zuger.

Despite their inability to move the ball through the air, the Tiger-Cats jumped into the 1-0 first-quarter lead on touchdown by end Billy Ray Liechtie and Gabler, a convert by Tommy Coffey and a 41-yard single by Zuger.

Montreal bounced back into contention after only 25 seconds of the second quarter when Van Ness ran eight yards for a touchdown and George Springate added the convert.

A touchdown by flanker Terry Evanshen on a 28-yard pass from Wade and the subsequent extra point gave the Als a 14-14 tie with Hamilton at half time.

The Ticats moved into the lead again a the 2:21 mark of the third quarter when Gabler connected on a 16-yard pass to Dick Wesolowski for six points. Coffey was good on the convert.

Hamilton scored its final point of the game only five seconds later when Dough Mitchell lofted the kickoff deep into the Montreal end zone and the Alouettes were forced to give up a single point.

Van Ness's second touchdown moved Montreal into the lead for the first time in the game at 7:20 of the third quarter. An 18-yard field goal by Springate and his convert on Van Ness's touchdown and Lefebvre's 55-yard pass-and-run major gave the Alouettes a 31-22 lead going into the final 15 minutes.

Springate's six-point single on a missed field goal attempt completed the scoring in the fourth quarter and gave Montreal the 10-point cushion heading into the second game.

Fumbles and interceptions on the greasy field help set up much of the scoring for both teams.

A fumble by Wade accounted for the Hamilton touchdown by Locklin who scooped up the ball and rambled eight yards into the end zone. Gabler's major also followed a fumble by the Als deep in their own territory.

The second Montreal touchdown came after Ticat running back Ed Buchanan lost the ball to Alouette linebacker Charlie Collins and the home team moved in for the six points.

Springate's third-quarter field goal and fourth-quarter single were both set up by interceptions of Hamilton passes.

Montreal had an edge on the statistics sheet as well as on the scoreboard. The Als mounted a net offence of 289 yards while the Ticats moved the ball only 171 yards. Montreal picked up 17 first down to 13 for the visitors.

The only department in which Hamilton had the advantage was punting, with Zuger booting the ball nine times for an average of 44.7 yards and Wade averaging 37.3 yards on eight kicks.

Moses Denson, with 86 yards on 18 carries, was the game's leading rusher, followed by team-mate Van Ness who gained 37 yards on 14 runs.

Another Errant Pass

Hamilton's Paul Johnson (20) gathers in an errant Sonny Wade pass and is tackled by an unidentified Montreal Alouette. Johnson's defensive heroics went to no avail, however, as the Als dropped the Tiger-Cats, 32-22, in the first game of two-game total points Eastern Football Conference final. (CP Wirephoto)

Kraemer Beats Gaels 24-20

WINNIPEG (CP) — University of Manitoba Bisons had some difficulty bearing quarterback Bob Kraemer in the huddles but no trouble following his example on the field during their Western College Bowl victory Sunday over Queen's University Golden Gaels.

The Bisons defeated the Kingston, Ont., team 24-20 in overtime to earn a berth in next fekend's Canadian College Bowl in Toronto. Their opponents will be Ottawa Gee-Gees, 24-11 victors over University of New Brunswick in Saturday's Atlantic Bowl.

Speaking loud enough to be heard became a problem for Kraemer after the incident that left him with one less tooth and a swollen and bloody lip. The 20-year-old signal caller found himself choking on his own blood throughout the remainder of the game .

But the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association's most valuable player this season carried the ball 11 times for 99 yards and the winning touchdown and the Bisons offence, after failing to get untracked in the first half, picked up momentum.

Aussies Win Golf Honors

BUENOS AIRES (CP) — Australia won the World Cup golf championship for the first time since 1959 Sunday, but local favorite Roberto de Vicenzo copped individual honors in a tense struggle with David Graham of Australia.

The Aussie twosome of Graham and Bruce Devlin finished the four-day event with a total aggregate of 545, 31 strokes under par and 10 strokes ahead of Argentina. At one point the Australians were 34 strokes under par on the 6,700 yard par-72 Jockey Club course.

Bob Foster Faces 9-For-9 Jinx

DETROIT (AP) — Bob Foster will be up against precedent and the deadly punching of Joe Frazier Wednesday night when he tries to win the world heavyweight championship in a scheduled 15-round fight at Cobo Hall.

The 31-year-old Foster, a 3-1 underdog, will try to break the losing habit light heavyweight champions have had against heavyweight kings. Nine times men who held the light heavyweight title have tried for boxing's big prize and nine times they failed.

For Frazier it will be the first defence since he won world recognition as champion by knocking out Jimmy Ellis last February in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Frazier will take an unbeaten record or 25 victories into the fight, including 22 knockouts. The 26 3/4-year-old Philadelphian is a boring-in type of fighter who, as he will be against Foster, often has been at a height and reach disadvantage.

Frazier, who pounds, stands five foot, 11½ and has a 73½ reach. Foster will weight about 190 pounds 6-3/4 and has a 79 inch reach.

Foster has won 41, with 35 knockouts, and has lost four, but three of these losses were against heavyweights—the last a 10-round loss to Zora Folley in 1963.

Blanda's Poise Opponents' Poison

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oakland Raiders have found the secret to winning, by George.

Let George Blanda do it.

The resurgent 51-year-old quarterback continues to defy the laws of nature by simply not acting his age. Sunday he did his amazing thing again with a last-minute touchdown pass as the Raiders beat Denver Broncos 24-19 in the National Football League.

"You have to give the guy credit," said Denver coach Lou Saban of pro football's senior quarterback.

"Boy, oh, Blanda's gone four games. He is other of starter Daryle Lamonica:

—Tossed three scoring passes in leaving a victory over Pittsburgh Steelers.

—Kicked a 48-yard field goal in the final seconds as the Raiders pulled a tie out of the fire with Kansas City Chiefs.

—Kicked a 52-yarder to beat Cleveland Browns.

—And Sunday, hit Fred Biletnikoff with a 20-yard strike for the game-winning touchdown with less than four minutes left.

The triumph kept Oakland ahead of Kansas City by a half-game in the American Conference's dizzy West Division race. The Chiefs stayed in the thick of things by crushing Pittsburgh Steelers 31-14.

San Francisco 49ers made headway in another tight race, the National Conference's West Division, by beating surprising-by-touch Houston Oilers 20-20 while runner-up Los Angeles Rams dropped a 31-28 shocker to New York Jets. The loss dropped the Rams into a tie with New Orleans Saints for second place in the NFC's Central Division behind Atlanta Falcons.

New York Giants tightened up the NC's East Division battle with a heart-stopping 35-33 victory over Washington Redskins. The win pulled New York within a half game of leading St. Louis Cardinals, who tackle third-place Dallas Cowboys tonight.

Minnesota Vikings just about put a lock on the NC's Central Division race by bouncing second-place Detroit Lions 24-20 and grabbing a three-game lead over the Lions and Green Bay Packers.

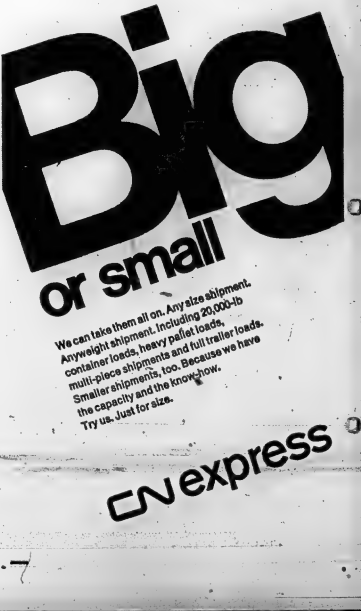
Baltimore Colts and Buffalo Bills fought to a 17-17 tie, but the Colts still had a substantial 2½-game lead over Miami Dolphins in the AC's East Division.

Miami trounced New Orleans Saints 21-10; Green Bay nipped Chicago Bears 29-19; Cincinnati Bengals upset Cleveland Browns 14-10; San Diego Chargers turned back Boston Patriots 16-14 and Atlanta Falcons and Philadelphia Eagles played to a 13-13 tie in Sunday's other games.

After Denver had holed Oakland 20-0 in the first half, the Raiders came to from and began for Lamonica to work some of his patented magic.

He passed 27 yards to Rod Sherman at the 42, then collaborated with Warren Wells on a 35-yarder that landed Oakland on the Denver 20.

Two plays later, Blanda found Biletnikoff.



Pittsburgh Steelers, looking for their first victory since Sept. 23, had their chances in the early going. But Terry Bradshaw, Len Dawson fired three TD aerials for the Chiefs, who collected 424 yards total offence.

John Brodie easily victimized the Houston secondary, unfurling three touchdown passes for San Francisco and the 49ers won their fourth game in a row.

New York Jets' defence shackled hard-throwing Roman Gabriel with one of his worst days as a pro in their surprisingly easy victory over Los Angeles. Gabriel hit only 16 of 47 passes and had three picked off.

New York Giants appeared to be headed for their fourth straight defeat after falling behind 33-14 in the third quarter. But the Giants were not to be denied, and with 62,000 fans roaring approval, Ron Johnson scored two touchdowns and Tucker Frederickson one to win the game.

Clint Jones, who had already scored two touchdowns, skirted end for a five-yard TD burst with 1 23 left that gave Minnesota a dramatic victory over Detroit.

Bruins Surprise Losers in Two Weekend Games

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Boston Bruins were looking to weekend games with the lowly Toronto Maple Leafs and California Golden Seals as feathers to pad their cushion atop the National Hockey League's East Division.

The opposition wasn't content to become down in the Bruins' den however and the Beantowners came out of Saturday-Sunday games with back-to-back losses.

At Toronto, the Leafs, with re-acquired defenceman Bob Baun providing the much-needed voice of leadership, tripped Boston 3-2. California completed the sweep in Boston Sunday 2-1 as the Bruins's sharpshooters were frustrated continually by the acrobatics of Seals goaltender Gary Smith.

It was the first time in 21 months Boston had lost two games in a row. The last time was March 15, 1969, when a 7-4 loss to Toronto followed by-two days a 2-1 setback by Philadelphia Flyers.

In other Sunday games, New York Rangers defeated Toronto 4-2 and moved into a share of the NHL East lead with Boston. Chicago Black Hawks downed Vancouver Canucks 4-2 to retain their three-point lead in the West Division over St. Louis Blues, 2-1 winners over Philadelphia Flyers, Montreal Canadiens and Buffalo Sabres tied 2-2 and Detroit Red Wings and Los Angeles Kings played toa 4-4 tie.

Rounding out the Saturday scores, Pittsburgh Penguins thumped California 6-1, Chicago edged New York 2-1, Montreal and St. Louis played to a 1-1 tie and Minnesota North Stars needed rookie Jude Drouin's late goal to tie Vancouver 3-3.

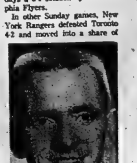
Tuesday night California is at Montreal, Detroit at Vancouver and St. Louis is at home to Minnesota.

At Boston, Dennis Hextall's goal early in the third period stood up as the winner although Smith was bombarded throughout the period by the Bruins.

He closed the door however surviving a disputed call by referee Bryan Lewis who ruled that a shot by Dallas Smith, a Boston defenceman, did not go in despite the red light that went on behind Smith.

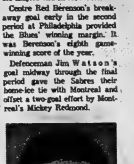
Bob Nevin, Rod Gilbert and Jack Egers scored within eight minutes in the second period as New York to wipe out a 1-0 Toronto lead.

Egers's goal made it 2-2 and the margin stood up until Toronto goalie Bruce Gamble was removed late in the third period for a sixth attacker. But the maneuver backfired with Rangers scoring an empty-net goal with 13 seconds left in the game.



Pit Martin's two goals led the Hawks in their home-ice win over Vancouver, marred by a second-period brawl that saw 80 minutes in penalties assessed and two players ejected.

Vancouver's Wayne Maki and Chicago rookie Dan Maloney were the chief participants, each drawing double majors, misconducts and game misconducts.



Canuck captain Orland Kurtenbach and Chicago defenceman Keith Magnuson also were participants and each drew double majors and misconducts.

Centre Red Berenson's breakaway goal early in the second period at Philadelphia provided the Blues' winning margin. It was Berenson's eighth game-winning score of the year.

Defencemen Jim Watson's goal midway through the final period gave the Sabres their home-ice tie with Montreal and offset a two-goal effort by Montreal's Mickey Redmond.

RED BERENSON

PIT MARTIN

Gary Bergman's goal with five seconds remaining in the game carried Detroit to its tie with Los Angeles, spoiling the Kings' late-game comeback.

Bergman's tally came while the Red Wings were playing a man short. Bob Pulford and Rosa Lonsberry had scored 55 seconds apart with less than five minutes to play to send the Kings into a 3-3 lead.

At Toronto, rookies Guy Trottier and Billy MacMillan scored in the second period to give Toronto a 2-1 lead. The Stanley Cup champion Bruins fired 41 shots at Gamble, including 28 in the last period, but were able t count only Wayne Cashman's sixth of the year.

The Penguins exploded for four goals in the second period. California coach Fred Glover removed goalie Smith and sent in rookie Bob Sneddon after Pittsburgh's fifth goal.

A record St. Louis crowd of 18,530 saw Frank St. Marseille's first-period goal stand up until Canadiens' Jacques Lemaire got the equalizer with 25 seconds left in the game.

Goals by Bill White and Bobby Hull late in the second period at Chicago gave the Black Hawks their 3-1 victory over the Rangers.

League Leaders

Boston Bruins' all-star defenceman Bobby Orr, collected three points over the weekend to move into a third-place tie with Chicago Black Hawks Bobby Hull, each with 19 points in the National Hockey League scoring race.

Orr picked up two assists Saturday when Toronto edged Boston 3-2. He scored Bruins' only goal Sunday as California and Golden Angels beat them 2-1.

Phil Esposito of Boston was held scoreless in Sunday's game but he still retains a firm stronghold on first place with 22 points.

His nearest rival is teammate Johnny McKenzie, who has a season total of 20 points.

Two Wins Put Galt In Second

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Owen Sound Crescents snapped an 11-game Orillia winning streak Saturday night defeating the Terriers 3-1 in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A play at Owen Sound.

Elsewhere in the circuit, Galt Hornets moved into second place in the standings defeating Barrie Flyers 5-1 at Galt, then moved to Oakville Sunday for a 4-2 win over the Oaks.

The weekend wins put the Hornets two points ahead of Barrie and only two points back of front-running Orillia, which has 22 points on 11 wins and only one loss.

In other action Sunday, Woodstock Athletics dropped their 11th game in 12 starts, 5-4 to the Mic-Hawks at Belleville, while Crescents were trounced 6-2 on home ice by Kingston Aces.

In Saturday's Senior A round-Orillia contest, the Crescents got goals from Garrie Vaughan, Mayo Paquette and Gord Graham. Gary Milroy managed the only Orillia goal.

At Galt, the Hornets got goals from Pete Bettio, Ron Smith, Howie Deutsch, Mike Doersam and Dave Crummus, while Don Fraser scored the lone Barrie marker.

NEWRY OKR (AP) — Argentine Oscar Bonavena's 90-day suspension in Buenos Aires for "repeated refusals to cut his hair" won't keep him from fighting Muhammad Ali in a lucrative 15-round bout at Madison Square Gardens Dec. 7, the chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission said Saturday. "We have no reciprocity with Argentina," said Edwin B. Dooley, the head of the independent New York boxing organization. "He would have to trim it a little, if the hair is down to his neck," added Dooley. Bonavena was suspended for 90 days by Buenos Aires' Municipal Boxing Commission for appearing in the ring with his hair too long. He has let his grow to hippie-style length.

Junior A 4th Spot Crowded

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Catharines Black Hawks closed to within five points of idle Peterborough Petes atop the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A standings Sunday on the strength of a 4-3 win over Kitchener Rangers.

Peterborough has 27 points on the strength of 13 wins and a tie, followed by the Black Hawks with 22 points and Ottawa, which strengthened its hold on third place with a 6-2 win over Oshawa Generals.

In Sunday's other two contests, Toronto defeated Niagara Falls 10-4 and Montreal edged London 5-4, creating a traffic jam in the running for fourth place.

Hamilton Red Wings, also idle during the weekend, now share fourth place with Toronto with 14 points each, followed by Montreal with 13 and Kitchener with 11.

At St. Catharines, Clyde Simon deflected a long drive by Marcel Bonin past Rangers netminder Glen Seperich with less than seven minutes of play remaining to give the Black Hawks the win.

Dionne scored earlier in the game along with Bob Peppler and Jerry Andrea. Kitchener got a pair from Jerry Byers and the single goal was added by Bill Barber.

It was the fourth time this season the Rangers lost to the Hawks.

At Oshawa, the 67s buried the Generals with a pair of goals each from Terry Merrick and four markers by Ron Bobette, Rick Ball, Brian McSheffrey and Blake Dunlop.

Gerry Methe and Terry O'Reilly replied for Oshawa, which was outshot 37-36 by Oshawa's tough forward line.

In London, the Knights blew a 3-1 third-period lead and allowed Montreal Junior Canadiens to explode for three goals within 31 seconds.

Rookie Camille Lapierre got a pair for the winners in the second period. Jocelyn Guevremont, Roger Martin and Robert LaLonde banged through the London defence for three quick ones after the fistfight.

Dennis Vervegaert, Jay Babcock, Reg Thomas and Dave McLaren got the London goals.

Trudeau Supported By Four Out of Five

TORONTO (CP) — A national public opinion poll released Sunday indicates that 80 per cent of the population supports Prime Minister Trudeau's decision to implement the War Measures Act.

The telephone poll was conducted by Omnifacts, a division of Total Research Ltd. of Toronto, among 1,530 respondents in 12 cities across the country.

Results were released on CTV's W5 program.

The poll also indicates that vast numbers of Canadians feel the federal government should take a much harsher line with such dissident groups as hippies, anti-war activists, student militants, women's liberation, the Communist party and labor militants.

Eighty-seven per cent said they agreed with the prime minister's decision at the time the act was implemented as a weapon against the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

And 80 per cent still agree the government "was justified and correct in its actions, while 68 per cent said they "entirely approved" of Prime Minister Trudeau's performance during the crisis.

Mr. Trudeau drew partial approval from 22 per cent, while six per cent said they entirely disapproved.

In the case of Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and NDP Leader T. C. Douglas, more people said they disapproved of their actions than agreed they did a good job.

Mr. Stanfield drew complete approval from 13 per cent, partial approval from 30 per cent and complete disapproval from 23 per cent.

Mr. Douglas, who led 16 members of his NDP caucus in voting against the act in Parliament drew total disapproval from 19 per cent, partial approval from 19 per cent and complete approval from 10 per cent.

Stars' Deaths Blamed on Belief in Own Myth

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Why do superstars of rock music sometimes meet tragic ends? Because they start to believe their own publicity, says jazz saxophonist Cannonball Adderley.

The recent deaths of guitarist Jimi Hendrix and rock-blues singer Janis Joplin brought a flood of commentary about the pattern of success in today's pop music.

"I think people like Hendrix and Joplin become victims of their own publicity," Adderley said. "They begin to believe that they must fulfill the image of what their fans want them to be.

"I blame the trade magazines for much of that. Those rock journals create images that are larger, than life; they try to count out how different these superstars are in towns of drugs, sex and alcohol. So the stars try to live up to it.

"Hendrix was lionized beyond all proportions. As for Joplin, she was a star, for the rock syndrome."

If Adderley takes a philosophic attitude about the pressures of pop music, that's natural. He himself had a scare recently, when he suffered a heart seizure while on tour. He is once again on the concert circuit, but with a changed attitude.

"I had all the classic symptoms of a heart attack—chest pain, shortness of breath and all that," he said. "But my doctor said it was only a mild heart malfunction."

"It happened because I had let myself become tired, nervous and overworked.

"Now I've had a change in diet and I'm resting between engagements. Ordinarily work don't hurt me too much. It's just that I was trying to do too much in between. This business of burning the candle at both ends isn't such a good idea."

Cannonball Adderley is admittedly no superstar, and he's just as happy about that—superstars become so super that they end up having no place to work —they price themselves out of the market."

Instead of moving with the musical fashion, the Adderley quintet has done its own thing for 10 years, averaging a highly respectable, $200,000 annually. The Adderley style?

"It's jazz, creative music. We're comprehensive; we do it all, and we do everything fairly well. There are no weaknesses in our group. We're kinda like the Green Bay Packers when they were coached by Vince Lombardi."

The relaxed, affable Adderley, at 41, grew up in Tallahassee, Fla., where a fellow high school footballer gave him the nickname of Cannibal, "referring to my penchant for trenchermanship." The name became corrupted to Cannonball and now only his friends use his real name, Julian.

SALES — FULL TIME

TALK WITH US

Some good and women make sales. Make others buy. Sometimes we make them buy more than they intended and sometimes we make them buy more than they should. Sometimes they should.

At FAN International, Inc. — Famous Artists, Famous Writers and Famous Personalities — we don't sell anything. Except a chance for you to be a success in the most exciting business in the world.

Our famous personalities are interested in Life Insurance Sales. Not in selling insurance to our advertising clients. Not in selling insurance to our employees. Not in selling insurance to members of unions. But in encouraging the kind of men and women who are interested in helping people — to assist the upper middle class.

Ideally the person you are looking for is between the ages of 25 and 40. Has been successful in sales. Is aggressive, ambitious, and wants to earn more than he is earning now.

Serious Damage Can Be Done By Slush in Cooling System

By RAY STAPLEY

A reader writes:

"Due to ill health, I have not driven my car for 14 months and last winter it was placed on blocks in my side drive where it remained without having a wheel until last week.

"As I am now able to drive again, I got the car going and it seems to run fine, but one thing concerns me. After testing the antifreeze that remained in the engine all last winter, it was only good for 15 degrees above zero.

"But during last winter, the outside temperature dropped well below zero several times. Despite the fact that the radiator is not leaking, could the weak antifreeze solution have caused the block or head to crack?

"Since I will not drive again until I hear from you, a hasty reply would be appreciated."

— Mr. R. J. J., Toronto

Even at 30 degrees below zero, providing there is some antifreeze in the cooling system, it is highly unlikely that the block or head would be damaged in any way.

If, for example, there were only two quarts of antifreeze in a cooling system with a capacity of 13 quarts, the system would be protected to 19 degrees above zero. Only the solid will split the engine or radiator, and solid ice will not form provided there is some antifreeze in the cooling system. To prove this point I once mixed an ounce of ethylene glycol antifreeze with seven ounces of water and placed it in a freezer operating at zero degrees F. A day later the solution had turned to a thick slush that was easily crushed by hand, but there was no sign of solid ice.

However, slush forming inside the cooling system components can lead to serious damage. If the vehicle is started, the heat of combustion will quickly melt the slush inside the engine, but the slush will remain in the cold radiator and soon blocking circulation. Overheating will soon occur as the coolant inside the engine boils, and then there is real danger of cracking the head or block.

If the temperature suddenly plunges and you fear the antifreeze mixture is weak, before starting the engine remove the pressure cap and check inside the radiator. If there is liquid in the upper tank, it is usually safe to start the engine.

But, first place a thick cover over the grill area in front of the radiator. This prevents a rush of cold air through the radiator which could cause a temperature drop. Before removing the cover, idle the engine for about 10 minutes to make certain there is no sign of overheating.

However, if upon checking you see slush in the radiator, do not run the engine until the mercury rises or the vehicle has been placed in a heated garage to thaw out.

Of course, the best way to avoid all these suggestions is to make sure the antifreeze is strong enough to cope with the lowest anticipated winter temperatures in your particular area.

Pearson Doesn't Think FLQ Acts Will End Separatism

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister Lester B. Pearson says he does not think that the government's proclamation of the War Measures Act or the kidnappings that prompted it will have a long-range effect on the political separatist movement in Quebec.

Mr. Pearson's remarks were taped Friday for the CTV interview program Question Period Sunday.

Asked whether he agreed with remarks by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, made shortly after the abduction of British envoy James Richard Cross, that the terrorist gesture would end separatism in Quebec, Mr. Pearson said:

"I think we'd be making a mistake if we thought that this (kind of action) either the kidnapping or the subsequent proclamation is going to have a long-range effect."

Formula for Diet: Just Taste Things

For many years my friend's weight went up and down like a Yo-Yo. Up and down. Up and down. The "ups" distressed him. He felt defeated. A psychological failure. The "downs" improved his spirits only momentarily. He knew it wouldn't be long before he would be beginning the long climb to obesity again.

A few years ago, in his mid - 40s, he weighed close to 250 pounds. He was immense — and immensely discouraged. No diet seemed to work permanently. He was tired of counting up this and that — and counting calories.

He moved out West. I didn't hear from him or see him again until last year. The transformation was unbelievable. Now weighing 175 pounds, he was energetic and ecstatically happy. He told me his weight hadn't varied more than a pound or two since he had lost his excess poundage.

"What was your magic formula?" I asked him. I can tell me you have been taking shots and diuretics and other medicines that some people take to "knock off weight fast."

He pulled at the edge of his moustache, straightened his tie, and said, "I stumbled on a wonderful formula. I'm sure your readers would like to hear about it. One night I said to myself there must be a painless, simple method to slim off pounds. Suddenly it occurred to me: eat everything you like but only taste the things you like most.

"I used to put away at least a pint of ice cream every night before I went to bed. Now all I do is take one teaspoonful. Do you see the psychological implications? I satisfy my craving. I haven't said 'No' in any sweeping way. Way down deep I don't feel deprived.

"I used to eat eight to ten slices of bread a day — layered with butter. What do I do now? Take only a corner of a slice of toast three times a day at mealtime. Butter? I skim the top of toast with it.

"In other words, I never say 'No' to the things I like best. But I do say 'No' to the second mouthful of ice cream, bread and cake, pie, potatoes, fried potatoes (I take only one). You see, it's a psychological bout between your mind and your self.

"I used to take two or three highballs before dinner. Now?

Just one sip. It all seems ridiculous, doesn't it? But it seems to work by satisfying the inner man. He resents having 'No' said all the time."

Comment: Any harmless way to lose is a good way. If you are overweight, and you are temperamentally suited to my friend's formula, then it's inevitable that you will lose, too. There's no harm in trying.

For Mr. H.: Thrombocytopenic purpura is a generalized disease associated with hemorrhages into the skin, improper blood clotting, and deficiency of blood platelets. It is treated medically. But many cases can be helped by surgical removal of the spleen.

It is true that many patients complain of black and blue spots in the skin. But don't go rushing into a diagnosis yourself. Better let the doctor decide after taking the necessary blood examinations.

Dear Dr. Seborrhe: We have a little boy of 8 whom we love. Two years ago we noticed a two - inch - across tumor between his shoulder blades. A year later it had grown a little larger. We went to our family doctor and to a specialist. They called it a fatty tumor and suggested we leave it alone. It hasn't grown any larger. Is this the usual procedure? — Mrs. B.

Comment: An uncomplicated fatty tumor — called a lipoma — does not require surgery unless it grows quite large. Perhaps at this time "leave it alone" is the best advice.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Traffic Anarchy in Offing

It is not hard to predict that unless something radical, decisive and constructive is done within the next 18 years, there will be a reign of traffic anarchy in every large city (and maybe suburb) in America.

Motorists will park their cars wherever they can find an empty space, in streets or on sidewalks (as they already do in Rome.) Traffic regulations will be ignored en masse, for the police will be powerless to punish these willful violators of our absurd and unplanned transportation laws.

In most cities, there is little unity and less intelligence in coping with the modern monster of auto traffic. One department decides where buses stop; another bureau handles street repairs; a third is in charge of construction. Police are supposed to enforce traffic laws, but the planning of streets is done by another bureau, and signs and signals are supervised by still another branch.

This monumental chaos and contradiction has made most city speed limits meaningless. A boulevard sign may read 25 mph, but the signals are supervised by still another branch.

This monumental chaos and contradiction has made most city speed limits meaningless. A boulevard sign may read 25 mph, but the signals are timed for 30, the public drives at 40, and enforcement begins at 50.

"No Parking" regulations are just as systematically violated, but require a large number of reasons: for one thing, many are obtained as political favors, and are unjustified in terms of public necessity.

For another, private garages and parking lots are unable to handle the annually increasing flow of cars, and economic charges push high prices (while rendering such slapdash service) that those who can afford it prefer to take their chances on getting a ticket for a parking violation. It is sometimes cheaper, and always easier on the car.

We are at least a quarter-century behind the times in our random and spasmodic efforts to meet this aggravated problem. One chief reason that downtown areas have been dying in big cities has been the glut of autos and the diminution of good, swift, cheap public transport.

The merchants themselves, who ought to know better, resisted even the introduction of one-way streets for more than 10 years, when it was forced upon them. Now, in New York they resist Mayor Lindsay's closing of some commercial avenues to private vehicular traffic during a day a week, on the grounds that it is "bad for business."

But a drastic revision of our whole metropolitan transfer, before a wholesale rebellion by motorists breaks down the entire machinery of traffic enforcement. There is only one point in rediscovering the wheel-forks if it takes armed combat to reach them.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For November 17, 1976

Your birthday today: In the year ahead you will more than once experience sudden events which require you to take a clear, simple line of action. Any such incident can be a turning point in your spiritual evolvement: Material gains shouldn't be considered major factor and may not come if you fail to seek fuller personal growth. Today's natives usually have a strong desire for personal strength and power.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): In your home situation is an answer to some of your personal challenges, an idea never fully explored. Moderation helps you see the forces in time to do something constructive.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Where you have a choice between doing the job yourself or directing somebody else, try directing. Leadership qualities high — use it for career - building. Interesting year story.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You can frilter away energy, or you can concentrate and get quite a bit done — it's up to you. Attend to family arrangements, avoiding bygones and side-issues.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Aside from sensitivity in family matters, you have everything going for you. Make sure you take a rest-break for reflection and change of inner direction.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Your best spot today is office. Don't expect advice, deal with transactions involving material. Irrelevant changes are possible in personal arrangements.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Improve your position, confer with influential people, seek out new ideas, new projects. Specific money matters should wait for another time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Don't be oversensitive; patiently work out details. Your turn will come and the reward will be the fuller for having waited for patience to bring full cycle.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Self-improvement shows today. Added co-operation is also indicated. Make the most of both. Settle some long-standing family uncertainty if you can.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Your friends fail to see your opportunity. Plunge right ahead where you can get influential persons to help. This evening find something new to do.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Marital or partnership affairs require full discussion, some compromise. It is a generally favorable day. Your friendships can mean outstanding worth of exploration.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Both career, and [illegible] important still today who seem impervious to progress. An appeal to reason works better if coupled with an appeal to self-respect.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): In your responsibility for other people's concerns, today is a complex puzzle with much favorable potential. Your own prospects improve while pursuing your duties.

Investigation Said Possible Into Quebec Police Operation

MONTREAL (CP) — Amid reports that police operations in the kidnap crisis will be investigated, police Sunday were checking the authenticity of a letter contending that three police terrorist suspects escaped arrest in a raid Nov. 6.

The letter, signed "FLQ" and received by two Montreal Sunday newspapers, says Francis Simard and brothers Paul and Jacques Rose hid for 24 hours behind a false wall in a west-end apartment after Bernard Lortie, a fourth kidnap suspect, was arrested there.

The three men, identified by Lortie at a coroners' inquest Nov. 7 as accomplices with him in the Oct. 10 kidnapping of slain Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte, hid in a specially constructed cubby hole in a closet while the raid took place, the letter says.

They left the apartment the next day, it says, taking two police firearms "left behind through excessive negligence", when two police guards went for supper.

Meanwhile, The Gazette says the Quebec justice department will begin investigating police operations in the kidnap cases sometime before Tuesday.

Although the newspaper says a justice department spokesman would not comment on the scope of the planned investigation, it quotes an unidentified police source as saying "certain things are being looked into" because speculation on the quality of the operations is hampering police work.

The letter being examined for authenticity and possible clues by police makes no mention of the British diplomat.

It says Lortie and two girls arrested in the Nov. 6 raid were hiding in a closet when "the fascist police broke through the door" into apartment 6 where Simard and both Rose brothers managed to crawl into the closet cubby hole before being discovered.

"The three patriots stayed there motionless for 24 hours," the letter says.

Before leaving through a back entrance while police were at dinner, the men "were careful not to replace the cover of their hideaway and they left fingerprints everywhere."

The note also says Lortie should not be considered a traitor to the FLQ and that his name should be added to the list of prisoners whose release was demanded in return for the life of the two hostages.

Before his arrest, Lortie had been named along with the Rose and Simard in warrants on conspiracy to kidnap charges in connection with Mr. Laporte's abduction.

He testified at the inquest into the labor minister's death that he and the three others abducted Mr. Laporte but he said he was not present when the kidnap victim was strangled.

Benson Denies 'Priming' Slow

VANCOUVER (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Sunday that federal government measures to get the economy going again are working anything but slowly.

"A $2 billion-dollar change in the fiscal position from 1969-70 and four decreases in the Bank of Canada interest rate in five months isn't slow," the minister said in a brief interview here.

Mr. Benson is in B.C. to address the Victoria Chamber of Commerce at noon today, the Vancouver-Quadra Liberal Association meeting tonight and the Burnaby Chamber of Commerce Tuesday.

The minister was asked whether in view of the current high unemployment level, it is correct policy to restart the economy slowly.

"The only danger is in going too fast," he said. "I don't think the action taken by the federal government has been slow."

Asked whether there should be increased government borrowing to help finance programs, he said his borrowing this year "is taken care of."

"My borrowing is over $2 billion compared to negative borrowing last year."

Close Contest Likely in One Of 3 Ridings

MONTREAL (CP) — Byelections will be held in Quebec and Manitoba today with local issues, economic and agricultural, believed to have been a major factor in the campaigns to fill three vacancies in the Commons.

Little attention has been given to the hottest national issue, last Monday's proclamation of the War Measures Act by the federal government to fight Quebec terrorists.

If the Liberals do not retain the Quebec constituency of Labelle northwest of Montreal and the Conservatives the south-central Manitoba riding if Lisgar, it will be regarded as a major upset, spokesmen for all parties have said.

A close contest is expected in the south-central Quebec riding of Frontenac, a region which depends mainly on asbestos mining and small dairy farms. The Creditistes are the third party in 1968, but the Liberals have made a determined effort to win the seat back.

The seats were left vacant by the death of Conservative George Muir, who had represented Lisgar since 1957; the appointment as ambassador to France of Defence Minister Leo Cadieux, MP for Labelle; and the resignation of Bernard Dumont, Creditiste MP for Frontenac, to run successfully as a Creditiste in the April 29 Quebec election.

That left party standings in the 264-seat House: Liberal 152, Conservative 48, New Democratic Party 22, Creditiste 13, independent 1, vacant 3.

The NDP, which has never elected a member in Quebec, is contesting only Lisgar. The other three parties have entered candidates in all races.

Unemployment has been an issue in Labelle, where Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand ran into a demonstration of hotel workers during the campaign, and dairy policy is a sore point for some of Frontenac's small farmers.

The Conservatives have been concentrating largely on rural dissatisfaction with the Trudeau government in Lisgar, another predominantly farming area. The Liberals have also talked mainly about agriculture, against an ostensible background of rising grain sales.

For the first time 18-year-olds will be eligible to cast ballots federally. This increases the number of eligible voters—18, 028 in 1968—by about 15 per cent.

Six of the 10 candidates representing parties are under 30, adding to the youth aspect.

Snowfall Heaviest At London

TORONTO (CP) — Most centres in southern Ontario from south of Georgian Bay to Ottawa had their first snowfall of the season during the weekend.

The Toronto Weather Office said Sunday that London reported the heaviest snowfall, almost three inches. Police there reported a rash of accidents during the snowfall, most of them minor.

Two to three inches hit the Hamilton-Toronto area while Ottawa reported two inches and Montreal one.

Mission Accomplished Space Frogs Asphyxiated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six days after they were blasted into earth orbit from Wallops Island, Va., a pair of bullfrogs have died in space.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the two frogs in the orbiting frog otolith (OFO) satellite expired at 12:20 p.m. EST Sunday. Their experimental vehicle "had met all its research objectives three days earlier," NASA said in a statement.

The spacecraft was set up in such a way that when the mission objectives were fulfilled, the life support system would be used to accumulate carbon dioxide until the frogs were gently asphyxiated.

Murder Charged After Fatal Fire

PETOSKEY, Mich. (AP) — A 32-year-old Petoskey man has been charged with murder in connection with the deaths of four children who were trapped in a burning frame house near here Saturday while their parents were out.

Arraigned was Donald C. Ottaway, who was also charged with arson in connection with a second fire Saturday in an unoccupied summer dwelling.

Audit Curbs Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The government proposed Monday to place new limits on the activities of the official watchdog over federal spending.

Legislation to govern the auditor-general of Canada, introduced in the Commons, also would empower the government to back back officially at the watchdog after he publishes his annual report exposing "fraud, default or mistake" in federal accounts.

The legislation was presented in the name of C. M. Drury, president of the treasury board. Mr. Drury was among ministers who uttered what many took as criticism of Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson following publication of Mr. Henderson's blunt, sharply-critical report last spring.

The new auditor-general bill would put limitations on his present catch-all authority to tell Parliament about "any other case" he thinks should be reported. In addition to enumerated misbandings of public funds.

Henceforth, says the legislation, "any other case" would have to be related to the auditor-general's specified general duties. They are to see that government accounts are properly kept and the money has been spent as directed by Parliament.

In addition, the legislation would authorize the government to publish its observations on findings by the auditor-general's office simultaneously with publication of the annual audit.

To permit the government to respond immediately—thereby diminishing the impact of unanswered criticism—the auditor-general's office would have to inform the government what it planned to say in the annual report at least three months in advance of its publication.

Heath Spurns Recession As Cure for Inflation

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Heath has decided to brush aside traditional forms of fighting inflation.

Calling for more individual enterprise and less government interference, Heath has challenged the British people to work out their own salvation in a community of expanding economic freedom.

While the Paris-based Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development is reported to have urged Western countries to induce more recession to fight inflation, Heath made clear he will not be deflected from his long-term goals.

"It was in freedom, not in reliance upon the state, that Britain achieved greatness through individual development and through industrial expansion," he told the lord mayor's banquet Monday night.

"relatively flat fourth quarter this year and continued improvement in the gross national product throughout 1971."

He also foresaw continued improvement in employment but tempered his optimism with the remark: "I don't forecast dramatic changes because things just don't happen that way. It takes a long time for changes in fiscal and monetary policy to work through into the private sector."

Benson Expects Slow Improvement

VICTORIA (CP) — Canadians can "look forward optimistically to 1971," Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Monday.

Nixon Will Demand Changes In Auto Pact with Canada

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon has served notice his administration will renew its demand that the five-year U.S.-Canadian auto pact be renegotiated to eliminate provisions favoring Canada.

But officials in Ottawa said Monday Canada will continue to resist the American demands.

In his annual report to Congress on the agreement, Nixon says the continuation of the provisions of the 1965 pact favoring Canada "would be contrary to the premise on which the United States entered the agreement, namely that market forces would be allowed to determine the most economic pattern of investment production and trade."

At issue between the two countries is Annex A of the agreement, under which the Canadian auto industry received special transitional arrangements which Nixon noted would continue "until its smaller industry could adjust operations to the much larger North American market."

Under this proviso, Canada gives duty-free treatment to motor vehicles and original equipment only when imported by qualified manufacturers. These manufacturers are required to maintain at least the same ratio of production of vehicles in Canada to sales in Canada as prevailed during the 1964 model year.

In his report, released last week while the president was taking a post-election vacation in Florida, Nixon said:

"The continued existence of the transitional measures . . . represents an unnecessary burden on the automotive industry and is an obstacle to full realization of the agreement's objectives."

In Ottawa, however, Canadian officials say that although they expected the renewed American move to revise the pact, Ottawa is no more ready to give way than it was last year.

Truck Crawls From Luna 17

MOSCOW (CP) — Soviet scientists soft-landed a robot spaceship on the moon today and then sent an eight-wheel vehicle trundling over the lunar surface in a series of earth-controlled experiments.

Lunokhod 1—the first vehicle on the moon—rolled down a special gangway from its mothership early today two hours 41 minutes after Luna 17 slid down to a soft landing in the moon's Sea of Rains at 8:47 a.m. (10:47 p.m. EST Monday), the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Lunokhod—the name means moon vehicle—is carrying scientific apparatus, control gear, radio communications systems and television observation equipment to perform experiments monitored back on earth, Tass said.

"For the first time in the history of astronautics an automatic moon vehicle, controlled from earth, was taken to the moon and began scientific investigations," Tass said.

The moon truck crawled 65 feet away from its landing point in initial experiments, Tass added. The Lunokhod is controlled from a special communications centre in the Soviet Union, and scientists are using television cameras aboard the revolutionary vehicle for information on the position and the nature of the surrounding landscape.

Soviet science has entered an age of "effective new means of moon exploration with the help of automatic machines," Tass said as it gave word of the Russian space spectacular.

Tass also reported that both Lunokhod and the Luna spacecraft carried Soviet coats and pennants and hammer-and-sickle of Lenin.

All systems aboard Lunokhod were functioning normally, Tass added. The Russians had given no previous indication that anything as dramatic as the Lunokhod experiment had been planned for the Luna 17 moon mission.

Multi - lingualism Backed by French In Saskatchewan

REGINA (CP) — An association representing French-speaking residents of Saskatchewan recommended Monday that official languages other than English or French should be allowed in certain regions in Canada.

Roger Lalonde, president of l'Association Culturelle Franco-Canadienne de la Saskatchewan, told the joint parliamentary committee on the constitution here:

"Each province should decide on its own official languages and should be able to declare a language other than English or French an official language in its territory, or in a political or civic region under its jurisdiction."

Cholera Assails Cyclone Victims

DACCA (CP) — Cholera spread today among hungry, homeless survivors of the cyclone and tidal waves that devastated heavily populated islands at the mouth of the Ganges River and stretches of the East Pakistani coast behind them.

Estimates of the total casualties were still only guesses, although some relief officials said Monday night that the count of the dead had reached 25,000. Information Secretary Syed Ahmed spoke of possibly 200,000 or 300,000" dead, adding that such numbers were not confirmed.

Cholera, a disease endemic to the area, was reported spreading on Hatia, one of the stricken islands in the Ganges delta cyclone alley. Three ships sent there with medical supplies were waiting for swift currents to subside so they could land their cargo.

Officials feared a widespread epidemic due to polluted water and the destruction of sanitation facilities.

A health department spokesman said nearly one million doses of anti-cholera vaccine had been sent to the area with a large shipment of safe drinking water.

Relief Commissioner A. M. Ahsanuzzaman said the slowly early Friday hit an area of 2,328 square miles in five districts with 2.3 million people. Casualty reports still were unobtainable from many areas because of ruined communications facilities, he said.

The commissioner himself put the official death toll at 32,777, with more than 2,000 known to be missing. But he admitted the survey was by no means complete.

The Pakistani press, working on figures from ignorant news sources, generally agree the death toll is in the vicinity of 200,000.

IRA Vendetta Blamed for Belfast Assassinations

BELFAST (AP) — The daylight assassination of two Roman Catholics led police to say Monday a ruthless IRA vendetta has erupted inside the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

The victims were Arthur McKenna and Alex McVicker, both 35. McKenna was the father of six children, McVicker of five.

They were shot down by a man in a black hat in the street near their homes in Belfast's Ballymurphy housing development, a stanchly Catholic area. Since then has been the scene of repeated riots during the last year.

Despite denials from both rival wings of the I.R.A., police said the killings had the hallmark of an I.R.A. "execution." A 19-year-old boy who saw the shootings said the killer escaped in a small panel truck driven by an accomplice.

The I.R.A. and its political front — Sinn Fein (Gaelic for "Ourselves Alone") split into two factions earlier this year, the Reds and the Greens.

The Reds, who still control the Sinn Fein party apparatus and are sometimes called the "officials," are largely orthodox Marxists demanding a Communist revolution both in Northern Ireland and the neighboring Irish Republic.

The Greens, otherwise known as the Provisionals, are the traditional I.R.A. line of anti-British nationalism.

They advocate guerrilla war against the British troops, who since last August have held the peace line between Northern Ireland's pro-republican Catholics and the anti-republican Protestant majority.

Tension between Reds and Greens took a sharp turn upward after a shooting attempt on Provisional Chief Joseph Cahill. The Dublin-born leader who is chief of staff of the Reds.

It was further aggravated by the arrest in the republic of 23 northern Greens who had allegedly gone over the border for arms training.

Eight of the northerners were jailed Monday for a month in Dublin, the republican capital, after refusing to pay fines of £20 ($48) on charges of illegal possession of arms.

Fifteen others were in court Wednesday on similar charges.

Both the Green and Red sides of the I.R.A. denied that any of their members was involved in the Belfast shootings either as executioner or victim. A police spokesman said, however: "As far as we are concerned it is an internal I.R.A. quarrel."

Anti-Pollution Committee Now Organized for Local Action

Pollution protest has been placed on an organized, action footing in Belleville.

That move came last night with formation of the Belleville Anti - Pollution Committee — the first successful attempt by Bellevillians with a common social concern to integrate into a forceful citizens' group dedicated to results.

Urgency of that concern was emphasized as the fledgling committee heard repeated calls from its membership to quickly dispense with organizational formalities and confront local pollution problems.

"Action is the key word — we can't afford to delay," a committee member took the newly - elected executive before last night's meeting at the Canadian Legion hall dispersed.

As a result, the executive meets within two weeks to firm up the committee's organization and aims — and get down to specific measures.

"Where we find pollution we will take action in have it stopped — and we will do this one way or another," promised Ronald Lee, first officer named to the group's executive.

In a departure from standard procedures, the BAPC named two chairmen to head its activities.

Mr. Lee, an industrial safety supervisor, shares the post with James Meredith, grocery trading company manager.

The executive — like the committee itself — reflects a broad cross - section of the community.

Its executive varies in background from a teenage high school student to a veteran commercial - fisherman who spent years studying pollution in the Quinte district.

Sharon Moyens, 18, is treasurer of the BAPC. Charles Dunsberry, whose research into pollution of the Quinte waterways has drawn wide acclaim, is an executive director.

Other executive members are: Bruce Kerr, director of Hastings County's Family and Children's Service; Bill Kaast, Richard Bird, school teachers; Al Palmateer, public school principal; Douglas Sword, civil servant and Quinte District Labor Council member; Mrs. Susan Jury, a housewife, who is secretary of the BAPC.

The new committee is part of a movement expected to produce similar groups in neighboring areas.

William Babbitt, Loyalist College teacher, said anti-pollution committees were in the process of formation in Trenton and the cottage areas in central and north Hastings County.

The BAPC is the direct result of a recent seminar on pollution organized by the college and the Quinte District Labor Council.

The labor council provided the funds that last night's organizational meeting while its president, Robert Andrus, supervised the start of the committee's discussions.

While the BAPC evolves specific objectives, first starters it has sense cautionary advice from Mr. Babbitt.

Dedication to sweeping achievements was admirable, but the more ordinary, every day aspects of pollution were important, he indicated.

The committee must also acquaint itself with the details of such local operations as sewage facilities.

"These are very mundane things," he admitted. "But the mundane problems we face every day are perhaps what we need some background on."

'Pollution-Free Environment Can Be Costly'

The bill for creating a clean environment can only be paid out of society's economic living standards, the Belleville Anti-Pollution Committee was cautioned last night.

"Our standard of living probably will not get any higher if we have a complete pollu-free environment. I think we have to make a choice," Bruce Portt, a Tyendinaga township resident told the committee at its organizational meeting in the Canadian Legion hall last night.

Mr. Portt, a former school trustee and one-time chairman of the Bay of Quinte High School Board, said he agreed "something must be done" about pollution.

"But don't forget that somebody is going to get hurt — maybe your employer, maybe your company," he added.

"You're not going to correct these ills without somebody being hurt," said Mr. Portt.

"Where we find pollution we will take action in have it stopped — and we will do this one way or another," promised Ronald Lee, first officer named to the group's executive.

Tradeau Endorsed By Mayor

BATAWA (Staff) — Belleville Mayor, Dr. J. Russell Scott, last night gave his personal endorsement to the Very Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau handled the recent Quebec crisis.

"We in Canada have been blessed in the past with the right leaders at the right time. We have had in this crisis the right Prime Minister at the right time," he said in a brief statement at the special Liberal Party dinner here for visiting Defence Minister Donald MacDonald.

"It takes a touch of sadness to make a house a home" Mayor Scott said, adding that "this recent sadness has brought us closer to our neighbors in Quebec — our co-partners in confederation."

Government on Two Levels

Mayor J. Russell Scott of Belleville sat at the head table last night when Donald MacDonald, defence minister in the Liberal cabinet, spoke in Batawa. George Cunningham (right) Liberal candidate for Prince Edward-Hastings riding, was among the organizers who arranged the banquet to terminate the defence minister's visit to CFB Trenton.

Donald MacDonald Says FLQ Following Pattern

BATAWA (Staff) — According to Defence Minister Donald MacDonald, the October crisis provoked by FLQ cells in Quebec followed a discernible pattern.

It is "a pattern well known, clearly described by the far left, the Marxists and the Maoists," he said.

Mr. MacDonald made the statements at a banquet here last night organized by the Prince Edward - Hastings Liberal Association. He had revealed his methods revolutionary formula" thesis in a television interview October 28 but developed it somewhat at Batawa.

"The leaders of the FLQ had made it clear how they would act" the defence minister said, explaining that it was according to a three-part pattern.

First, come the bombings and other acts for "establishing their identity clearly in the minds of the public" he explained.

In the next wave come "spectacular acts and the act most in fashion today, kidnaping, whether of entire alarmers, or of individuals as in Latin American countries.

Kidnapings, he contended, were designed to confer government "impotent to carry on its activities" by daily demands as those for release of prisoners, money and publication of proclamations.

Lastly, he said "by a repeated series of these acts of this kind they weaken public confidence in authority" and "force authority to act according to their will".

Mr. MacDonald added that "we have stability now because the government . . . of Quebec and Canada was not prepared to back down as they were prepared to back words with action".

"Similar movements have been forced to yield. In 1970 in Canada the government did not yield. In other movements (Quebec and Canada) decided that if they gave in, more violence would occur next week and the week after.

"The Marxist-Maoist theory failed this time — failed because the determination of the majority of the character of Canadians . . . the government of Bourassa . . . and the discipline of the Canadian Armed Forces."

He contended that the aim of revolutionaries is "to try to get a government to overreact — to provoke a Kent State or Northern Ireland.

Speaking of his own particular responsibilities, Mr. MacDonald said that, although 7,500 combat troops had been moved into Montreal and Ottawa "not one incident of violence by the troops has occurred".

The final compliment was paid by Claude Ryan (of le Devoir). I seldom agree with Claude Ryan, but I will do, when he said what a fine force we have, how well they behaved," the defence minister added.

"They thought they could upset the Montreal government, yet the people turned out in the largest numbers yet to support the government on election day."

The defence minister also stressed that "the FLQ underestimated the people — like they might be used for tactical support of those troops." Canada has committed to the defence of NATO's northern flank in Norway.

He added that, rather than station the aircraft in Europe "it is more likely that they would be moved over in an emergency from Canada with the assistance of the 50 new 707 aircraft now being refitted with aerial refueling apparatus.

The general pay raise, Mr. MacDonald said, is now "under very active consideration" and will probably be announced "by the time Santa Claus comes down the chimney".

A new defence White Paper is in the works, he mentioned, and it will remove some of the uncertainties of military service in the Canadian Armed Forces.

Later, he said that one of the themes of a Canadian defence to be espoused in the White Paper would be an intensified safeguarding of national sovereignty. Along this line, the defence minister indicated that a Northern Command would be established to protect Arctic resources.

In the evening he addressed a dinner at Batawa sponsored by the Prince Edward — Hastings Liberal Association and in a question and answer period following his speech, dealt with the high cost of equipping the military and the contracts that always total more than anticipated.

"We must reorganize administration so that circumstances under which procurement takes place will be somewhat changed," he said.

Before returning to Ottawa, Mr. MacDonald paid a surprise visit to Branch 118, Canadian Legion, in Trenton where a general meeting was in progress.

He told the assembly during his 18 min. stay at the Legion appreciated the telegram of support that Branch 118 had sent during the Quebec crisis and that Air Transport Command here had contributed. He lauded the military activities prompted by the emergency.

Defence Minister Has Full Day At CFB Trenton

TRENTON (Staff) — The new defence minister, Hon. Donald MacDonald made a whirlwind military and political visit to Trenton on Monday.

Arriving at the Forces Base here by Falcon aircraft from Ottawa at 10 a.m., Mr. MacDonald spent most of the day familiarizing himself with the functions of Air Transport Command.

A mini-airshow was staged for him during the day featuring flypasts of various AVC planes and a practical demonstration of para-jump and pro-drop techniques with participants coming from as far away as Edmonton.

In an afternoon press conference, he explained that his Trenton visit was part of his plan to visit all Canadian Forces' Command Headquarters and major military operations, preparatory to visiting "more detailed" installations.

During his meeting with the press, he discussed several matters: possible acquisition of more Boeing 707 jet transports, the role of the controversial CF-5, the pending general pay raise for the Canadian Forces, and a new defence White Paper.

The defence minister said that his department "shall certainly be taking a hard look" at the prospect of acquiring more 707s. Additionally, in view of "the experience of the recent role in aid of the civil power in Montreal and Ottawa."

On the CF-5s he indicated that "it is very difficult when they might be used for tactical support of those troops" Canada has committed to the defence of NATO's northern flank in Norway."

He added that, rather than station the aircraft in Europe "it is more likely that they would be moved over in an emergency from Canada with the assistance of the 50 new 707 aircraft now being refitted with aerial refueling apparatus.

The general pay raise, Mr. MacDonald said, is now "under very active consideration" and will probably be announced "by the time Santa Claus comes down the chimney".

District Winners At Royal

Frederick T. Fry of Campbellford has won the reserve grand championship for dual purpose shorthorn bulls at the Royal Winter Fair.

Mr. Fry won the reserve award with Evergreen Gerner, which also won the junior bull championship.

Also in the beef cattle classes at the Royal, Excore, owned by Mountain Lake Farms of Picton, won the grand championship for the Canadian bulls.

John Sheridan, of Stirling, for many years an exhibitor at Quinte district fairs, won the single reserve award at the Royal with The Bandleader.

Road Condition Brings Complaint

TRENTON (Staff) — A resident of Burnbrae Heights appeared before council, the last night to protest the condition of roads in his area.

L. R. Sprowl of Seneca Road referred specifically to the corner of Murray and Reid Streets where a traffic accident occurred Friday night, injuring a neighborhood girl.

Mr. Sprowl said that the roadway is composed of "layers of patches that get higher and higher" and "water bubbles up between the patches."

"How much do you value human life?" he asked council.

Council resolved to have the town engineer examine the surfaces in question and report to councilors no later than Wednesday so that immediate action may be taken.

Quinte Farmers Win Seed Prizes

William Hicks of Shannonville, in co-operation with Bishop Seeds of Belleville, has won the world championship for Birdsfoot Trefoil and the reserve championship for legumes at the Royal Winter Fair.

The Shannonville farmer was one of seven in the Quinte area whose fine seed placed at the Royal.

Donald Massey of Castleton won the championship for pedigreed red clover seed, and Stevens Miller of Bath won the championship for pedigreed Birdsfoot Trefoil.

Ralph Dowling of Howe Island took second place in Birdsfoot Trefoil, Thorold Doan of Napanee, third in pedigreed Birdsfoot Trefoil, Donald MacDonald of Wolfe Island, fifth in Birdsfoot Trefoil and Art Colton, eighth in Red Clover.

The seed was grown under contract by the farmers and processed and entered in the Royal by Bishop Seeds Ltd.

Keegan Wants Tracks Moved Outside of City

City Alderman Arthur Keegan will ask for consideration to be given to the possibility of moving the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks to outside the city.

The alderman made known his intention at yesterday's meeting of the city council traffic and light committee during a discussion of crossing protection requirements in the city's Foster Ward area.

Alderman Keegan said that planning for crossing protection for the Foster Ward area was "putting the cart before the horse".

He said it was poor planning, claiming that instead the city should be thinking of getting the tracks moved out of the city.

The presence of the tracks was costing the city and Sidney township millions of dollars in assessment, he said.

If the tracks remained in the city no less than seven grade separations would be required in the immediate city area, including tremendously costly structures on the Highway 2 at the cemetery and at Union Carbide.

"It is never too late to make a change," the alderman said, indicating that he would be bringing the matter before council.

The discussion was prompted by letters from the railway and Canadian Transport Confimission regarding crossing protection on Haig Street crossings in Foster Ward.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said if the proposed grade separation on Highway 2 at Union Carbide was constructed it would automatically rule out the Haig Street crossing. The question, he said was when it would be constructed.

The committee did however mates be obtained for widening of the Harbinger Ave. crossing and for crossing protection.

Requested in connection with the local level crossings in Foster Ward were tabled reports on the matter which is received later this year.

Northern's Labs Here Part of New Entity

Northern Electric's Belleville laboratories will become part of a new research and development corporate structure on the largest of its kind in Canada.

The laboratory will be integrated into a separate subsidiary announced today by Northern and Bell Canada.

The new corporation, to be named Bell Canada - Northern Electric Research Ltd., with headquarters in Ottawa, will start into operation Jan. 1, 1971.

The new grouping integrates the Belleville laboratories with an operation budgetting $36,000,000 a year on programs employing 1,800.

The Belleville laboratory, started in 1967, employs 30, primarily engaged in designing telephone equipment for commercial markets.

Under the new grouping, which separates research and development from Northern's service and production operations, the Belleville centre will continue to operate as a regional laboratory.

Bell - Northern Research will be jointly owned by both parent companies — with Bell holding 51 per cent of the stock. President of the new establishment will be Donald A. Chisholm, vice - president of research and development at Northern.

Dr. Chisholm said the new organization would concentrate expertise and enable Northern to respond more quickly to new discoveries and advances in the telecommunications industry.

Santa's Parade Now in the Black

Plans for the Dec. 5 Quinte Santa Claus Parade are marching along as financial stability came into sight.

"We're now financially squared away — still a little tight, but we'll be all right," announced chairman Frank Foley at last night's meeting of the committee.

Art Corfield, organizer of the All-Canadian Star Variety Show, held Saturday, Nov. 14 in the BCIVS auditorium, announced that profits from the show ranged in the $300 bracket.

Tag days, Nov. 13 and 14, organized by Ken Ross, saw 180 taggers and helpers invade the downtown area collecting funds for the parade.

More than $1,259 was collected with this venture.

For the first time, trophies will be awarded for floats. Funds, in the amount of $350, were raised by Stu Meeks for this purpose.

Committee officials announced that close to 30 floats were already signed up for the parade, while this year welcomes entries from neighboring municipalities.

Ward Plan Too Late

TRENTON (Staff) — In a letter from the Ontario Municipal Board, council here was told that it is now too late to carry out the procedures that might have implemented the ward system form of voting for the December 7 municipal elections here.

Mayor Duncan McDonald says that council must now wait two years and go through the same procedure again, if the ward system is to be introduced to the town.

Police Spokesman At Sales and Ad

Canada's best known policeman will be guest speaker at tonight's meeting of Belleville Sales and Ad Club.

Syd Brown, president of the Canadian Police Association will include Belleville in one of his tours of Canada to improve relations between the public and the police and raise the standards of policing.

Born in Toronto, he served in the army during the war and later joined the Scarborough Police Department. With amalgamation of the Toronto Police Force and the 12 area municipal forces he became a member of the Municipality of Toronto Police Force.

In 1961 he was elected president of the Metro Police Association and climbed rapidly to become the first Canadian ever chosen to be the position of president of the International Police Association, an organization which represents more than 250,000 police officers throughout Canada, the United States, Mexico and the Canal Zone.

He is president of the Canadian Police Association, the Police Association of Ontario and the Metro Association.

Police to Get Added Space

TRENTON (Staff) — Town council has last - gave approval in principle to an expansion of facilities for the Trenton Police Department.

The present station - house will be renovated, with the local constabulary taking over space on the second floor of the structure presently occupied by the municipal courts.

Police commission chairman, Hubert Campbell, told council November 2 that the local force is "handicapped by a lack of space" and that "it is impossible to maintain morale under the trying conditions."

Accommodation for the provincial court chambers will have to be found elsewhere. The attorney - general's department will be advised of the town's intent and 90 days' notice will be given for the court to vacate the building.

A report on how and the remodelling scheme was to be drafted by town engineer Arthur Gardiner and the police commission chairman for yesterday's meeting but the chairman was not begun to work on the matter.

Pinnacle St. Crosswalks Proposed

With city council approval, official pedestrian crossovers could make their appearance in Belleville some time next spring.

Following a special report by Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie, members of the city council traffic and light committee yesterday recommended that two pedestrian crossovers be established — one at Pinnacle and Market Street, and the other at Pinnacle and Campbell Street.

Official pedestrian crossovers are where pedestrians indicate their intention to cross the street and after the signal have the right of way over autos which are required to come to a stop. The city now has only "courtesy" crossovers.

In his report Chief Crosbie reviewed the experience of Metropolitan Toronto and Ottawa where pedestrian accidents have increased since the introduction of crossovers, this despite an increase both in population and in automobile ownership.

Pedestrian crossovers have been in use in Toronto since 1957 and in Ottawa since 1963.

Chief Crosbie noted the advantages of pedestrian crossovers, stating that they provide a reasonable rate system for pedestrians to cross the streets and have been proved at an effective means of reducing or preventing the incidence of traffic accidents.

The crossovers resulted in less delay on the part of both pedestrians and motorists than when pedestrian - actuated traffic signals are used.

Disadvantages of pedestrian crossovers included a reduction in the number of parking spaces available to motorists and the fact that when continuing large numbers of pedestrians are using a crossover, movement of vehicular traffic becomes almost impossible.

In such instances Chief Crosbie said it is necessary for traffic policeman to man the crossovers to assure a fair flow apportionment for motor vehicles.

Education of both pedestrians and motorists on the use of the crossovers was necessary for success, the chief emphasized.

Chief Crosbie said that in his opinion any installation of a pedestrian crossover on Front Street between Dundas Street and the Upper Bridge would greatly impair the movement of traffic on that street.

Pedestrians could be expected to cross Front Street in such numbers during shopping hours that they would unduly interfere with the free and reasonable movement of motor traffic.

The only satisfactory crossing device for use on Front Street would be traffic control signals which would be integrated in the proposed signal system to be installed in the downtown area.

Installation cost for pedestrian crossovers is approximately $1,500 each including the necessary signs and lighting.

Chief Crosbie said that because of weather conditions it was too late to install crossovers this year. Marking paint would not stick to the pavement, he said.

Slot Machines Spark Trenton Council Debate

TRENTON (Staff) — A recent speech by Vernon Nutley chairman of the town recreation committee, sparked a heated debate between Mayor Duncan McDonald and councillor Stan Ketcheson at council last night.

Mr. Nutley told Kiwanians Nov. 12 that the recreation committee, now amalgamated with the Community Gardens Board, has received much criticism.

He added that rumors had been started by elected members of the municipal government to be used as a platform for the pending election on Dec. 7.

Mayor McDonald brought the speech issue before Monday's council session admitting that he was the civic officer referred to by Mr. Nutley.

The mayor, however, differed with Chairman Nutley's remarks, adding that he was not trying to control the recreation committee as Mr. Nutley contends.

There is a rumor that the canteen in the Community Gardens is not being operated properly, Kiwanians were told.

Decision of the Gardens' board to place vending machines on the premises was the basis of this. Mayor McDonald told council that he had questioned Mr. Nutley on the matter.

Councillor Ketcheson took immediate exception to the way Mr. Nutley had been questioned. Chairman Nutley had told him that the mayor had stopped him in a "storeway" and had used "strong words".

He suggested that the place of such discussions were "in a boardroom at the Community Gardens or in an office but not on the street".

"If you are not satisfied with the board or the way the board is operating, I would imagine that they would be very happy to resign tomorrow," Councillor Ketcheson said.

"At no time during my conversation with Mr. Nutley did I indicate any criticism of the board members," the mayor replied.

"The only thing I questioned, and I think that as mayor I have the right to, was the installation of vending machines in the Community Gardens that I felt would take from the profits of the canteen," he added.

Councillor Ketcheson contended that these machines were a service for those using the Gardens in early morning hours, when the canteen is not open. The mayor, however, suggested that the machines may deprive the canteen of revenue at other times.

Owner of the vending machines, Councillor Paul Tripp, said that, if the machines are not popular they can be removed immediately.

Warenskjold Concert Called 'Sheer Delight'

By EUGENE LANG

The thirty - seventh season of the local Community Concert Association was heralded in last evening at BCI auditorium before a large audience present to witness the Belleville debut of Dorothy Warenskjold's Musical Theatre.

This group of eight young singers headed by Miss Warenskjold presented a show commencing its second North American tour which certainly promises to be a complete success if the local reaction is any measure of their acceptance.

The program was made up of two major items, neither of which requires detailed comment or individual analyzing such as we are wont to do in the majority of presentations given here over the past decades.

Gounod's ever popular Faust was condensed in scope to a forty - five minute concert capsule of the original score, here using the barest of props for visual additives. Thirteen of the saliest excerpts were handled by all singers, either in solo or concerted selection with the freshness of approach and spontaneity of style.

In all of the group numbers the voices blended colorfully from resonant bass to splendid coloratura, and Mayor Dorothy's solo areas the vocalists shone out in their respective roles in which we could say aptly was matched by delivery.

Following intermission, the entire second half of the program was given over to Minstrel to Musical. Here was a three - part kaleidoscope of stage music from the days of the legendary minstrels through the comical capers of Gilbert and Sullivan, the enchanting lilt of Johann Strauss, to modern age as make believe operetta and concluding with the enthralling songs of great musicals of the near and distant past.

Miss Warenskjold and her Dan Tucker days of 1843 right through to the year of 1966 when My Fair Lady splashed forth to conquer the footlights.

Gathered into one sentence we can only say that this second hour was a sheer delight from start to finish. All the singers were resplendent in their many selections with vocal artistry of high attainment shown by all. Again, a minimum of praise is given but the result required was easily reached as witness the applause of the hearers.

Special mention must be made of the fine piano backings by Raymond McPeters, with black and white subtlety enhanced the silver and gold of voices. The 70 opener must be summed up simply as lovely enjoyable.

The artists of the evening and members of the executive of the association were entertained after the concert at the home of Dr. and Mrs. K. M. Douglas, 4 Mount Pleasant Road.

Stop Dumping, Trenton Told

TRENTON (Staff) — The Town must put an end to its bayside garbage dump operation, council was told Monday night.

Communication was received from the Department of Energy and Resources that such "disposal must be discontinued at the earliest possible date".

March 1, 1971 has been set by the department as the deadline for finding an alternate site.

The procedure used - here of filling in diked lagoons on the shores of the Bay of Quinte poses a pollution threat, the department contends.

A provisional licence for continuing the so-called sanitary landfill scheme here is possible.

Mayor Duncan McDonald said in council that "if we can continue in the present area, it would make a beautiful park".

"Properly diking" the lagoon might be an answer, Councillor Paul Tripp suggested.

However, Arthur Campbell, the town engineer said that this could become very costly if the corporation was required to construct them out of clay rather than "materials that we want to get rid of anyway".

He favored the "possibility of combining with another municipality" in founding a new garbage dump. Even if provisional licensing could be obtained for the sanitary landfill, Mr. Campbell said that the Department would "watch it closely" under the terms of the recently ratified Water Management Act.

Heroes Still

It was the stuff of legend that brought out the youngsters in particular to see Maurice (Rocket) Richard and other former NHL greats play in Belleville last week. "You don't really expect them to remember the things you've done after 11 years away from the game . . . I guess it must be from books and such that they recognize you," said Richard.

Well, it just goes to prove that Canada still has its heroes among the sports figures of past and present. We could mention also the countless veterans of war and unsung pensioners and citizens who make this country what it is.

It is good to know the youngsters still have people they can look up to, in an era when adult authority has been undermined and young people increasingly are doing their own thing — to the detriment of themselves and society at large. Maybe it is just that we do not hear enough about those youngsters whose heads and hearts are in the right place, who have sound minds and healthy bodies, and who still derive inspiration from the parental and adult world.

Disaster in Pakistan

We could cast compassion aside and observe that the huge death roll in the tidal wave at the mouth of the Ganges is one of those catastrophes which help keep population down when present trends are said to be approaching crisis proportions.

There is that aspect of it then, but what can we make of the fatalistic attitude of the Pakistani population who have suffered and died through a disaster which is only the latest of many to have struck the region virtually every year with enormous loss of life?

Life is more precious and the forces of death more relentless in some parts of the world than they are in our own relatively favored land. This stricken corner of Asia is one of them.

LCBO Chief

Military men are nothing if not versatile and it would take this quality plus unlimited power and strategy to justify some of the more ludicrous aspects of the liquor laws — and they are many.

Maj.-Gen. George Kitching who before his retirement in 1965 was in charge of Central Command and currently is a director of the Duke of Edinburgh's award program will fill the bread-winning role of becomes chief commissioner of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario. Quite a change from a military command which included, ironically, all of Ontario, and from posts as Canadian attache in Washington, London and Paris and vice-chief of the general staff.

Perhaps things will be relaxed a bit under Gen. Kitching, for his comments to-date give a hint of some such development. "Give me three months," he has said, as well as this gem: "People are so damned different than the people who put in the laws." Indeed!

Quebec Fiasco

The latest news from Quebec is disquieting. The suggestion in the Cross-Laporte kidnappings apparently got away from some of the nosos of police after they had arrested suspect Bernard Lortie, taking with them weapons left by officers when they went out to have lunch. The provincial government has ordered an inquiry into the matter, but meantime the police investigation of the kidnappings remains stalled and concern is being expressed once again about the fate of the still missing British trade commissioner James Cross. It is a sad and unsatisfactory situation.

November Sights

So it is a little colder and the first snow is carpeting the earth. It has been longer in coming though this year and on Saturday, before this chill visitation, some hardy sprite was sailing the Bay of Quinte in his yacht. The water was grey but there was this white stuff in the distance on the Trenton side of the Bay Bridge. There is another strange sight in Belleville these November days — a tree in an east end garden, still in almost full leaf, and which we learn remains that way until Christmas every year, while neighboring ones are all bare.

Rise of Revolutionary Cult

Universities, Government and Bureaucracy Share Blame

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — You might call him a "hard-hat," the currently fashionable put-down of all those who dissent from the creed of protest, often with vigilance, of the New Left, but admit it you must: William H. Kelly knows his business.

And his business is fighting crime.

Crime of both the old-fashioned kind practised in the underworld, and the new - style brand pin-pointed by Justice Minister John Turner in terms of international conspiracy of revolutionary group violence.

W. H. Kelly had to be pretty good in his line of business since he was successful enough to become Deputy Commissioner of the RCMP, recently retired as director of its Security and Intelligence Division.

In retirement, as an increasing number of successful men seem to be doing, former Commissioner Kelly is still in the crime - fighting business.

He pursues his life's work in several different fields, at the University of Ottawa's Centre of Criminology, as a consultant, and as a speaker on such notionally distinguished platforms as that of the Canadian Club.

He was up the other day on that very platform here in Ottawa, talking to an audience of political leaders and plain politicians, businessmen, commercial and industrial executive, diplomats and judges: a fikus ribbon audience if there ever was one.

You may have caught a clip of it on television or scanned a few paragraphs on The Canadian Press.

What von former Commissioner Kelly his greatest rounds of applause in his speech — which, in essence was a battle plan against subversion and terror — were his three main points.

The retired Commander - in - Chief of RCMP Security and Intelligence, speaking as what has to be conceded the voice of experience, said the rising tide of urban guerrilla revolutionary terror was due to leaks in three of society's cities: the universities, Parliament and the legislatures, and the bureaucracy.

First, as the situation on it is not yet all that serious, there is the campus.

University administrations, he said, without qualification are too soft, too tolerant of permissism, even knuckling under to faculty members who preach FLQ-type revolution.

He calls for a campus housecleaning of faculty and students alike.

And at this point it may be suggested — with more to come later — that here is what police authorities have called "a link" between the rising level of campus violence and a reported confidential meeting seven years ago between some university leaders, chiefs of the RCMP and Prime Minister Lester Pearson at which the Security and Intelligence Division was ordered to remain clear of the academic community except in specific cases of investigating applicants for "sensitive" federal Government appointments.

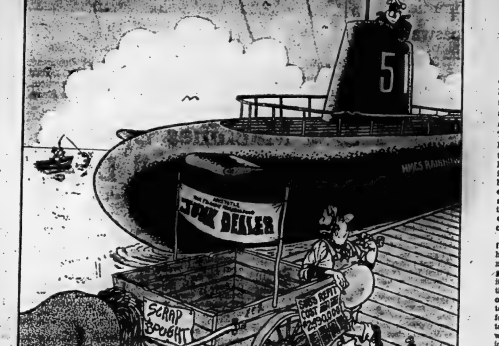
Second, Parliament, and the legislatures.

Year after year they have been changing the ground-rules of crime-fighting.

It has become increasingly difficult for the police, and correspondingly easier for the criminal, individually and collectively, to find the controlling hand.

Case in point: abolition of the death penalty. What is far as the ultimate penalty was concerned, did it matter to the kidnappers of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte whether he lived or died?

Third, the bureaucracy.



More and more, the bureaucrats, exercising what they like to call executive discretion, have been interpreting with ever-increasing permissiveness the enactments of Parliament.

Former Security Chief Kelly cited the Immigration Department and the whole range of agencies at the border and ports of entry with being large enough for such revolutionaries as Danny the Red, Gerry Rubin, Black Panthers, campus bomb suspects and other undesirables to slip through and remain, often at the taxpayers' expense to such pads as Toronto's Rochdale, conveniently at home as "visitors."

Finally, case in point: convicted FLQ terrorist Robert Mayson, sentenced just the other day in Montreal to 25 years in prison on 28 charges, 13 of them armed robbery. He pleaded guilty — claiming he had used his gun to "raise funds" to stick ups for the FLQ.

He had been convicted only five years previously, and sentenced to eight years in prison as a convicted FLQ leader who raided federal armories for guns and ammo. But after only three years he was paroled.

Parliament, various MPs long have insisted, did not mean his immigration regulations nor his prison guidelines to be applied with such bureaucratic latitude. But so far, in the context of events, there has not been time for the Cabinet Ministers with the particular responsibility to do much about it.

Histrionics in Quebec Court

Quebec Le Soleil: After the incredible and tragic scenes that occurred at the arraignment of Lemieux, Chartrand and company in Montreal, nobody can insinuate that freedom of speech in Quebec is restricted in any way.

Following the example of American judicial theatre, a Quebec court of justice was transformed into a political platform by a handful of worked-up activists who, under the tolerant eye of a judge, resorted to worse verbal violence than they could have used on any public platform a year ago. . . .

These individuals turned the court into a platform for hateful and extremist propaganda dragging in the mud the democratic principles which most people would like to preserve for their own comfort but find it fashionable to ridicule so as not to be accused of being reactionary, conservative or old-fashioned. . . .

We cannot claim the right to be free if we concede in advance that a legitimately constituted government can be overthrown by other than democratic means.

Governments and institutions are known to have many faults and weaknesses, but we still have enough legal ways of attacking them, abusing them and bringing them down.

The day, when a court lets complacently to any kind of insults, one might think that the opposite is not only possible, but dangerously probable.

Downtown Ban on Cars Could Backfire Says Urban Traffic Expert

Regina Leader - Post

There has been some pressure on local governments in Canada and the United States to pass legislation which would curb the use of automobiles in city centres.

This "ban the automobile" campaign has been criticized recently by Peter G. Kolinow, a recognized authority in the United States on urban transportation.

Kolinow warned that proposals to close off sections of downtown streets to motor vehicles can backfire and interfere drastically with the economy of a community. He cited as an example a recent experiment in New York where a length of Fifth Avenue was temporarily blocked off and people were able to walk up the middle of the street free of exhaust fumes, noise and squealing tires. Yet business in that area suffered.

He pointed out that merely blocking off specific streets or streets is not the same as the creation of pedestrian malls. In most cases, he said, these [illegible] circuits eliminate because their bad special conditions of access and all are within easy reach of parking areas and bus lines.

Banning automobiles from downtown areas without careful consideration of how people are to get downtown would only harm city centre areas economically and drive shoppers and others out to suburban store areas.

Kolinow said closing streets to traffic would reduce the competitive position of businesses in the downtown areas especially since the real advantage to a downtown location is that the city centre is the point of the urban community most accessible to most people.

Kolinow said those who argued that closing city centre streets to automobiles would encourage the use of public buses are mistaken. This just would not happen. Instead, there would be a shift in versus by the automobile-using shopper who would simply go to other shopping areas with better facilities.

A sounder approach to urban problems than any out-of-hand "ban the auto" scheme is to plan more wisely for its use, the scientific expert said.

Perhaps study should be made of the possibility of creating large parking sites close to a downtown core in areas where empty premises are the most numerous. In most cities, these areas are within easy walking distance of the core. Without parking facilities, outlying shopping centres would be no better off than many city cores.

Press Is Under Fire

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste: The press is going through some extremely difficult times, being the target of a group of influential politicians and also criticized by the silent majority.

That it should be the target of politicians is nothing to get excited about, for journalists and politics have never got along well together. . . .

But it is more difficult to understand the position of the silent majority, because that majority pays for the press, being voiceless and paralyzed in its action if it accepts the idea that the press should be harassed and enslaved by political power.

The misfortune of our era, the fears and insecurity, can be attributed in large measure to the fact that peoples, in critical times, have been kept in ignorance of events by their own leaders.

Man Must Reaffirm Things of the Spirit

Peter Swann, Director of the Royal Ontario Museum in The Globe and Mail

. . . perhaps it is time governments, instead of paying little more than lip service to the creative spirit, began to stimulate and satisfy the constructive aspirations of man. This includes a wide range of human activities — from the theatre to amateur sport, from libraries to education. Any civilizing aspect of society should be encouraged and not be forced to attract support from seemingly unwilling authorities. Public demand is very evident, in use, participate and contribute.

Such activities are a reaffirmation of the value of the human spirit. People go in their millions to museums and art galleries. One wonders why. Is it because the things they see there are real and not phony or trivial? Are they so disconcerted with the present and fearful of the future that they turn to the past? Is a modern work of art an assertion of an independent mind unwilling to succumb to conformity? The finest creations of the past give assurance that whatever man's future may be, at least over the last 3,000 years he has produced objects of eternal value.

Perhaps this frustration of the creative urge is what the unrest of the best of our young people is all about. Yet the cost to encourage creativity is relatively minute.

We have tried everything and without much success. All the components of a vigorous and imaginative, creative life are there, a massive reaffirmation of the true end of man — which is man — might reconcile society to the grinding dehumanization of the materialist way of life in which we are trapped.

Many countries now have Ministers of Cultural Affairs. Britain has a Ministry of Arts. Canada could be the first country to have a Ministry of the Creative Spirit! Ontario might lead the way. Even the name has would inspire hope! Sounds far-fetched doesn't it?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Nov. 17, 1970 . . .

Vancouver Island, Hudson's Bay Co.'s last territorial possession on the Pacific was amalgamated with the British government colony of British Columbia 104 years ago today—in 1866 —leaving Rupert's Land still ruled outright by the company. The island had its own government since 1850, although only a few hundred white residents lived there and the legislature spent nothing on roads and bridges. There was opposition to uniting Vancouver Island and British Columbia because both were in debt, but the prospects of joining the Canadian confederation provided the necessary spur.

1838—The United Nations General Assembly denounced South African apartheid.

1942—Allied paratroopers landed in Axis-held Tunisia.

1939—A trade agreement was signed in Washington between Canada and the United States.

1914—The German cruiser Yorck was sunk by a mine off the Jade River, Germany.

1861—Ignace Paderewski gave his first concert in the United States at Carnegie Hall.

1800—United States Congress met for the first time in the Capitol.

1776—Cornwallis attacked Fort Lee, N.J.

1358—Bloody Mary died and was succeeded by Queen Elizabeth I.

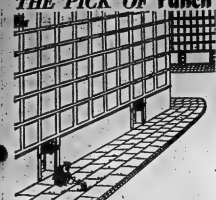
Unborn Children

Editor, The Intelligencer,

I am writing on behalf of all the innocent unborn children whose mothers have been murdered before they are born.

Where are the maternal instincts in these mothers?



I think the Government should not allow any more permissive legislation to be passed on abortions.

Liberals Win Two Federal Byelections, PCs One

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The youth vote appeared to have little effect on the outcome of three federal byelections Monday as the Liberals improved their standing in the Commons by one seat.

Leopold Corriveau took the Quebec riding of Frontenac from the Creditistes for the Liberals while Maurice Dupras held Labelle for the Liberals and Jack Marita retained the Manitoba riding of Lisgar for the Progressive Conservatives.

The Liberals now have 154 Commons seats to 78 for the Conservatives, 23 for the NDP and 13 for the Creditistes. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux sits as independent member for Stormont-Dundas and brings the Commons total to 264 seats.

It was the first time 18- to 20-year-olds could vote federally and they boosted the number of eligible voters in each riding—15 per cent to 20,000 in Frontenac, 14 per cent to 47,000 in Labelle and seven per cent to 34,000 in Lisgar.

Despite this the total vote in all three ridings fell from returns in the 1968 general election.

In Frontenac the total vote fell to 23,531 from 26,992, in Labelle to 29,281 from 29,901 and in Lisgar to 19,316 from 22,697.

It is the first time the House has been full since Ed Schreyer resigned his NDP seat to lead the party to power in Manitoba in June, 1969.

The byelections also were significant in that they were fought on local issues, without reference to the critical situation that exists in Quebec since the kidnapping last month of James Cross, British trade commissioner in Montreal, and Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte.

Observers in Ottawa anticipated the Lisgar and Labelle results, but thought the Creditistes might hold Frontenac made vacant by the resignation of Bernard Dumont to run successfully in the last Quebec provincial election.

Mr. Dumont had won the seat with 12,298 votes compared with 9,963 for the Liberals, 3,516 for the Conservatives and 1,321 for the NDP.

But Monday Mr. Corriveau won handily with 13,585 votes compared with 7,697 for Creditiste candidate Michel Champagne and 2,249 for Conservative Victor Paul.

In Labelle, Mr. Dupras outdrew both his opponents together with 2,642 votes compared with 1,672 for Conservative Paul Gelinas and 1,446 for Creditiste Andre Ouellette.

In 1968 Mr. Dumont, defence minister Leo Cadieux won the riding for the Liberals with 15,981 votes compared with 10,182 for the Conservatives, 2,315 for the Creditistes and 1,699 for the NDP.

The seat became vacant when Mr. Cadieux resigned to become Canadian ambassador to Paris.

As in the two Quebec ridings, Mr. Marita won Lisgar by outdistancing all his rivals combined.

He said his 11,189 votes should "put most any doubts" that the previous big margins for George Muir were the result of his personal popularity rather than the appeal of Conservative policies.

The seat became vacant in August with the death of Mr. Muir, who held the seat for 13 years.

Monday Ken Hammond drew 4,189 votes for the Liberals while Gary Ryan got 1,818 for the NDP and John Harms 1,545 for the Social Credit. Independent George Elias gained 371 votes.

In 1968, Mr. Muir won with 12,381 votes compared with 7,895 for the Liberals, 1,386 for the Social Credit, 1,180 for the NDP and 663 for Mr. Elias.

Public Order Bill Debated

NDP and Conservatives Fail to Defeat Retroactive Clause

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons continues debate today on the government's proposed public order bill, having rejected Monday an NDP amendment that would have limited what New Democrat and Conservative spokesmen called an unjust retroactive clause.

The Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, would replace regulations invoked under the War Measures Act; slightly broaden the government's powers of arrest and detention under the regulations.

The contested clause states that evidence that a person attended a number of meetings of the Front de Liberation du Quebec, or spoke in support of the FLQ or communicated statements on its behalf, even before the bill goes into force, "is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, proof that he is a member of the unlawful association."

The NDP amendment would have limited the prosecution to evidence of participation in the FLQ after Oct. 16, the day the War Measures Act was invoked and many alleged FLQ members were jailed.

The amendment was defeated 51-29, with New Democrats, Conservatives, Creditistes and one Liberal lining up against the Liberal majority. The Liberal dissident was Pierre de Bane (Malane).

Supporters of the amendment stressed two points: that the clause was unjustly retroactive, making a person a criminal for committing acts at a time when those acts were not illegal; and that the charge placed an unfair onus on the accused to prove his innocence.

Justice Minister John Turner said the clause simply means that evidence of actions committed in the past could be used to show that a person was at present a supporter of the FLQ and therefore liable to imprisonment.

He said the onus is still on the Crown to show beyond reasonable doubt that the person is guilty, despite the "presumptive evidence" of past actions.

NDP Deputy Leader David Lewis, who moved the amendment, called the retroactive aspect of the bill "entirely unacceptable and contrary to the basic principle of our criminal law, indeed most of our law, and contrary to any principle of civil liberties and civil rights."

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) agreed that the bill would force a person to prove his innocence, and added that the problem is not that we regret stronger law."

"What we need today is to clean up the mess as far as the police force of the province of Quebec is concerned," Mr. Woolliams said.

Referring to reports that police, when arresting Bernard Lortie Nov. 6, left weapons in an apartment which were later stolen by three other FLQ fugitives, the Calgary lawyer suggested the Quebec police had been infiltrated.

The charge that weapons had been left by police was denied Monday by Quebec authorities.

Earlier in the Commons Prime Minister Trudeau rejected opposition suggestions that an independent commission be set up to investigate police effectiveness under the War Measures Act.

Solicitor-general George McIlraith, replying to a question from Mr. Woolliams, said it would be inappropriate for the federal government to investigate the administration of justice, which is a provincial responsibility under the constitution.

In the debate on the public order bill, the Commons also rejected an amendment by John Gilbert (NDP—Broadview) that would give a judge, rather than the provincial attorney-general, power to decide whether suspects should be released on bail.

Mr. Turner argued that FLQ members released on bail could flee the country, intimidate through existing extradition agreements.

These extradition treaties would not cover crimes created by the bill, Mr. Turner said.

Another rejected amendment by Mr. Gilbert would have reduced to 30 days from 90 the time a person could be held without a trial date being set.

Police Probe New Note Sent to CKAC by FLQ

MONTREAL (CP) — Police are investigating today the authenticity and contents of another note purported to be from the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

The note, received Monday by French-language radio station CKAC, was immediately turned over to police. A CKAC spokesman declined comment on the contents of the note and said it was not broadcast by the station.

A police spokesman said that the note, signed by the Louis Riel cell, was being examined by technical experts. He did not divulge the contents.

Meanwhile, a provincial police statement said there was no negligence on the part of detectives during the raid in which Bernard Lortie was arrested at the west-end apartment almost two weeks ago.

Reports have claimed that when Lortie was captured three other men—Paul Rose, 27, his brother Jacques, 23, and Francis Simard, 23, hid in the closet.

Director Maurice St. Pierre of the provincial police gave the first confirmation of the secret compartment Monday and added it had been occupied "by the individuals wanted in the Pierre Laporte affair."

He denied a claim made in a note, supposedly from the Viger cell of the FLQ and published in two Montreal papers Sunday, that the Rose brothers and Simard fled the west-end apartment after hiding in the closet for 24 hours. The note said they fled with guns police guards left behind when they went to eat.

Police are still trying to determine the authenticity of that note.

"No firearm was left on the scene by Montreal policemen . . . or by provincial police technicians who went there to gather physical evidence," Mr. St. Pierre said.

In addition, Mr. St. Pierre denied the claim made in the note Sunday that police kicked in the apartment door.

Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said in an interview Monday night he had discussed the handling of the Lortie arrest and said there was no negligence involved.

Mr. Choquette said he is "satisfied with findings of the inquiry." Mr. Choquette said he had gone over the report with Mr. St. Pierre and felt the matter had been "vastly overplayed" by the press.

Senate Postpones Ryerson Decision

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate postponed a decision Monday on whether to investigate proposed sale of Ryerson Press to a U.S. firm despite one senator's plea that delay would put the Senate in a bad light.

Ryerson, the United Church publishing house, raised a storm of controversy when it announced the proposed sale because it handles most school textbooks in Canada. Purchaser would be McGraw-Hill of Canada, a firm controlled in the United States.

Senator Hazen Argue (L—Saskatchewan) moved Monday that the Senate committee on banking, trade and commerce investigate the proposed sale. Calling for fast action, he said it would put the Senate "in a bad light if the speeches took so long the sale was made before action could be taken."

Senator Harper Prowse (L—Alberta) strongly supported the motion and brought outrage from Senator Sarto Fournier (PC—Quebec) when he said that a substantial number of French-language textbooks used in Quebec are merely translations of U.S. textbooks prepared for use in U.S. schools.

"It is nonsense that education in my province should come from the United States through Toronto," Senator Fournier said.

"I will write to the education minister of Quebec tomorrow to check into the matter. It is simply nonsense."

Senator John Connolly (L—Ontario) said he was not sure whether the matter was of sufficient national interest to warrant a Senate investigation since it is essentially a private transaction that broke no laws.

Senator Prowse compared the issue with the proposed sale of uranium to foreign interests, which the federal government found of sufficient national importance to act upon.

Lewis Makes Charge

Branches Close Without Notice

TORONTO (CP) — The closing of Ontario branch plants by multi-national corporations continues without due notice to workers although the legislature passed a law five months ago requiring them to do so, says Stephen Lewis, provincial leader of the New Democratic Party.

He said Monday the latest incident is the pending closure of Eaton Automotive Division of Eaton Yale and Towne Canada in London, Ont., which will begin laying off workers Jan. 1 and the closing of its plant next June. The plant employs about 170 workers.

At London, Paul A. Miller of Cleveland, Ohio, Eaton group vice-president, said the closing was due to "economic considerations." He said employees will be given consideration for vacancies at other company plants, including Eaton Springs in Chatham, Ont.

The company, which has had manufacturing facilities in Canada since 1911, employs about 2,300 at Ontario plants in Chatham, Hamilton, London, St. Catharines, Toronto, Scarborough, Wallaceburg and Woodstock.

Mr. Miller said the London shutdown should not be taken as an indication other Canadian facilities owned by the firm would follow suit.

Mr. Lewis said: "The total notice will have been six weeks . . . yet back in June Dalton Bales, minister of labor, introduced Bill 96 . . . to provide, by law, due notice of termination of employment."

The bill, still awaiting proclamation until its regulations have been prepared, requires notice of closing to employees for time periods based on the size of the plant.

U.S. Protection Irks Benson

VANCOUVER (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson said today he is not overly concerned about what he called the emerging threat of protectionist policies in the United States.

In an address to Vancouver Quadra Liberals, he said tariff proposals now before the U.S. Congress are not all that bad, but that some are "mere protectionism" such as measures to limit imports of clothing and footwear.

"Like many outside the U.S.," he said, "I do not see the need for such a belligerent attack on imports into the U.S. of these products."

He noted there has been a significant growth in the export of garments from Canada to the U.S. While Canada couldn't compete with the larger nations in fields where economies of large scale production are gained, it could compete in design and quality of productions —as in textiles.

Mr. Benson rejected protectionism for Canada and suggested the same policy should be embraced by the U.S.

Caroline Kennedy Soon to Enter Her Teens

NEW YORK (AP) — Caroline Kennedy, soon to be a teenager around the White House in Washington in her mother's high heels when she was a little girl, has her own grown-up shoes and ideas now as she prepares to enter her teens.

She doesn't like the midi, has stopped her piano lessons, says she doesn't want to be a debutante or go to dancing school, and thinks boys are, in a word, "ugh."

"I don't think of myself as famous," she said recently while lunching with a girlfriend at a mid-Manhattan restaurant.

"I'm not really bothered by too many reporters or photographers. It seems they're always around when I'm with my mother. I just don't think of what it's like when I'm older.

She was nonchalant and completely at ease—and very pretty—as she spoke, staring at the reporter with a direct, steady gaze from wide, cornflower blue eyes.

Caroline Kennedy will be 13 years old Nov. 27 and is much changed from the solemn child who held her mother's hand and watched the cortege go by on that November day when her assassinated father, President John F. Kennedy, was buried in 1963.

Those adults who know Caroline say she has grown into a charming young lady, extremely bright and sensitive.

Others describe her as an introverted, restrained and sensitive girl. They feel that the deaths of her father and her uncle, Senator Robert F. Kennedy, left her with a permanent sadness and reserve.

Her schoolmates say she is lots of fun, shy but nice, and someone who doesn't ask for special favors.

Caroline smiles often as she speaks in a low, sitting voice. As she sat at the restaurant counter, sipping a soft drink (she had eaten only half of her cheeseburger), she exchanged quick glances with her girlfriend and then laughed and teased each other.

It was an impromptu interview but Caroline replied to questions thoughtfully.

"Greece is very beautiful," she said. "I can't say which place I like better, Hyannis (Mass.) or Greece. They're very different."

Greece for Caroline is that island of Skorpios, owned by her stepfather, Aristotle Onassis. Caroline spends most of the summer there with her parents.

Caroline's face lights up when she talks about animals. Her Fifth Avenue apartment in New York houses two dogs, guinea pigs, finches, and a garter snake.

"The snake is black and yellow and I can hold it in my hand," she said.

But what she loves most of all are horses and fox hunting.

"I guess if I could pick what I wanted to do on a free day, it would be what I really do on weekends—ride and go fox hunting," she said.

Asked what she would like to be later on, Caroline smiled, showing even white teeth that still wear a retainer.

"I don't know," she said after a pause, "I haven't thought about it too much. Yes, I've thought about the Peace Corps, but I don't know if it will still be going by the time I could join."

Caroline is enrolled at a private school on New York's Upper East Side, several crosstown blocks from her apartment. Sometimes she takes the bus, but usually she is accompanied by a girlfriend and, always, her secret service agents.

Onassis often works late in the office and is frequently away on lengthy business trips and some friends feel that Caroline has a solid relationship with the secret service men who have been with her since she was a tot.

Speaking of one of the secret service men, a family friend said: "He seems to be the father image she needs. He does so many things for her like take her to the tennis courts and get those things for her that she needs. I think she is very close to him."

But the person who has the most influence in Caroline's life is undoubtedly her mother, Mrs. Onassis has made it a point to be with the time I could join."

Caroline and son John as much as possible, and the three of them ride together, play tennis and bicycle together.

Those who know the family well feel that mother and daughter have an extraordinary warm and deep relationship.

J.G. Demeza To Address Women's Club

This Thursday, the Canadian Federation of University Women of Belleville and District will have as their guest speaker, Dr. J. G. Demeza of the Ontario School for the Deaf. He will address the club on the development of Education at the Ontario School for the Deaf during the last 100 years. The meeting will take place at the teacher education centre of the school.

Dr. Demeza received his B.A. from Queen's and his B. Paed. from Toronto. He has been at the Ontario chool for the Deaf since 1958 where he was the assistant superintendent; in 1963 he became superintendent. He was presented with a doctor of Letters in 1967 from Gallaudet College for the Deaf, Washington, D.C.

During education week this year he was presented the Sir Mackenzie Bowell award for meritorious service in education in Hastings County.

'Make Music and Share It,' Advice of Pianist

LONDON (CP) — "Make music and share it" is the philosophy of Julie Holzman, a young Canadian pianist. In her recent appearances in London she did just that and brought a warm response from her audiences.

"I have a love affair with my audience," she said. "I want to move them as they're a little different by the time they leave."

Her concern for the people she plays for is a reflection of this woman's deep involvement to human relationship which, she believes, is an important to her as music.

Julie, whose parents are of Polish origin, was born in Montreal. She inherited a musical ear from her mother and a good stage sense from her father, a ladies' hairmaker.

Julie's early childhood was spent "on stage doing one thing or another," she recalled.

Surprisingly, she didn't take up the piano until she was 10 years old. But by the age of 14 she was giving lessons to other children and later was accepted at the Provincial Conservatory of Music and Dramatic Art in Montreal to read music.

Graduating six years later with first prize in piano and chamber music and three medal in solfege, she made her debut as a concert pianist with the Montreal Symphony Orchestra, playing Mozart's C minor concerto.

Miss Holzman later went to New York on a Canada Council grant to continue her studies. She received two years later a post-graduate diploma from the Juilliard School of Music.

Now in her late 20s, she lives in New York, working as a performer and teacher. She has already extensively toured the United States and Canada but apart from a radio recital last year her recent appearances in London were her first taste of the British concert circuit.

Critics admired her playing if not, at times, her choice of pieces. As the Queen Elizabeth Hall she performed a concerto by Franz Xavier Mozart's son. One critic found Xavier's musical talents "pretty feeble" and the music "lifeless," but thought Miss Holzman "made what she could of it, playing prettily and fluently."

Asked in an interview why she had chosen this obscure piece, only recently discovered by a musicologist, associate of hers, she replied: "Everything I play in concert I like. I can't understand why the critics found Franz Xavier lifeless. To me, the piece has charm, wit and freshness."

At her final concert in the Wigmore Hall, Miss Holzman wrapped her wide range of musical taste. Her versatility is she feels, an important facet in her musical judgment. In this performance for piano soloist, she opened with two light pieces by Mozart and Schubert, followed by Beethoven's Sonata in E major, Opus 109, which, according to one critic, "showed us where her gifts lay."

In the second half of the concert, Miss Holzman performed Schumann's David-bundlertanze, Opus 6, a long piece incorporating 18 characteristic dances. She said she felt "very much at home" handling the varying tempos and atmospheres demanded by the music, which jumps from joyous, lively phases into deep, sorrowful moods, returning to a wild, lusty climax towards the end.

Julie finds that there is "a sense of fun" attached to being a concert pianist. She overcomes pre-performance nerves by putting herself in the mood of the first piece she is to play.

"I'm already playing it before I go out there," she explained.

But one problem she finds as a concert pianist is the restrictions she has to impose on her social life.

"At home, she has little time to herself after rehearsals and teaching periods and has to "make time to go out and have fun."

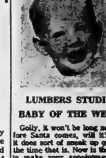
One of her favorite pastimes, apart from a keen interest in ballet and painting, is riding her bicycle-for-two around New York's Central Park. She wouldn't, however, disclose the name of her companion.

After England she flew to Paris to start her European tour. In Brussels she played in a radio concert devoted to Canadian composers of this century. Her recital included the music of Alexander Brott, Francois Morel and Robert Fleming.

She'll be back in London next year.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON



Mother: "Jerry, why are you so clumsy? I swear you kick over everything in the house. All you have to do is pick up your feet when you walk. You teen-agers shuffle around like a bunch of old men."

Young teen-agers cannot really help their awkwardness, and they often are confused and disturbed about it. This is a time for understanding and patience, not for criticism and exasperation on the part of parents.

Mother: "You feel clumsy and awkward because you've grown so fast this year and probably have lost some of your muscular control. This is only temporary, you know, and by next year, you should feel co-ordinated again."

Goby, it won't be long now before Mr. Bennett comes, will it? Yes, it does sort of sneak up on you, the time that is. Now is the time to make your appointment for those Christmas portraits. Color portraits cannot be promised for Christmas after Dec. 1st. A phone now at 962-3864 for your appointment.

Mothers Show 'Em

CENTERACH, N.Y. (AP) — Mothers took to the street and played softball here recently to demonstrate the need for recreational areas for their children. They were protesting, too, against the cool reception that street games had received from some of the neighbors. "All we really want is some place for the children to play," explained Mrs. Carolyn Ferraro.

Author Speaks To Guild

There was a good attendance of members at the November meeting of Albert College Guild in the Old Manor, recently.

After conducting a short business session, the president, Mrs. E. Fleming turned the meeting over to the program convener Mrs. H. McCabe.

The theme for the meditation period was "Stewardship" and Mrs. McCabe enumerated some of the great benefits enjoyed in this land. She reminded the members of their responsibility as stewards at this time when pollution is presenting such a serious problem.

Mrs. C. W. Smith introduced the speaker Nicholas Mika, who came to Belleville from the Ukraine in 1948. His business is silk screening industries printing for which he received his training in Warsaw, Poland. He has become well known in the area as the author of many books on Canada. The first of these was the popular "Mosaic of Belleville".

Opening his talk, informally, he posed a question in Canadian geography and offered a copy of his "Mosaic of Canada on Postage Stamps' as a prize to the person with the correct answer. Mrs. W. Pinkle was the prize with the answer, "Champlain".

He expressed the opinion that he finds it difficult to listen to a speaker who confines himself to a written address. He then proceeded with an address on "Human Relationships" that was a perfect, easy listening.

Referring to one work, manship, Mr. Mika asked, "What do you do to make a person feel special for you?" People wish to be recognized to be favorably known, to be important to someone. "How can I make myself important", is a good question.

Mrs. McCabe expressed thanks to the speaker, and presented him with a social hour. Mrs. W. H. Pinkle and Mrs. Fleming presided at the tea table where the table centre caught everyone's attention — a beautiful amaryllis lily, grown by L. Hodgins, a member of the college staff.

Not Necessary for Makeup To Match Wearing Apparel

TORONTO (CP) — Your makeup doesn't have to be in the same color category as your costume, says Carol Phillips, a former editor of Vogue magazine.

"If you're wearing a purple costume, break the old-fashioned rule that says your lipstick should be in the same family shade," she advised. "I wear coral lipstick with purple."

The old color range that said blondes should wear only certain makeup colors is dead also, "I wasn't real," said Miss Phillips.

She also said she believes that wearing the same lipstick and cosmetic colors every day can be boring. And there were times when a woman might be physically low and need a bounce to make her feel better. She should change her cosmetic colors, especially her lipstick. Miss Phillips said —choose something unusual and different.

But a woman doesn't need to take hours doing her face. "Anything I can't do in three minutes, I won't do."

Miss Phillips was in Toronto this fall to introduce a new line of cosmetics.

Miss Phillips, lumped from her Vogue editorial post into a job as vice-president and director of this new firm.

"I got bored doing the same things month after month as managing editor so Vogue put me on special projects and I interviewed top men in scientific fields," she said.

She wrote an article on menopause pills, then met and talked with a Hollywood beauty expert and became convinced that much could be done to help women with skin problems. Then two years ago she joined the newly formed firm called Clinique.

Miss Phillips said women have to know what type of skin they have so as to use the items best suited to them. Clinique uses a question-and-answer board that tabulates the skin type.

All skins fall into four categories, she said. There is the, fair, fine skin, one that is slightly stronger, one that is considerably stronger and ages slowly but is often oily, and lastly an extremely strong skin, the Mediterranean type that cannot be hurt by the sun and is usually moist.

On the basis of a women's answers to such questions as the real color of her hair, the size of pores and so on, her skin type will be determined.

What kind of skin you have and what allergies depend a lot on your grandparents. But Miss Phillips offered a test for suspected cosmetic allergies that any woman can try herself. Daub a bit of, say, eyeliner on the inside of your wrist. Bandage it. Do this for three days. If you've an allergy to that eyeliner you'll have a slight rash.

Many Questions Regarding Vasectomy

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You've printed some letters about the male sterilization operation called vasectomy. I have heard so many contradictory opinions that I am terribly confused. Please check with your medical experts and get the correct answers to the following questions:

Can a vasectomy come undone? Can a man tell for sure that the operation was a success? Can this operation make a man impotent? Is it painful? How long does it take? Is it expensive? Is it illegal? In which states? Once a vasectomy has been performed can anything be done to restore fertility? To what degree is the emasculated after he has had the surgery? How long must he refrain from sexual activity? — MARRIED AND CONFUSED

DEAR M and C: If a vasectomy is done properly the chances for it coming "undone" are one in a million. Every male should return to his doctor six weeks after surgery for a check-up. He should assume that he is fertile until the doctor has told his he is not. Impotence is caused by psychological problems, not organic problems, in over 99 per cent of the cases seen by physicians. A vasectomy will not produce impotency. It might produce an emotional problem which could in turn produce impotence, however. For this reason, candidates for vasectomy should be carefully screened.

The overwhelming majority of men who have had this operation say it is not painful. The entire procedure takes between 15 and 20 minutes. The price can run anywhere from $50 in the doctor's office (where about 50 per cent are performed) to $200. If the operation is done in a hospital it could run $400. If it runs over $250, ask your doctor why. (It is always best to settle on the fee in advance.)

The vasectomy is legal in every state in the union. Once it has been performed it is sometimes possible to restore fertility with a second operation, but the chances are remote. A great deal depends on the surgical technique used to produce the infertility. The incapacitation following the vasectomy is minimal. A man can usually walk out of the doctor's office unaided, drive himself home and return to work the next day. There need be only a few days interruption of sexual activity. And again I repeat, no man should assume the operation was a success until he has been checked six weeks later by his doctor.

The Catholic Church's position on vasectomy is vague. Some Catholic clergymen tell me it is forbidden, others say it is acceptable under special circumstances. It seems at this point to depend on the flexibility of the clergyman in a particular diocese.

I know of one celebrity who has been talking about his vasectomy publicly for several years. He is Arthur Godfrey.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'll come to the point and hope you will, too. My mother-in-law's birthday is coming up soon. I [illegible] and I received [illegible] of the cards read, "You grow sweeter by the year" or, "If only all mothers-in-law were like you." I could never be such a hypocrite as to send that meddlesome old battle-ax a card like that. What do you suggest? — FEDSVILLE.

DEAR FED: It is not likely that you will find a card which expresses your true sentiments — and it's just as well. Skip it.

Fiance's Parents Object to Harboring Girl

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: My son wants o marry a girl four years his senior; a delicate - looking ittle thing, recovering from a breakdown. But I honestly don't think she loves him as he her. He just likes looking after things less strong than himself.

Right now she is in a psychiatric hospital for follow - up treatment. The mother and stepfather (he my son very much and thought it would be more peaceful for the girl to come and live with me after she is well enough to be discharged.

I would rather not. To me it is not correct for her to come here before she is married.

Also, my boy is away a good deal. I am a shift worker and she is afraid of my dog. She shouldn't to my mind be alone at night. — Confused.

Dear Confused: I can't see it at all. Obviously you have grave doubts about whether these two should ever marry; and to take up a responsibility which suggests a close relationship might put everyone in a false position.

The girl's mother is dodging her own responsibility. Your son is over - reacting to her need for help. Give her friendship, but decline the rest of it, for now.

* * *

Dear Doris: My husband's moodiness is terrible and getting worse. He goes for months without speaking.

My family put a telephone in and paid for it for a year. He was like a madman and vowed he would not pay a cent to keep a phone in the home for women to spend all their time talking on.

I am doing a part - time baby - sitting job for three hours, five days a week, and I think he is so jealous of my being able to work at anything that he doesn't know enough to make my life miserable. He threatens to leave for the winter and says I can freeze for all he cares.

I have helped buy our house and put furniture into it. If I decide to leave, have I a right to sell these things? I do nothing to provoke his anger, but there it is. — Ready to Quit.

Dear Ready: Your long letter describes to me an unbalanced man. Perhaps he really is deteriorating mentally. In any case the strain is far too much for you.

You have every right to sell the furniture you have actually paid for, if you decide to leave. But first of all you need good, levelheaded, skilled counselling; and, as soon as possible, a medical examination for your moody husband.

Some Disturbing Facts on Eating Habits

By MARY MOORE

A survey taken in three Home Economics classes uncovered some disturbing facts regarding students' eating habits.

Below, sandwiched between Rules, are some interesting statistics:

1) Milk: Children (up to 13 years): At least 1 pint per day. Adolescents: At least 1¼ pints. Adults: At least ¾ pint.

Survey Result: Practically all students do not get enough milk. Parents do not drink milk thus setting a poor example. Many children, go to school on a cup of tea or coffee.

2) Fruit: One serving of citrus fruit or tomatoes or their juices; and one serving of other fruit.

Survey Result: Many people do have source of Vitamin C. Some drink canned juices that do not provide sufficient or any vVitamin C.

3) At least one serving potatoes; and at least two servings other vegetables, preferably leafy, green or yellow, frequently raw.

Survey Result: Many students do not get enough vegetables; some refuse to eat any. City dwellers do not have sufficient Vitamin A quantity in reserve in their bodies. Even though they eat Vitamin A foods something unknown evidently interferes with absorption.

4) Cereals and Bread: One serving of whole grain cereal and at least four slices of bread and butter.

Survey Result: Very few eat a whole grain cereal ever.

5) Meat and Fish: One serving of meat, fish, poultry or dried beans, eggs and cheese. Use liver frequently.

Survey Result: Most people seem to get sufficient meat, but people do not have the iron reserve that was formerly thought they did. So requirement was raised. Liver and leafy green vegetables are recommended.

6) Eggs and Cheese: At least three times a week each.

Survey Result: A goodly proportion do not have sufficient cheese. Incidentally over 40 different kinds of cheeses are made in Ontario alone yet population as a whole is not familiar with many of them.

7) Vitamin D: At least 400 International Units daily for growing persons and expectant and nursing mothers.

Comment: We do not eat enough foods containing Vitamin D so we should have it in capsule form. Salmon, sardines and milk contain it and it is added to margarine.

How do your food habits rate?

New Training Routine

Foster's Weight Giving Him Confidence

DETROIT (AP) — Bob Foster will weigh the highest of his career when he fights Joe Frazier for the heavyweight championship. But the real scale won't show in the scales.

"It's given him a million pounds of confidence," veteran trainer Bill Gore said of Foster's added weight. "He actually thinks he's going to lip Frazier over."

"I know I'm ready for this," the light heavyweight champion said Monday after completing his training for the scheduled 15-round fight Wednesday night in Coba Arena.

The added weight—Foster is expected to weigh in at about 194—and its accompanying confidence are the results of a different and intense training program, according to Foster. His previous high fighting weight was 177, two pounds over the light-heavy limit.

For the first time in preparing for a fight Foster did calisthenics. He also, according to Gore, is eating properly.

"Before, he showed up at the gym, punched the bag, spit on the floor a couple of times and went home," Gore said of Foster's previous training habits.

Foster finished his gym work by spairing three rounds with Jim Davis.

Frazier, who is expected to weigh 205, concluded his training by sparring three rounds with Molenean Williams.

21st Century Promotions, Inc., is hosting for a turnout of about 10,000, which would mean a live gate of about $300,000, to watch Foster try to become the first light heavyweight king to win the heavyweight title.

The fight also will be the feature half of a closed-circuit television doubleheader. The first half will be a scheduled 10-rounder between heavyweights George Foreman and Bonne Kirkman in New York's Madison Square Garden.

TNT Communications, Inc., will handle the closed circuit television to 110 locations, with a seating capacity of 500,000, in 91 cities in the United States and Canada. The fight also will be beamed via satellite to 26 countries in Europe, Africa, Asia, South America and the South Pacific.

Final Tuneup

Heavyweight champ Joe Frazier throws a left during Monday's final sparring session as he prepares for Wednesday night's World Heavyweight Championship title bout with light heavyweight champ Bob Foster.

Canadiens Reinforced

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens will have right winger Yvan Cournoyer and left winger John Ferguson back in the lineup when the club plays host to California Golden Seals tonight in a National Hockey League game.

Ferguson, who retired from the club Oct. 7 but reversed his decision Friday, joined Cournoyer in weekend skating sessions while the Canadiens were on the road.

Cournoyer suffered a cracked bone in his left foot three weeks ago.

Defenceman Jacques Laperriere remains out of the lineup because of a pinched nerve in his neck.

Russia to Play Pro Rules

NEW YORK (AP) — Russia's national hockey team will play six games against Eastern Hockey League teams in a tour of the United States next month, it was announced today.

Russians have agreed to play with professional rules familiar to EHL teams rather than the amateur rules they usually use.

Goaltending Keeps Blues In Contention in West

MONTREAL (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks, first-place finishers in the East last spring, were supposed to run away from the rest of the clubs in the National Hockey League's West Division this season.

The powerful Hawks were realigned to the West because of NHL expansion which saw Buffalo Sabres and Vancouver Canucks gain entry into the East.

However, the Hawks are getting a good run for the West Division leadership so far this season—from St. Louis Blues. The Blues have 21 points, three fewer than Chicago, and have played two games less.

One reason for the strong St. Louis showing is the fine goaltending of Glenn Hall and Ernie Wakely.

Many observers felt that the veteran Hall would have to bear the brunt of the work carried last season by Plante. However, that has not been the case, as Hall and Wakely have a combined goals-against average of 1.80, allowing only 24 goals in 15 games.

The pair was beaten for only four goals in the Blues last six games, and except for a 7-3 loss at Toronto and a 3-1 loss at Los Angeles against the Kings, have not had more than two goals scored against them in any of the other 12 games.

Because of the work of Hall and, Wakely and the defensive play of the rest of the Blues, the club has lost fewer games—two —than any other team in the league.

Meanwhile, in the individual scoring race centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins continues to lead.

Esposito added three points to his total in three games last week and now has 25, including a league-leading 16 assists.

Tied for second place with 20 points each are Bobby Hull of Chicago, and John McKenzie of Boston.

Winger Wayne Maki of Vancouver, Ken Hodge and defenceman Bobby Orr of Boston, share fourth place with 19 points each, one more than centre Alex Delvecchio of Detroit Red Wings and Jean Beliveau of Montreal Canadiens.

John Bucyk of Boston, tied with three others for ninth place with 16 points, and Montreal's injured right winger, Yvan Cournoyer, share the goal-scoring lead at 10 each.

Goalies Tony Esposito of Chicago and Ed Giacomin of New York Rangers share the lead in shutouts with two each.

Reg Fleming of Buffalo continues to lead in penalty minutes with 75.

Football Odds (Except This Year) Not on 3rd-place Teams

TORONTO (CP) — Normally, the Canadian Football League playoffs are no place for underdogs. It has been 16 years since a second-place team won the Grey Cup.

That won't happen this year either. Instead, there is the record-shattering possibility that a third-place club will go all the way.

The way things stand today, it isn't even a long shot.

Calgary Stampeders, third in the Western Conference, need one more victory in their best-of-three series with Saskatchewan Roughriders to get into the final. Montreal Alouettes, their eastern counterparts, have to protect a 19-point lead in their total-point final against Hamilton Tiger-Cats to join them.

If both are successful, history will have been made a week in advance of the Nov. 28 Grey Cup final. No matter who wins it, No. 3 will be No. 1.

In 1953 Winnipeg Blue Bombers were the only previous third-place club to survive the rigors of an unfavorable playoff schedule and reach the final.

It took them five games to get past Saskatchewan and Edmonton. Eskimos while Hamilton needed only two easy victories over Montreal to gain the eastern berth. Yet the Bombers stayed alive until the last play of the final game.

Trailing 13-6, Winnipeg quarterback Indian Jack Jacobs brought his club to the Hamilton four-yard line. With time for one play, he tossed a perfect pass to halfback Tom Casey, two strides away from the end zone.

Defensive back Lou Kusserow, covering another receiver, hurtled across to hit Casey just as the ball reached him and it popped loose, preserving the Hamilton victory.

In each of the next two years, the Bombers finished third and ousted Saskatchewan in the conference semi-finals but were unable to get past Edmonton in the conference finals.

Third-place clubs won semi-finals in both conferences in 1961, the only time it had happened prior to this season, but neither Calgary Stampeders nor Toronto Argonauts got any further.

For the Argos it was a heartbreaker. Leading Hamilton by 22 points after the first game of their total-point series, they lost by three touchdowns in overtime after failing to kick a forgiveable single from the 35-yard line on the last play of the fourth quarter.

Two years later, Saskatchewan overcame even greater odds to oust Calgary in their WFC semi-final.

Trailing by 28 points after the first game, the Riders scampered through a driving snow storm at Regina's Taylor Field to a 29-13 victory that gave them the round by a single point.

Key factors were the scrambling of quarterback Ron Lancaster, the power running of fullback George Reed and the end sweeps of halfback Ed Buchanan. All three face similar uphill tasks this week, Lancaster and Reed with the Riders and Buchanan with Hamilton.

Ready to Save Riders Again

Specialist Says Saskatchewan Best Ever

REGINA (CP) — Jack Abendschan, whose place-kicking has saved Saskatchewan Roughriders from several tight spots this season, says the Roughriders are determined to prove themselves against Calgary Stampeders.

"I think we have the best team Saskatchewan has ever had," Abendschan, who is preparing along with his teammates for Wednesday night's second game in Calgary of the Western Football Conference playoffs.

Abendschan, WFC scoring champion for the last two seasons, contributed a field goal, a single and a convert Saturday when the Roughriders lost 28-13 to the Stampeders in the first game of the best-of-three final.

"We beat every team in the East," said Abendschan, who admits that the club's 14 wins and two losses in regular-season play, the team's best record, doesn't cut any ice when playoffs start.

The game Wednesday begins at 10 p.m. EST and is to be broadcast nationally by the CBC television network. If a third game is necessary, it will be played in Regina Sunday.

"Kickers are winning more games recently," said Abendschan, who contributed 24 field goals, 36 converts and eight singles to the Roughrider cause in regular-season play this year and also provided some eleventh-hour theatrics.

His finest moment came in Regina's Taylor Field, Sept. 12 when he booted a 47-yard field goal, his third three-pointer of the night, with just three seconds left to play in the game, providing the margin for a 33-32 victory over British Columbia Lions.

Abendschan, six-foot-one, 245-pound offensive guard, kicked another field goal on the last play of the game Sept. 27 in Winnipeg to give the Roughriders a 5-3 win over the Blue Bombers.

Abendschan, however, contributes a lot more than his kicking skill to the Roughriders. "Kicking is a secondary thing with me to my guard playing," he said.

While he has kicked some long field goals, Abendschan says the most pressure is on when the ball is closer to the goal posts.

"You're not expected to miss inside the 20. If I am probably more partial to kicking between the 20 and the 45.

Abendschan's first attempts at field-goal kicking, in high school, were in a game his team won by a 58-0 score. He missed every convert. "It was kind of an inauspicious debut, but my father said to keep at it."

St. Louis Posts Third Shutout For NFL Record

DALLAS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals, supported by an unyielding defense, crushed Dallas Cowboys 38-0 Monday night in a National Football League game and became the first NFL team in 35 years to record three consecutive shutouts.

The fierce Cardinal defense smothered Dallas' once fiery offense at every turn. The win kept the Cardinals ahead of New York Giants in National Conference's Eastern Division.

Johnny Roland dashed 76-yards on a punt return for one Cardinal score and ran 30 and three yards for two others.

The other Cardinal tallies came on a 46-yard double reverse by John Gilliam, a 29-yard run by Roy Shivers, and a 31-yard field goal by Jim Bakken.

St. Louis now has outscored its last three opponents 113-0. It beat Houston Oilers 44-0, Boston Patriots 31-0, and now Dallas.

The Cardinals are 7-3 and the Giants are 6-3. Dallas is 5-4 and sinking fast.

Cardinal coach Charley Winner, who had never beaten Dallas on the road, said he wasn't trying to run up the score even though the Cardinals exploited for 30-points in the final period.

"We were trying for the shutout," Winner said.

In the third period as the score mounted, the fans, who once hooed Don Meredith, the former Dallas quarterback, changed: We want Meredith . . . We want Meredith."

Meredith, who retired in 1968, now is a color commentator for ABC-TV in the Monday night games.

Gaels' Heino Lilles Candidate for Award

TORONTO (CP) — Two quarterbacks, a halfback and a linebacker, from universities across Canada, are in the running for the Eric Coughlan trophy, awarded annually to the outstanding intercollegiate football player in the country.

The award, established in 1967 in memory of Coughlan, a pioneer in the Canadian game, will be made Friday.

Bob Kraemer, 26, 175 pounds, veteran quarterback with the University of Manitoba, is the western nominee.

Representing the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association is Heino Lilles, 25, 185, halfback from Beamsville, Ont., attending Queen's University in Kingston.

Tony Proudfoot, from Pointe Claire, Que., and a linebacker with the University of New Brunswick in Fredericton, represents the Atlantic Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

Paul Paddon, 23, who led the Central Canada Intercollegiate Football Conference in passing, is a fourth-year physical education student at the University of Ottawa.

Expos Open April 13 With Mets as Visitors

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos open their third season at Jarry Park Tuesday, April 13, with a day game against New York Mets.

The club's 81-game home schedule for 1971 was released Monday. It shows the Expos finishing up the season with a Sept. 30 night game here against Chicago Cubs.

The Expos will be on the road for five games at New York and Philadelphia against the Phillies prior to their April 13 home opener.

Five holiday dates are a major feature of the 1971 home schedule that is spread over 79 playing dates.

The Expos will be at home for a May 24 Victoria Day holiday game with Atlanta Braves, a June 21 St. Jean Baptiste Day night game with New York, a July 1 Dominion Day engagement with Atlanta and a Sept. 6 Labor Day night game against New York. They meet the Phillies here July 4.

The home schedule features 10 night games, including a Friday, July 2, twi-night doubleheader against Philadelphia.

The remaining 32 games include a Sunday, April 18, afternoon doubleheader with the rotating National League champion Cincinnati Reds, 11 Sunday single admission games, the May 24 and July 1 holiday games, and three Saturday afternoon games—one in April and two in September.

Canadians Regain Team Lead at Horse Show

TORONTO (CP) — Barbara Simpson and Moffat Dunlap demonstrated Monday night that international show-jumping competition can be fun as they won the relay stakes at the Royal Horse Show.

The win regained the lead in team standings for Canada.

And as if winning wasn't enough fun, the Canadian riders came out to accept the first-place ribbon, both mounted on Australian Jimmy Simpson's 11-year-old mare.

"Yeah, it was a gag," said Dunlap, the 29-year-old real estate salesman from Newmarket, Ont., "It was all in fun—we thought the crowd would enjoy it."

But the crowd of about 8,000 at the Canadian National Exhibition indoor arena cheered loudest when the two completed their winning ride with a time of one minute and 27 seconds.

The Canadians were 7.1 seconds faster than the second-place team of Gerardo Tazzer and Carlos Aguirre of Mexico.

Another 7.1 seconds further back were the third-place team of Neal Shapiro and Frank Chapot of the United States.

The relay stakes event involves teams of two riders each with no more than two teams from each country.

Both riders enter the arena together and one jumps the course carrying a whip or baton, which is then passed to the second rider who jumps the course in reverse order.

Time is the deciding factor and Miss Simpson's speedy ride on Australia provided most of the excitement.

"I enjoy those speed events and little Aussie likes them too," said the part, 36-year-old Calgary native after her spectacular ride.

"This win sure made up for the hassle I had last night," said Dunlap, whose horse, Grand Success, dumped him into the water hazard in the Nation's Cup competition Sunday night.

Torchy Miller of Ste. Marguerite, Que., riding Le Dauphin and Jim Elder of Aurora, Ont., on Argyll, were a dejected pair after being eliminated for not finishing the course with a baton or whip.

"Jimmy dropped it just as he started his first jump," Miller said, "I handed it to him alright but I guess he didn't get a firm grip and he dropped it."

Elder finished the course without the whip and their time would have placed them fourth had they not been eliminated.

Fourth place went instead to the U.S. pair of Carol Hofmann on Salem and Conrad Homfeld aboard Rome Dome.

Fifth was the Irish team of Capt. E. V. Campion riding Carrai Kidd and Lieut. J. F. Quinn on Dulsie.

Hans Gunter Winkler on Termingus and Hartwig Steenken riding Fariness took sixth spot for West Germany, which had taken the lead in team standings Sunday with the Nation's Cup victory.

The Canadians moved back in front Monday with a total of 41 points, followed by the Germans with 54, the U.S. 55, and Ireland and Mexico 75 each.

The Royal, final show on the North American fall jumping circuit which so far has been dominated by the Germans, continues through Saturday with five more international team events.

"An alley isn't big enough for Emily. She needs a four-lane highway."

NHL Parity Already Here

NEW YORK (AP) — There was a time in the National Hockey League when an established club—one of the six oldest members of the league—could play an expansion club and almost be certain of adding a couple of points in the standings.

That time, says Boston Ennis Francis of New York-Rangers and John McLellan of Toronto Maple Leafs, is long gone.

"They said they wanted parity among all the teams five years after the expansion," said Francis, who, with McLellan, was interviewed Monday at the weekly luncheon of the New York Hockey Writers Association. "Well, we're in our fourth year since the expansion and parity is here."

Francis' Rangers are tied for the East Division lead with Boston Bruins and have a 9-4-1 record after 14 games. The tie and two of the losses came against teams added to the league in 1967.

"It's getting closer and closer and closer," said McLellan, whose Leafs have just eight points in the standings, the same number as the Sabres and seven less than the surprising Vancouver Canucks. Both the Sabres and Canucks are in their first NHL season.

"It's a psychological thing, I think," he said. "Each NHL team has lost all three games it has played against Vancouver's expansion team.

"You go into a game against one of the newer teams and you figure, 'Oh well, it's two points in the bank.' But that was four years ago. Now we've lost six points to Vancouver. Nobody's a pushover anymore."

Despite the NHL doubled in size from six to 12 teams in 1967, the new clubs were lumped in the West Division and the six established teams composed the East.

Fifth Vancouver and Buffalo added to the East this year, Chicago shifted to the West in a realignment move. So far this season the West teams—including Chicago—hold a 38-18 edge over the East—including Buffalo and Vancouver—with 11 ties.

California Golden Seals, running last in the West, have won five games, all of them against East opponents. The Golden Seals were thrashed by Pittsburgh Penguins 6-1 Saturday night and then bounced back to stun the Stanley Cup champion Bruins 3-1 in Boston the next night.

Ironically, the established East has only developing players. New York, Boston and Montreal, playing better than .500 hockey, Pro West teams are over the break-even mark.

Francis says he believes the great equalizer has been the universal amateur draft which abolished sponsored teams and left every developing player up for grabs. It was that draft which netted youngsters like Bobby Clarke to Philadelphia, Greg Polis to Pittsburgh and Gil Perreault to Buffalo.

Conacher Presents Unique View In Recently Published Book

By CHUCK SYORODA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Brian Conacher presents few new ideas with his book Hockey in Canada: The Way It Is, but his colorful personal approach gives the hockey ache a complexion few fans ever see.

For while the author attempts to diagnose the ailments of hockey in Canada and prescribe cures, he gives us his own autobiography in the book published by Gateway Press.

This story of his 18 or more years in junior, college, international and professional hockey is unlike many other books written by and about well-known figures in which the player emerges as a tight-lipped, fearless, tough yet gentlemanly character who gains success in and adds glory to the game.

One of the first issues Conacher brings up is that organized hockey in Canada is interested only in making money while enslaving players in a system which deprives them of a chance to gain an education or earn a good salary.

At the end of his junior hockey apprenticeship during which he had invaluable coaching high school, Conacher decided to continue his education.

"I have never regretted the choice I made," he writes, but I wondered why the choice had to be either one thing or the other."

Throughout the book, Conacher deplores the greed of the professional hockey club owners who, because they could not tolerate competition in the hockey talent market, helped scuttle the national team concept developed by Dr. David Bauer.

All a former member of Father Bauer's national teams, Conacher describes the frustrations of playing for a country whose hockey fans display only a passing interest in international competition while looking in the National Hockey League for the best in sports entertainment.

But more intriguing is Conacher's story of his own brief foray into professional hockey as a member of Toronto Maple Leafs—and their Rochester Americans farm team.

Here we get a detailed account of what it means to negotiate a contract with George (Punch) Imlach, the wily manager and coach of the Leafs during Conacher's pro career.

Here too we have an account of the Leafs' players' encounters when he is attacked by the whole Boston Bruins hockey team and their home-town fans while receiving little assistance from teammates or game officials.

The attack came suddenly one November day in Boston Garden when Conacher and unknowingly slashed Bobby Orr across the face with his stick as he tried to go around the Bruins defenceman with the puck.

The author candidly describes his feelings after he returned from the dressing room where he received medical attention for cuts and bruises suffered in the fight.

"When I stepped back on the ice, the roar was deafening as the fans screamed for my blood. I was no sooner on the bench when Punch came down and told me he was going to send me right back on the ice. As much as I did not want to go I knew that he was right and that I had to show them I was not afraid. I was, though."

Merchants, Mustangs Win

The Merchants and Mustangs continued their winning ways in the Gas House Hockey League last night with a pair of wins.

Two goals by Carl Boon-bower paced the Merchants to their 5-2 win over Marysville. Other scorers were Paul Williams, Frank Wiles and Bob Lloyd.

Caron Milligan had a goal and an assist for the losers, with Bruce Pascoe collecting the other marker.

The Mustangs collared Mulroney's 6-1 as Jim Horwood and Murray Brydson counted two goals each. Neil Woodley collected one marker for the winners. Jerry Hill scored the lone goal for the losers.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P., Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Male Climacteric Is Distinct Entity

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is there a male change of life? If so, what are its symptoms? Is there any treatment? Can it possibly bring about a nervous breakdown? If a psychiatrist advisable for treatment, or is the family doctor able to manage it? — Mrs. Z.

Comment: Doctors disagree about it, but I happen to believe that a male climacteric (change of life) is a distinct entity. A woman's change usually comes during her middle or late 40s; the male climacteric appears, usually, during the 50s.

There is no specific, rigid dividing - line of age groups. As most women are not greatly affected by the menopause, so most men pass through their 50s and 60s without complaints.

But some men get nervous and irritable. They may also complain of flushes. They become anxious and fearful. They lose confidence. They lose sleep. They become depressed.

When these symptoms are more than mere discomforts (physical when depression intensifies) it may be necessary to have psychiatric help. But most often the family doctor can manage the problem with male hormones, tranquilizers, and reassurances.

Is male change of life due to hormonal changes or to psychological problems? We are not certain. But in my opinion such symptoms should not be minimized. Such men do not "imagine" their symptoms any more than women do who are having discomforts due to change of life.

Recently I wrote about the young woman who was afraid to marry because she had psoriasis she did not want to reveal to her husband. Here is one reader - reply:

Please tell Miss X. she is worrying needlessly. There must be many wives who never expose themselves and yet are happily married. I am one. My husband and I are examples. I have never exposed myself, I am modest and my husband respects this; I think he is proud of it.

I can't help it. I'm just this way. As a youngster I was first, but after I explained how I feel to mother, "Sure honey, it's OK if that's how you are."

I am not a cold, frigid person. I'm just not able to expose my body. I believe — and so does my husband — that a woman is more attractive with something on.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Are headaches common in children? My child has had them for three years. Our doctor thinks they are due to tension. He is a high - strung youngster. Any advice? — Mrs. T.

Comment: Migraine is not uncommon in children. There are tension headaches. If you dropped a big thermometer into the family pool, I'll bet how would it read. High temperature? How is the tension in your household itself? How does everybody get along? Sometimes parents themselves are the cause of headaches in children. Problems appear in cases of the breakup of marriages which can cause tension.

Does migraine run in your family? Is there some other cause? You'd doctor will have to ferret out the reasons, and treat your youngster accordingly.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Have had recurrent fits. Doctor says with erysipelas. Thank heaven for penicillin! I really became quite ill while high fever and nausea. My face and ears ears were red and swollen. It all has seemed to come from nowhere. — Mrs. P.

Comment: It is a streptococcal infection. Somehow they get in through a break in the skin (scratch, etc.). You can thank penicillin again. Years ago, in many cases, erysipelas infection proved fatal.

Parcost Drug Plan Failure - - Shulman

TORONTO (CP) — Morton Shulman, Q.C., Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for High Park, said Monday a survey of druggists indicates that Ontario's prescription drug index is a failure and should be abandoned.

"Parcost (prescription drugs at reasonable cost) has been a million-dollar failure," he told a news conference. "It was an ill-conceived plan and the government shouldn't waste more money on it. They should scrap it."

He said a questionnaire was sent to 300 pharmacists with six questions. Of the more than 200 who had replied by last Friday, 113 were Parcost-members.

The most frequently-offered suggestion was that if the pharmacist were permitted to substitute cheaper drugs from the Parcost listing for the doctor's prescription, the plan would work.

Parcost, introduced Oct. 1, established an index of prescription drugs which lists those of equally-acceptable quality and compares their prices.

Treatment Of Youths Reformed

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General George McIlraith introduced a bill in the Commons Monday providing major reforms for the treatment of young offenders and abolishing "juvenile delinquency" as a special criminal status.

Given first reading by the House, the young offenders bill states as its purpose that the care, custody and discipline of a young offender should be such "that which should be given by such a young person's parents."

The liberal-sounding phrase was described later by an official in the minister's department as an instruction to corrections officers that their job is not primarily a matter of punishment.

The bill, which has been in the drafting stage for more than a year, also repeals the federal Juvenile Delinquents Act.

It defines a young offender as a youth between 16 and 21 years of age. At the same time, it raises by one year in seven provinces the maximum age of children who are to be tried in family courts rather then in ordinary criminal courts.

The age limit would continue to be 18 for all children in Quebec and Manitoba and girls in Alberta. For children in the other provinces, including boys in Alberta, the new limit would be 17 and provinces would be able to have the limit raised to 18 if they chose to do so.

A reform of particular interest is a provision to delay final sentencing until age 23 of a young offender found guilty of a crime that would have brought the death sentence or life imprisonment if tried in an ordinary criminal proceeding.

Teachers Ask Bigger Pensions

TORONTO (CP) — Active and retired Ontario teachers have reopened a campaign for better benefits from their government-administered pension fund.

The Ontario Teachers' Federation and the Superannuated pensioned Teachers of Ontario sent a joint letter to all members of the legislature setting out their problems, it was announced Monday.

"This matter has dragged on far too long already," says the letter. "There have been enough deputations, committee meetings, studies and evaluations to prepare for action.

"What is lacking is the will to act."

William Jones, deputy secretary-treasurer of the 58,000-member federation, said in an interview Monday the main issue is retroactive cost-of-living increase for teachers who have retired in the last 20 years.

ORIGINS OF CANNING

Modern food canning started in 1795 when the French government offered a 12,000-franc prize to anyone who could find a way to preserve food.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Fashions Wild in 1700s

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Leafing through a delightful new book, the illustrated "English Life in the Eighteenth Century," by Roger Hart, I was especially taken with the section on "Macaronis and Beaux" dealing with the wild fashions of that century.

If anyone imagines that the outrageous costuming of the hippie movement is something new, even in Anglo-Saxon society, he should learn about England's "gallants, bloods, bucks, beaux, fribbles, macaronis, fops, monstrosities, coxinthians, dandies, exquisites and swells."

The Macaronis took London by storm, Hart tells us. They began as a small club called the "Macaroni Club," because they always ate a dish of macaroni, then little known in England.

Soon the Macaroni fashion swept through the whole younger generation, and extended even to the middle-aged: "Even the clergy began to have their wigs combed in a macaroni, their clothes cut a la macaroni; there were turf or racing macaronis, political macaronis, military macaronis, college macaronis, and many other varieties."

(Incidentally, this may clear up the mystery of "Yankee Doodle" for many who have wondered why he "stuck a feather in his hat and called it macaroni". The song was first changed by the English to irritate the American rustics prior to the Revolutionary War.)

Many people strongly disapproved of this flamboyant manner of dress. According to Hart, one said: "I am hardsome fellow will belong to them, because their dress is calculated to make the handsome ugly, and the ugly ridiculous."

The Macaroni wore a tiny hat, had an abundant quantity of hair, and wore shoes like slippers, with a small circular silver buckle. His tout ensemble included coats of cut velvet, trimmed with gold or silver lace: breeable waistcoats; white and black silk stockings: hats laced with gold or silver; artful shirts and neckcloths; and jeweled buckles, swords, pistols, canes and snuff-boxes. Hair was even more important to the young bloods of that day than it is among our own youth. Wigs were the rage among the old and middle-aged as well: "Barbers and their apprentices all day long were engaged in making wigs, dressing hair and powdering wigs-powdering wigs." This is when the "toupee" also came in — an array of curls over the forehead and the side of the face, which has recently returned in men's hemorial fashions.

What is different today is that, while in the 18th Century only the affluent could afford the Macaroni style and other popular affectations, such rages now spread throughout the whole culture and cost very little to adopt. That is the only "new" thing about them.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For November 18

Your birthday today: Now you can probably make definite progress in fresh arrangements of both career and home life. New starts become increasingly easier as the year matures and you get used to different conditions. You find your responses changed, partly toward increased acceptance of things and people, partly toward making definite firmly willed choices. Today's natives are interested in unusual ideas, willing to take personal risks—let per their plans brought into reality.

ARIES MAR. 21 — Apr. 19): Your creative efforts suffer interruptions, faltering attention in the early hours, but improve in the afternoon. Bring home something nice for loved ones.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Money matters should be left pretty much as they are. Routine proceeds well once the distraction of the morning is solved. Gather friends tonight and celebrate.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Mood of indecision arrives but you must wait to use it. Expect complications from contrary people. The evening is excellent for experimentation with a new look.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): You help everyone better through healthy self-interest, by caring for your own interests first. financial deals require caution; leave nothing to chance or delegate to friends.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Concentrate on those things which require little co-operation. Some conflict exists between home and career later on — leave work promptly and head for home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): By keeping opinions to yourself and investigating quietly, you come out well informed. It is not yet time to close deals. Pray for intuition and success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Friends now open doors for you, perhaps unwittingly. Financial matters are confusing in the morning, more amenable to changes later. A phase of youth is a bit nearer completion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Tension may develop in home affairs. Don't let your reactions interfere with your work. Self-discipline brings future gains. Pray for guidance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Personal plans and experiments are favored for your benefit today. Later hours may bring an unplanned expense.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Group financial projects march ahead, while your individual efforts go off the mark. There are things you need to know. Spend a little for something that symbolizes your real feelings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): You may be discontented with your economic progress. Futility has seen has enough. Career matters are favored, however, and include being awaked welcome news. Keep busy.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Your work counts for more today. Be systematic and thorough; expect slightly higher expenses — and better returns. Gather friends tonight for spirited conversation.

Downtown Air Service By Seaplane Suggested

MONTREAL (CP) — The problem of establishing a downtown air service in North American cities could be solved by using waterways, a New York city official and aviation planner said Monday.

He said it would eliminate the problem and costs of building short-takeoff-and-landing facilities in city centres.

He told the annual conference of the Canadian Aeronautics and Space Congress that New York hopes to institute just such a service next spring. De Havilland-built aircraft would take off from the Hudson River for nearby cities such as Philadelphia and Boston.

Such a service would at first consist of planes carrying between 20 and 40 passengers and "would be aimed at the Wall Street business traveller who wants to go to these cities."

"The point is, they will operate from downtown and will eliminate the long waiting at La Guardia and Kennedy airports."

The custom-equipped short-range planes would need only 2,000 feet of water in which to take off and land and would travel at about 300 miles an hour.

Mr. Leedham said the idea is feasible because most major cities have natural bodies of water near their downtown areas.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"I wish you'd get it through your head! This is not a private hospital with 500 employees at your beck and call!"

Sport Centre Opposed

EDMONTON (CP) — Several New Democratic Party officials have launched a campaign against construction by the city of a $32.2 million sports, trade and convention centre while another party member campaigns in support of the project. The party's Metro Edmonton council feels there are "higher priority" projects than the centre.

Life Wonderful With New Hearts

TORONTO (CP) — Charles Perrin Johnston Jr. turned slowly and gazed across an all-white hospital ward into the eyes of Rev. Edward Madigan, a Roman Catholic priest.

"It's a miracle, Father," said Mr. Johnston, who received a heart transplant two years ago today at Toronto's St. Michael's Hospital. "Don't you stop once in a while and feel that?"

Every day is beautiful, even if it's raining.

Father Madigan, who received a heart transplant in April, broke into a broad smile and replied in a lilting Irish brogue:

"I do, I do. This morning I stood on the corner and froze waitin' for the bus—and I didn't mind a bit."

That's how two recipients in Canadian heart transplant operations spent the eve of Mr. Johnston's first anniversary of his transplant Monday night —enjoying a homecooked meal, playing cribbage and reminiscing.

"And that's the way we want it, really," Mrs. Johnston said in an interview. "We just want to lead a normal people."

All three agreed there was only one reason for submitting themselves to photogrpahers and interviewers—the hope that it might help St. Michael's Hospital and its heart specialists in the search for suitable donors.

"The donor aspect is so important," said Mr. Johnston. "There are numerous people awaiting a transplant and the shortage is acute on a suitable match.

"God willing, we don't want anything to happen to anyone, but every week there are people who get into accidents. If we could think of giving life they could do so much."

Mr. Johnston, 56, is the third longest-living survivor of a heart transplant operation in the world. The second is John Parkinson, 54, of Montreal, who received his new heart Nov. 3, 1968, at Montreal's Royal Victoria Hospital.

Louis B. Russell Jr., 45, of Jacksonville, the longest survivor, celebrated his second anniversary last Aug. 24. Only one per cent of heart transplant patients live more than 18 months.

A retired engineer, Mr. Johnston has great hopes to work part time with an oil company. He and his wife, of 33 years, Margaret, have taken up jogging. He suffered his first heart attack 14 years ago and several thereafter.

Father Madigan, parish priest of St. Monica's Church in downtown Toronto, is again celebrating mass, counselling his parishioners and "doing about 75 to 80 per cent" of his normal workload.

He received his new heart April 27. In September he tried his hand at golf.

"Just one game, then they caught me."

Father Madigan and the Johnstons were once neighbors and have known each other for many years.

X-Ray Camera Could Be Fatal

STRATHROY, Ont. (CP) — Provincial police issued a warning Monday night that an x-ray camera containing a radio-active pellet has been lost in the area, and if handled could be fatal to the finder.

The camera, used for x-raying gas welds, was left in its container on the bumper of a truck. When the truck arrived in Sarnia from Poplar Hill, Ont., where Sarnia Inspection Company had completed a job Monday, the container, camera and radio-active pellet were missing.

Follow the leader, Datsun 1600

Try it.

You're following a car with a list of rally wins as long as an elephant's memory. A car with the poke to put you where you want to be. Out in front. So don't just follow the leader. Drive a Datsun 1600, and let everyone else follow you.

Here's what you see from the inside
Everything. You've got fantastic all-round visibility. Plus a list of extras that don't cost extra: Contoured bucket seats (reclining in four-door sedan and wagon). Tinted glass. 3-speed heater/defroster. Collapsible safety steering column. Headrests, harnesses and a padded dash. A solid unit body construction for extra protection. Pick a 3-speed automatic or all-synchro 4-on-the-floor.

Here's what you get on the outside
Front disc brakes. All-independent suspension. Smart styling, in two doors, four doors or a wagon.

Here's what you see under the hoods
A 1600 cc. 96 hp 5-main-bearing overhead camshaft engine that squeezes up to 35 miles from every gallon of gas. Dual barrel carb. Alternator.

Here's where you can see it.
A set of 250 Datsun dealerships across Canada. Any one of them will be happy to arrange a test-drive.

Some men and women make mediocre salaries selling a product or service that others recommend and buy. Others earn $10,000 to $25,000 a year.

At FAS International, Inc. Toronto, Canada's Premier Women and Custom Photography School, a career in sales is not a matter of luck. It is a matter of training. Training so far up the managerial ladder that the sky's the limit.

Our trainee courses are advanced. Our trainees are the best. Our training results in a high percentage of the graduates earning more than $10,000 in their first year and yearly, with many earning substantially more.

Likely the person we're looking for is over 21 years of age, single, married or divorced, has a good future but a limited present. Wants to earn more money.

WINTER WONDERLAND !

Hang on Tight Now

Dad seemed quite confident when he got the only seat left after the family piled on for one of the Wixter Carnival snowmobile rides last year. Event is a favorite whenever carnivals or get-togethers are held.

No One Knows Sales Totals

If all the snowmobiles in the Quinte district were gathered in one place they probably wouldn't fit anyway.

That's just about the most succinct assessment available to describe the phenomenal success of the sporty little vehicles.

Statistics don't help. Not even the dealers know for sure. Neither do local vehicle licence bureaus.

Even if numbers were available they wouldn't reveal the true picture. For months the machines have been selling so readily statistics are perpetually out-dated.

There's only one certainty: The popularity boom — after coming into its own last year — isn't over yet.

This year, sales across North America are expected to pass 625,000 — 25 per cent more than last year.

By comparison, 1968 was the year when sales moved so rapidly, the provincial govern ment ran out of licence plates.

A recent survey of Belleville area dealers reflects the na tional picture of the even more active market this winter.

The same dealers look for ward to at least another solid sales year in 1971 before de mand begins to taper.

Meantime, the number of snowmobiles begins to exert pressures of a different type.

Individuals inevitably band

Skiroule thinks you should build a snowmobile as carefully as an airplane.

"Snowmobile" sounds like a snow-going automobile.

But we don't think of our Skiroule as a car. Anything that can float you 300 miles into the bush isn't a car. It's more like a light plane. With a plane you must build carefully.

Our heavy parts must be light. Our light parts, strong. We are proud of our Skiroules and constantly try to make them more simple and dependable.

If you want to do a few circuits around the backyard, there are many machines. If you want to leave the backyard and fly, the name is Skiroule.

Minor Hockey A Major Program

Minor hockey began in Belleville more than 20 years ago, when a group of individuals got together and started the first few teams.

Since then, the organization has blossomed to a 64-team league, involving close to 1,250 boys and the 200 adult volunteers who work with them.

Under the recreation department there are eight organizations for which a budget of approximately $35,000 was allotted this year. This budget is made up by the city acting through the recreation and arena committee, the United Community Services, and through sponsor and registration fees.

The approximate budget breakdown for 1970 are as follows:

— Minor Hockey, $17,500
— Minor Baseball, $4,200
— Boys Softball, $4,100
— Minor Lacrosse, $2,000
— Apple Barrell Club, (weightlifting); $2,000
— Minor Soccer, $1,000
— Girls' Softball, $1,300
— Track and Field, $1,000.

Administration for all these sports organizations run to $620.

The budget for the 1971 season is expected to be raised to $38,000.

Heading the minor hockey teams in the OMHA division are six teams previously known as the All-star class.

These teams, which represent the city meeting other centres, are Western Tire (Juvenile); Blake Kerr Imperials (midget); Thomas Business Systems (bantam); Rollins Construction (peewee); Travers — Peal City (spriee); and Wilson Concrete (tykes).

Another team included in this listing had not officially an OMHA listing in the Mulroney Sisters first year novice team. This team of boys under nine, is a novice - B class team intraining to enter the OMHA class.

Of the six teams in OMHA carrying an average of 20 boys per team, the tyke division team, Wilson Concrete' plays mostly exhibition games.

Sponsorship for the novice, peewee, bantam, midget, and tyke teams is $300 per year; juveniles, $360 and novice - B, $258.

Sponsors supply this fee to take care of uniforms, crests, and other equipment. For regular house league teams sponsorship runs at $125 for the first year (includes sweaters, crests, and name stockings) and $50 for the second year.

In the recent history of OMHA hockey, the Kinsman Bantams won the Ontario Championship in 1967 and 1968, and were runners-up last year.

Out of the pages of hockey history, two names stand out in local minor hockey circles. They are, of course, Bobby and Dennis Hull.

A local of 68 teams, with an average of 15 boys make up the house league teams in minor hockey. At the start of each year the number of teams is chosen and unless they have an immediate sponsor, they are allotted a standard hockey name.

The teams, their sponsors, names, and age groups are:

JUVENILE (under 19): Arthur Sills, OSD, Eric Watkins Texaco.

MIDGETS (under 17): Uptown Billiards, Local 2140 Point/Anne All-Stars, Glass Sons, Masonry, Amadeo Super Serv, BYBF (Belleville Yardmens Benefit Fund), Mackey's Golf Service.

BANTAM (under 15): Gardex Ray Concrete, ANAF Dukes, Rose Royals, Stevenson Mashuegg, Lou Williams, Allied Chemical, Pennsboden(unsponsored), Kiwanis Club, Point Anne All-Stars, Belleville Real Estate, Warwick and Weeks Printing.

PEEWEE (under 13): Shoppings Plaza, Lou Williams, Empetic Club Alhambra 189, Y's Men's Club, Trojans, Travers, Chambers Pond, Elliott Motors, Duby's Texaco, Penguins (unsponsored), Kings (unsponsored) Police Association, Motorland Chrysler, Golden Mile Restaurant, Gulf Service Centre, Richard Ellis Printing, T. C. Construction, Circle TV Sales and Service, Marlton Real Estate, Point Anne All - Stars, Bellewood Lumber.

NOVICE (under 11): Dairy Queen, Bud Boy, DCA Transfer, Leafs (unsponsored), Grelier Society, Lion's Club, Black Hawks (unsponsored), Kings (unsponsored), Wayfare Restaurant, William Belch, Simpsons Sears, Richard Ellis Printing, Shegetis, Golden Mile gers), BYBF.

TYKES (under 9): Local 1088, Penguins (unsponsored), Tom's Pizza, Wings (anticipated sponsor), Bruins (anticipated sponsor), Leafs (anticipated sponsor), ACT (Association Canadian Travellers), Sam Lock Gardens, Kings (unsponsored), Rangers (anticipated sponsor), North Stars (unsponsored), Stephen Licence.

Each boy pays a $5 registration fee, with a maximum family registration fee of $18. Each boy who registers, submitting his signed contest form, receives a chance to play.

All but one of the officials is a volunteer. The equipment manager, William Dennis receives a salary for his extensive work in caring for all equipment, distribution for games and certain repairs.

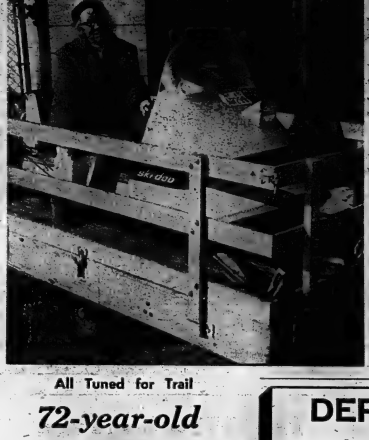
Any boy who is unable to afford registration fees receives assistance from the Minor Hockey Association.

The 200 adult volunteers are referees, timekeepers, conveners for divisions, league executive members, and team managers and coaches.

Instant Frozen Fish

Great patience is required to sit for hours beside a hole in the ice waiting for a fish to bite, but every year hundreds of hardy souls venture onto the ice, their shacks dotting the surface of frozen bays and lakes.

The 1971 Mini-Sno. A smaller machine at a smaller price.



You can own this dazzling little beauty for just $595.00

And that includes a track of rubberized steel cleats, with a two year warranty. Cushion cables that virtually never freeze. A suspension system that makes big bumps little bumps. And more safety features than you ever imagined.

Bring your wife down and look it over. After all, the 1971 Mini-Sno is just her size.

together to share common pursuits.

Now, there's a demand for more snowmobile clubs to place the sport on an increasingly organized family basis.

Most Quinte communities already boast at least one such club.

"There's a need for more clubs now," confirms Ray Worrell, president of the Bay of Quinte Snowmobile Club.

Despite the fact there hasn't been so much as a snowflake fall so far, the club has frozen acceptance of any more membership. Maximum membership is 50 families — the equivalent of about 75 machines.

No new memberships are being accepted until the organization is certain of vacancies.

What snowmobiling now needs as a family sport, he says, are individuals willing to help organize necessary programs — the moonlight safaris, cookouts, outdoor weekends.

Such organizations also work in the public interest.

With the numbers of snow vehicles still multiplying, the family clubs are one way of instituting controls over their indiscriminate use.

Most clubs — like the Bay of Quinte organization — have their own strict rules cautioning snowmobilers against undue noise, careless operation, trespassing and other behavior which may be illegal or plain annoying.

"It's a clean recreation, and you can enjoy it to the fullest if you operate sensibly," says Ray Worrell.

The same attitude is echoed by Stan Hicks, of the recently-formed Picton Bay Snow Riders.

If members wish to join they must abide by club behavior regulations, he says.

Lack of discipline by snowmobilers could lead to increased legislation that might hamper the sport, he believes.

With even more machines around this winter, the authorities will be even stricter in enforcing current laws, cautions Mr. Worrell.

Ironically, there are standing rules which even the best-behaved snowmobiler may not realize, he says.

Among them: to operate a snowmobile—even on a county sideroad — calls for a driver's licence.

In turn, this means no one under 16 can operate a machine in a public place.

Insurance also is necessary — a fact many people "misunderstand."

All Tuned for Trail

72-year-old Snowmobiler Rides Trail

With the coming of winter, comes a change from summer and fall sports to the emergence of skis, skates, sleds, and the latest of man's inventions for the enjoyment of the snow season, the snowmobile.

Now this sporty machine, capable of climbing tall snowbanks, able to leap great distances, is usually advertised for families and the young at heart.

Mrs. Louise Turncliffe, living at the Trenton Wonder Highway considers herself young . . .at heart. She readily admits that she will be 73 in March.

And at 72, when most grannies are resting in the rocking chair, wbjt is Mrs. Turncliffe doing?

Not only is she an avid snowmobiler: "I take it wherever the gang is"; but she works with her son in a sawmill making fruitboxes, delivers newspapers on a rural route of 42 miles every day, and goes fishing during the warmer months with her daughter.

Where does Mrs. Turncliffe get her pep and energy?

"Well, I couldn't just sit like some ladies do; with their arms folded watching TV. I'd be dead in a month."

Mrs. Turncliffe took up snowmobiling in 1967 and since then has purchased a different model, and a complete snowmobile outfit, from suit to helmet.

She told The Intelligencer that she "takes the kids and the grandchildren" with her; when she goes. "We've got a whole back field to practice on."

Does she get a chance to rest?

Not too much, but she's contemplating giving up her paper route in the spring. . ."I have not had any holidays in a long time, you know."

"I'm never bored," was this grand old lady's concluding understatement.

Batting the Bird of Winter

Members of the Belleville Garrison Badminton Club participate in their own method of avoiding winter blues. Meeting twice a week at the Belleville Armory, the members take part in tournaments, get-together games and social activities such as dancing.

Badminton Winter Fun

Not all the birds have gone south for the winter, a fact which the Belleville Garrison Badminton Club is putting into practice twice a week at the Belleville armories when an assortment of club members turn to batting a few around.

The club started operation for this winter about two weeks ago and members have been arriving every Tuesday and Saturday night ever since to take part in four hours of badminton f m from 7 to 11 p.m.

David Bell, in charge of the club, explained that the club operates on a membership becoming $32, senior singles $22, high school members $9 and public school members $6.

After only two weeks of activity this season, the club already has approximately 30 senior members and 30 junior members.

The Badminton club season extends from the beginning of November until March and has been in operation for a number of years. Originally intended for the militia, the public became involved in the club and eventually took it over although all militia members are considered to have a membership in the club.

"The club was very active originally and then it dropped off," Mr. Bell said. "Had now it is on the increase again."

"Younger people are looking for some recreation. There are a lot of people more interested in getting out," he said, commenting on the lateness in interest in the club.

Different events run by the club offer members an opportunity to get to know one another informally. In addition there are two competitive tournaments just for the club — one in the winter and one in the spring.

The highlight of the year is the Doug Grant Trophy invitational "Tournament which goes all day on a Saturday and features teams from Belleville, Peterborough, Trenton, Napanee, Kingston and Picton.

Ski Patrol Always Ready

They're the fastest emergency service on two legs and they are now in training for another Quinte winter.

They're the members of the Canadian Ski Patrol. All trained in first aid, they donate time to keeping the slopes that much safer for skiers.

Based in Belleville, the Quinte patrol counts about a dozen skiers.

Centre of their operations is the Oak Hills Ski Club.

You already know how well built Moto-Ski can. Well, the Moto-Ski Grand Prix is just a little more precise. A little more refined.

On top of all the great features it shares with other Moto-Skis, the Grand Prix gives you a choice of those specially built engines, a wider track of rubber, hand steel clinch with a one year warranty a speedometer, a tachometer, a gold metal flake finish, and more safety features than ever before.

We think you'll appreciate the precision you get in the Grand Prix.

It's just a little more precise than our other machines.

And they're still way ahead of everyone else's.

Ski Trail In the Making

Help In A Hurry

The first snowmobile emergency service in the Quinte district was started in Marmora.

Snowmobilers trained in first-aid, can be despatched to the scene of a mishap and comfortably return any injured snowmobiler for needed medical attention.

The rescue team uses a sled of special design, towed behind a snowmobile, to convey injured persons out of the bush.

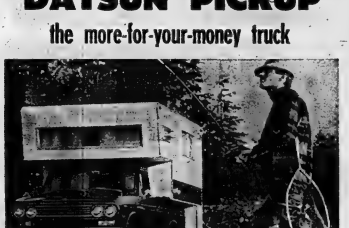
Yacht Club Still Busy

While their yachts lie on shore for the winter season, members of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club are hard at work planning next summer's activities.

Among the activities being investigated for the summer of 1971 is an invitational race for all Corvette class yachts on the Great Lakes.

Four - day course races would be held on Big Bay, if plans go through, and a long distance race to Picton would climax the series.

Beginning late in January, the club annually sponsors a senior sailing course Friday night. — open to non-members for a modest fee.



Local and visiting speakers present lectures and slides on all aspects of yachting — both power and sail, and present movies and slides of outstanding events during the past season.

This winter, past commodore Dick Bird will give an account of the week he spent on a committee boat at CORK in Kingston this summer.

Social events are an important part of the winter activities at the club, with special entertainment arranged for members and guests.

Who Needs Wings?

Obviously this daring young skier doesn't as he appears to be almost soaring over a mountain. Skiing in Quinte country offers wide range of terrain to enthusiasts.

City Program Popular

Skiing Popular with Youth

Snow has always been a hit with youngsters.

But that's not the total explanation for one of Belleville's most successful recreation projects.

Action and the outdoors also are, undoubtedly part of the attraction for the ski - training program first organized by the city's recreation department in 1967.

Operated in conjunction with the Oak Hills Ski Club, the program offers eight lessons on the practical basics of the glamor sport.

Starting Jan. 1, 'la students aged nine to 18 years — are taken by bus each Saturday morning from the city to the club slopes.

Here, club instructors separate them into small classes for instruction. Each class is followed by a free skiing period.

Cost of outfitting offspring for the course varies widely — from about $25 for the youngest to around $150 for a teenager, estimates a recreation department official.

But the program has no shortage of participants. In fact, its popularity has more than doubled registrations in three years.

In 1967, the department was transporting about 100 students in two buses. Last year, registration had grown to 250, and the buses were making two runs.

"It was started from the group as a new program and has completely built itself to success," says the department spokesman.

Parents also have a role to play. They help supervise the enthusiastic Saturday - morning busloads running between the city and the slopes.

The outdoor lessons are preceded by a clinic which covers assorted aspects of skiing — from proper equipment to first aid practices.

Holding Its Own

Skiing Remains Outdoor Glamor Sport

Skiing is still hard to catch in any competition for winter sports popularity.

Despite the upsurge in a multiplicity of winter recreations — including the snowmobile phenomenon — skiing still remains the glamor snowtime sport.

While it may have lost some recruits to the snowmobile, it nonetheless is drawing more and more participants, say Quinte area enthusiasts.

In fact, skiing as a popular sport, has yet to reach its peak, they indicate.

Two current Quinte area projects give realism to such expressions of faith.

In Prince Edward County, slopes are being developed near Picton as a new club aims to provide local facilities for a growing number of skiers.

In the Belleville area, the Oak Hills Ski Club, now in its seventh season, is completing a development program, expanding skiing, parking, towing and clubhouse facilities.

"Skiing is still experiencing tremendous growth and hasn't reached the saturation mark at all yet," says a Quinte dealer in ski equipment.

While snowmobiling may have won away some potential skiers for the present, it hasn't retarded such growth, a club organizer believes.

For one thing, skiing holds an unique grip on sportsmen.

It's an appeal that combines the attractions of action, travel and socializing.

For the skier, the sport itself, is "a bit of a challenge," says Gord McGaughey, of the Oak Hills club.

Well organized, its a sport with facilities almost anywhere there's a fair - sized range of hills.

Come winter weekends, local skiers can pack their gear and choose from a multiplicity of chalets within comfortable driving distance of the Quinte area.

Meantime, homeground facilities are being geared to cater to a trend of growth.

"We had more skiers last year than we ever did before," says Mr. McGaughey. "And we expect the same trend this season."

Catering to the growth, the club has: Moved and extended its chalet, lengthened its runs, improved tows and linked summit and bottom bases by phone; altered its parking area to permit easier access for 200 cars.

Most significantly, for skiers, the club plans to keep its slopes in top shape by harvesting snowfalls and spreading the drifts. This is done by taking snow caught in fences on lower ground and spreading it with special equipment along the ski runs.

Oak Hills expects to have 15 instructors this year involved in recreation programs — which also will involve many youngsters.

Already part of the schedule is a Nancy Greene League of junior skiers.

Karl Euler, Picton - area veterinarian among founders of the Prince Edward County club, also agrees with the stepped-up interest in the sport.

Site of its operation will be Macauley's Mountain, part of the high ground near Picton which once housed an army camp and air base.

The hill provides a good ski slope and two runs and a tow are being planned by the group.

All skiers are now awaiting, says one enthusiast, is "for Mother Nature and her first snowfall."

Yet the sport reaches beyond seasonal limits. Skiers don't await the first snow to begin thinking of the sport.

This year, says Don Leslie, of Leslie's Ski Den, people started buying skis as early as August.

"People in the trade said the same thing: This year sales started early."

Starting from scratch, a skier may spend about $150 to fully outfit himself, estimates Mr. Leslie.

However, the real enthusiast may be carrying a top - to - toe investment costing up to $500.

It's a sport, he agrees, which has yet to reach its participation peak.

We'll get you to where the action is in grand style.

Twenty Rinks

Outdoor Skating Always Handy

Outdoor skating has for many years been a popular winter sport in this part of Ontario and skaters are never happier than when the weatherman co-operates.

But whether or not the weatherman co-operates, the Belleville Recreation and Arena Committee is prepared to do its part.

Recreation department officials this year have plans for more than 20 outdoor rinks in different parts of the city and, with the official commencement of winter little more than a month away, all that is needed to get the outdoor skating season under way is some cold weather.

Two of the most popular outdoor skating areas in the city are the Belleville Harbor and, in recent years, the Zwick's Island cove.

Three rinks with lights are again planned for Zwick's Island with the same number on the inner harbor.

Other rinks with lights for night-time skating will be in Hillcrest, at Park Dale, the Haig Road school site, Bess Bleecker Auditorium; the Quinte Skating and Tennis Club; Avondale School, H. J. Clarke School, Queen Elizabeth School, Queen Victoria School and Prince of Wales School.

Other outdoor rink sites in the city are in West Park Village where hopefully lights will be set up this year and at the Georges Vanier Separate School.

Two of the outdoor rinks — at the Park Dale playgrounds and at the Haig Road school site, have hockey boards permanently set up. All other rinks are merely flooded and kept snow free by the city parks board.

This winter pupils at the Park Dale School are going to have a bit of an edge on children at other schools in the city.

One of the teachers at the school who is a figure skating enthusiast has offered to teach the art to the school children — if an outdoor rink is provided at the school.

The Recreation and Arena Committee has gone along with the idea and have authorized provision of the outdoor rink as requested.

Yacht Club Winter Centre

Snowmobiling on the Bay of Quinte has become a standard winter activity in the past few years. Once the ice has frozen to ensure safety residents on the Prince Edward side can be seen riding to work—1970 style.

Zwick's Island is the base for many local snowmobilers as they can trailer their winter fun machines to the city-owned park and start from there.

It has become a major winter activity for members of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club, for afternoon and evening fun on the lake can be centred around the club house with families using the building for rest periods and ready warmth.

Interest in figure skating has always been high in the Quinte district and interest has increased over the years since the Quinte Figure Skating Club was founded.

It began in the Memorial Arena where classes were held almost from the time the building went up in the late 1920s.

But shortage of ice time led club members to build the rink-tennis courts at the corner of Queen St. and Dufferin Ave.

A shift back to the arena was made when professional skaters took charge of the classes, and two years ago the city took over the operation of the club's premises, rink and tennis courts.

For about 10 years professionals brought in from as far away as Toronto have conducted weekly classes for skaters of all ages from three up.

Now, with about 165 members and ice time set aside three days a week for practice and instruction, the club is a thriving concern.

For years the close of skating season in the spring was highlighted by a skating carnival put on by the club.

But this year the carnival will be dropped, and club competitions will be substituted instead.

Senior members of the club have shared their skills with in recent years with novice hockey players.

Steadying Hand

Dozens of beginners are put through the preliminary paces of the exacting art of figure skating every year under the auspices of the Quinte Figure Skating Club. Ice time is rented three times a week at the arena for the club members to practise and receive instruction.

Competition To Replace Ice Carnival

When the snow blows wild and the temperatures drop there is one group of people that will be passing the time in constructive athletics and grace at the Belleville Arena.

And the instigator of the fun and the instruction is the Quinte Figureskating Club.

A. R. Reid, president of the club, outlined the activities of the organization for the coming year.

A highlight of the club's activities this year will be a competition to serve as a change of format in preference to the annual carnival performed by the club.

The competition will be open to members from beginners up to preliminary figure skaters and is slated for some time in February.

Members of the club gather at the Belleville Arena every Monday, Thursday and Friday from 4:30 to eight p.m.

Once there they practise skating, receive instruction and take small tests in their art.

Professional guidance is available through the capable instruction of Rhonda McKnight of Kingston, Jim Nicholson of Toronto and last year's instructors Bonnie Boundy and Gordon Crossland.

With a membership of 165 people, the club started activity for this year a month ago and has been skating ever since.

"It looks very good this year," Mr. Reid said. "It looks like there's a lot of interest."

He commented that the club actually had more applications than it could handle and that it was looking for more ice time.

For a small fee the club is also offering group sessions on Thursday from three to four p.m. for nonmembers.

Curling Club Is as Old as Canada

Quinte Curling Club has the distinction of being one of the district's oldest organizations.

Its charter is as old as Canada itself — dating from 1867, when a club was organized and a rink located on George St.

Interest in curling fell off, but was revived in the early 1950s. The local arena was used for curling following the close of the hockey season, and curling stones were lent to the group by the Kingston Curling Club. Facilities at CFB Trenton were used periodically by the club.

Construction of the present Quinte Curling Club, located in Exhibition Park, was started in 1967 and curling on an organized basis was once again resumed in January, 1968. Because the original charter was never surrendered, the present club operates under the 1867 charter.

When the present club was first formed, very few of the charter members had extensive knowledge of the game. However, during its brief existence, many local rinks have been quite successful in various provincial curling events.

Rinks have reached the provincial final in such events as the Governor-General's, Intermediates, British Consuls, Colts, Ladies Senior Tankard and Rose Bowl. Only a few years ago a rink from the Quinte Curling Club represented the province of Ontario in the Dominion Rose Bowl Finals.

Curling, once considered to be a sport of older people has now proved to be quite an attraction for the younger set. This has resulted in a better calibre of curling and a trend toward a more competitive spirit.

This competitive spirit, although somewhat eroding the past tradition of a gentlemen's game, has actually increased the attraction of the sport.

Another factor which has increased its popularity is the departure from a traditionally all-male sport to one enjoyed by both sexes.

The upswing in the popularity of curling can also be credited to the advent of artificial ice, the increased population and the more affluent society, says club president, J. F. McCorquodale.

The Quinte Curling Club has a membership of about 180 men, 120 women and 30 juniors. Junior members are drawn from all the local secondary schools, Albert College and the Ontario School for the Deaf.

Curling started this year on Oct. 30 and will run through until early April. During the season, there is regular club curling for the men's section, the women's section and the mixed section.

The average member will curl two games a week during the season. Many members curl in two sections, which may result in their playing three or four games a week.

Several bonspiels are held during the season, some of which are for members of the Quinte Club only. Others are open bonspiels for members of other clubs and entries are quite often received from long distances away.

Social events, such as dances are held during the season and have always proved successful, Dr. McCorquodale says. Each year, prior to the start of icemaking operations, a dance is usually held on the curling club floor.

During the Quinte Exhibition, the club facilities are used for exhibition purposes; baby shows and as a hospitality lounge. At times, part of the facilities have been donated, during the off-season, for such events as motorcycle races and band tattoos. On other occasions the facilities have been rented to such organizations as trailer caravans, electrical shows and rock hound exhibits.

On Target

Curling is one of the fastest growing winter sports in the Quinte district. Here an enthusiast marks the target for a teammate at the other end of the rink.

Sleighing Fun Losing Ground

A large toboggan rests precariously on the edge of a hill. A family of three has crowded on it and suddenly the vehicle is pushed from the crest of the hill and moves down the toboggan slide picking up speed as it goes, spraying freshly fallen snow for yards around and into the face of the laughing passengers.

That idyllic situation was more readily recognizable as little as five years ago as tobogganing was one of the more popular winter sports.

Hills were seen packed with various sizes of the craft as well as a sleigh or two, or a saucer.

And a few more years ago, sleighs with runners were the rage, until roads that were then characterized by hard - packed snow became slushy with modern techniques and heavy traffic.

And now 'toboggans' which have the greatest popularity among sliding enthusiast, are facing the degradation of nontune do to the impertinence of mechanized toys such as snowmobiles.

Jerry Bongard, manager of Stephen Licence Ltd., told The Intelligencer that sleighs have diminished in popularity save for baby sleighs.

He added that toboggans enjoy the greatest popularity of sliding devices and that there still is a constant demand for them in children's sizes.

"Families seem to have more interest in playing within family groups," he said. "Requests for large toboggans are next to nil."

Mr. Bongard said that part of the reason was the popularity of the snowmobile and an upsurge in skiing activity.

- Plastic manufacturers usually come out with a new sliding creation once a year and these, although, shortlived, take up some of the slack.

This year, for example, a scooter is on the market. Shaped like a workman's boot, the rider sits in the heel and the toe acts as the runner.

Another Stephen Licence employee admitted that many manufacturers are not producing the articles because of the cost of them and the cost for which they must be sold.

"They're considered a toy and $10 to $20 is too much money for a toy."

But if tobogganing is failing there is still the simple opportunity for that type of fun. The excellent landscape around Belleville and surrounding municipalities enables enough sliding area for any tobogganing enthusiast.

Belleville Ice Follies?

However, among the collection which she and husband Don have, are old wooden and metal skates, skates which buckled onto boots and clip-ons. One such pair is a pair of wood-iron Certa Speed Skates from about 1850. A far cry from equipment of today.

Winter Carnival List Growing Each Week

The Belleville Winter Carnival, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, will be held Feb. 4 - 7 inclusive.

Committee members have been working in close association with local clubs and service organizations to provide as good a carnival as Belleville has ever had, better, if possible.

Although there are some events still to be announced or completely outlined, the list is growing. They are:

—Dog-sled races; 10 - 12 mile track with members of the Arctic Dog Sled Association; sponsored by the carnival committee.
—The Carnival Queen Contest, sponsored by the Kinette Club.
—Torchlight Parade sponsored by the Belleville Jaycees.
—Senior A Hockey, league game. Galt Hornets versus Belleville Mo-Hawks.
—Snow sculpture judging.
—Pancake breakfast, sponsored by Club Alouette.
—Tug-of-war contests.
—Square dancing on skates with the Quinte Twirlers.
—Victoria and Grey all - night curling bonspiel.
—Sky - diving. Trenton Skydiving Club, Air Rescue Squad in co-operation with the Belleville Flying Club.
—Sleight rides.
—Skating for all ages.
—Teen dance being run by Jeremy.
—Klondike dance sponsored for the adults by the Belleville Veterans Council.
—Skating races.
—Barrel - rolling contests.
—Fishing derby for youngsters under 16. Sponsored by the Belleville Fish and Game Club. (Officials are attempting to have an adult derby at the same time, if possible).

Included in the events will be those by the Quinte Snowmobile Club. Their program, however, has not yet been announced.

Jack Trembley, chairman, advised The Intelligencer that Belleville has the only winter carnival on that particular weekend.

Events for Saturday will be co-ordinated by the Kinsmen Club.

The Belleville Veterans Council under Tom Purdy, Legion Branch 99, will co-ordinate Sunday events.

Globetrotters Coming

One of winter's indoor classics is basketball — when the performance is put on by the Harlem Globetrotters. This year the Globetrotters are coming to Kingston on Thursday, Nov. 19.

The famed ambassadors in short pants, as usual, bring along more than their famed basket of antics, gags and hilarious action. A half time show includes table tennis, juggling and trampoline happenings.

One of the oldest and still highly enjoyed methods of winter sport is the toboggan. While racing down the hills, the greatest fun is attempting to avoid the other guy . . . and if not, that's even more fun.

Dog Races A Feature

Snarling, yapping, straining against their harness, sled dog racing teams will form the major attraction to the 1971 Belleville Winter Carnival.

As the announcement of still more events for the carnival arrive every week, the inclusion of the dog races came as a culmination of many months of work by members of the committee.

The 15 - 20 teams will be supplied by the Arctic Dog Sled Association, with participants from eastern and northern Ontario, Quebec and northern New York state.

The 10 - 12 mile course on the ice surrounding Zwick's Island Park, was carefully plotted on the weekend of Nov. 7 - 8 so that the dogs would be in constant sight of the thousands of spectators expected to attend the many events.

Scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 6, Mr. Tremblay stated that "if finances permit, we'll have them on the Sunday as well."

"Dog races are the most spectacular sport you can come up with for winter carnivals," he asserted.

The teams will be harnessed up in the parking area on Market Square before the races.

Sleighs Still Winter Transportation

The importance of sleigh rides is not necessarily to enjoy the ride. As the sled is pulled around the trail, happy youngsters push and shove their way onto the sled . . . and that's half the fun of it. Sleigh bells, the clomp of horse hooves on crunchy snow and the snap of the driver's reins . . . that's a sleigh ride.

Deer Are In Danger

TWEED (Staff) — The Quinte district — where wide open spaces still dominate the landscape — is ideal snowmobile country.

But the snowmobile explosion — sales are expected to set another record this year — is producing some distinct, warning echoes.

The vibrations notably are emanating from official guardians of wildlife.

A main concern, say lands and forests department officials here is that wildlife may be unduly disturbed, even molested in its natural habitat.

Once deserted, it was a winterland where wildlife went virtually undisturbed, a handful of trappers the only intruders.

"Now," says a lands and forests official, "we can see a very noticeable increase in these machines in the bush."

Snowmobilers should take care to stay away from known deer yards — prime food areas where deer congregate in winter.

Allore Assails 'Power Clique'

Tight Money Over: Benson

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) —Finance Minister Edgar Benson said Tuesday that the period of t ight money has ended in Canada.

He told the Burnaby Chamber of Commerce:

"I have been informed by the governor of the Bank of Canada that the banking system is liquid enough now to accommodate all justifiable loans that may be brought forth to the banking system.

"There is no tight money in Canada at the present time."

Mr. Benson said Canada has been more successful in controlling inflation than other countries, but warned that things must move slowly and with care to avoid setting off another inflationary spiral.

He said the country has been moving steadily toward an easing of fiscal policy and he is optimistic about next year's economy. He said a rise in the economy during the first half of 1971 would level to a steady 2½-to-three per-cent rate of growth during the last quarter.

Mr. Benson predicted an 11-per-cent increase in business investment. an e x p a n s i o n in trade, and said unemployment would ease next year.

The finance minister said he expects tax-reform legislation to be brought down in the spring.

Production Cut Worst In Decade

WASHINGTON (AP) — The worst monthly drop in industrial production in more than a decade has dimmed Nixon administration hopes that the U.S. economy is snapping back and moving toward recovery.

Seasonally-adjusted figures released Tuesday show the industrial production index in October fell 2.3 per cent, the most since August, 1959, when there was a nationwide steel strike. The index is down 8.3 per cent from October, 1969.

Half of October's percentage decline was blamed on the auto workers' strike against General Motors and its depressing effect on industrial output. Tentative a g r e e m e n t has since been reached but GM is still struggling to resume production.

But, strike or no strike, the drop in the important economic indicator still would have been large, the Federal Reserve Board said.

It was the third straight monthly decline in the index.

Ousted School Officer Heard

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Suspended separate school superintendent F. B. Allore openly challenged Roman Catholics educators last night and charged that a "three-man power clique" engineered his removal from the position of chief executive officer with the school board.

The reason behind his suspension, he told a group of about 200 ratepayers at St. Michael's Auditorium, was "a complete separation of attitudes and ethics between Mr. Buckley and myself," E. J. Buckley is chairman of the separate school board.

Trustee Paul Wall of Belleville, Mr. Buckley and Ben Kreese of Trenton, board vice-chairman, were names as members of the "power clique".

Before zeroing in on the "Allore situation", the suspended superintendent outlined his educational philosophy.

"In our Catholic schools, we believe that to have education aimed at a rational end the student must be educated in an atmosphere of Christian morality, where he can compare new knowledge with ideas of what he is and the way he should live.

"One of the strongest motivational forces in education, formal or informal, is consultation. Thus students are influenced by observing these about them practising daily moral and rational conduct. There is more methodology inherent in this one principle than in all techniques ever written about.

"Moral education is impossible without the habitual vision of greatness. This implies that the teacher, the student and the rational man must have a deep appreciation for high standards, the first-rate and the vision of greatness."

The difference in attitudes and ethics between Mr. Buckley and himself was the "simple, primary reason" for the trouble that developed, Mr. Allore said.

The three trustees, Mr. Allore said, presented him with a "coercive letter" May 1, requesting his resignation within one week.

Discussions with them indicated that the letter was not the result of a legitimate board meeting." the suspended superintendent added.

"I was then informed I could not keep the letter," Mr. Allore continued in his recounting of the events leading to his suspension.

Later, he said, he was allowed to make a hand-written copy of the letter.

After they left, I begin an immediate investigation. This revealed . . . a resignation at this date would have been an admission of guilt to any number of their charges, not only locally but throughout the system."

The "power clique" was aided by two board employees, Mr. Allore charged. They became, "the self-appointed sources of distorted information".

As early as January of this year, "Mr. Buckley, in liaison with two employees did approach representatives of the Ontario department of education, and in the name of the board, sought approval for my dismissal", the superintendent said.

"A short time later, I requested a vote of confidence from the board. The vote of confidence was passed, and therefore must be assumed that the approach of the three men during January was without board knowledge and approval and constituted early evidence of the conspiracy."

From January, 1970, until his suspension, Mr. Allore told his audience, "the five men involved distorted and worked at blocking any coherent efforts at educational development."

Another Hunt Is Over

A now familiar scene at the end of deer-hunting season, hopeful owners seek identity marks on homeless hounds brought to the Ontario Humane Society's Avonlough Road Shelter yesterday. Game wardens shipped 25 dogs to Belleville yesterday from north-country pounds after they were found strayed in bush while tracking deer. (For details, see Page 3).

Artist's Conception of Lunokhod I

Lunokhod Sends Pictures Of Wheel Tracks on Moon

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Russia's moon buggy has started sending good quality television pictures of the lunar surface back to earth, the Soviet Tass news agency said today.

Traces left by Lunokhod I on the moon's surface could be clearly seen in the pictures, Tass said.

The eight-wheel lunar buggy, the first robot vehicle on the moon, parked overnight on the lunar surface after emerging from its mothership Tuesday.

Lunokhod's chief designer today explained in Red Star, the armed forces newspaper, how the vehicle was controlled from earth.

He said the chassis incorporated a number of automatic devices to increase safety of movement, to help control movement, and to carry out scientific experiments to measure the mechanical properties of lunar soil.

In order to prevent the vehicle from overturning while moving uphill or downhill or with a heavy list, special sensors were installed in the chassis system to stop the robot if necessary.

The robot has a number of commands to control Lunokhod's movement forward and reverse movement can be carried out as a continuous motion or in stages, when the vehicle has "stop-go" motion.

The chassis also incorporates an instrument for collecting scientific information about lunar rock. On command from earth, it automatically carried out a program of measurement of its mechanical properties, the designer wrote.

Lunokhod I — described by some who saw a mockup of it on Moscow television as a bathtub on wheels — the world's most sophisticated cassarole dish — was landed on the lunar surface Tuesday by its spacecraft carrier, Luna 17.

The eight-wheel lunar vehicle trundled down a ramp and parked itself 63 feet away, following orders beamed to it by Soviet scientists on earth.

There was no immediate word on how far the machine will roam during its scheduled series of experiments. The moon-buggy is powered by solar batteries charged through a reflector in its dome-like top section.

Tass news agency said such a vehicle could carry out various tasks, including finding out the composition of moon rock, photographing the lunar surface and studying its relief.

The Lunokhod is equipped with television cameras, radio equipment and other scientific apparatus for transmitting data back to ground control.

It also would be possible for the moon vehicle to set up long-term scientific equipment at various points to measure seismic activity, radiation and magnetic fields, Tass said.

Luna 17 also soft-landed after its five-day journey from earth with French-made laser reflectors which will form one end of a radio-interference measuring device based on the earth and the moon.

Reports from Paris said the apparatus would reflect laser beams directed from observatories in southern France and the Crimea.

This means that Soviet scientists have to pinpoint precisely the position of the moon-landing vehicle at a distance of 238,840 miles — which is the equivalent of picking out a dime from 1,500 feet.

Soviet ground control is monitoring the movements of each of Lunokhod's eight independently driven wheels on a TV screen.

The government newspaper Izvestia reported that the designers preferred this layout to caterpillar tracks because of the lesser breakdown risk.

UN Likely To Ask Halt On New Arms

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The UN General Assembly's political committee was expected to give approval today to a resolution calling for a halt in development of new nuclear weapons, but delegates doubted that the United States and Soviet Union would support it.

Rail Probe Guidelines Are Fixed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian t r a n s p o r t commission Tuesday set guidelines for a public inquiry into the causes of railway accidents.

The inquiry, to begin Jan. 18, 1971, will be a follow-up to a hearing which until Tuesday looked into fires rail accidents in Ontario that killed two men last summer.

D. H. Jones, chairman of the commission's tribunal conducting the hearing, said the inquiry is to cover 14 subject areas.

They i n c l u d e maintenance and inspection of railway cars, signals and radios; inspection of track, structures and signals; operation of railroad signals, track motor cars and radios; handling of dangerous cargoes; accident procedures; rule instruction; research and development by railway companies regarding safety; supervision of train operation; and railway company rules and employee instruction.

U.S. Gives Ten Million

Relief Supplies Flown to Pakistan

DACCA (CP) — Swiss and German aircraft ferried in tons of relief supplies today and President Nixon allocated $10 million to the international 'rehabilitation effort for survivors of the cyclone and tidal waves that inundated a large area of East Pakistan six days ago.

China will donate $1.3 million worth of aid, the New China news agency reported. It said one-third of the donation would be in cash while the rest would be in relief supplies.

The number of dead remained incalculable. The government confirmed 55,000, but unofficial estimates were from 300,000 to 650,000; the Pakistani relief commissioner, A. M. Ambuzzman, said he could neither challenge nor confirm them.

Dozens of small islands in the Bay of Bengal were still untouched by relief workers. Survivors told r e p o r t e r s their drinking water came from pools befouled by bodies of human beings and cattle, and their only food was rotting rice kernels they burned before eating to kill the stench.

Officials discounted reports of w i d e s p r e a d cholera in the stricken area.

A Boeing 707 from West Germany brought in 25 tons of tents, bedding, blankets and medicine, then took off for Turkey to get another load. Two other German planes with 10 tons of goods were due tonight.

Other planes were on their way from the United States, Britain, France, the Soviet and other countries.

But despite President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan's pledge to "give all help and relief to victims," the only Pakistani aircraft participating in relief work Tuesday was a helicopter that Ambuzzman said had to be grounded for maintenance after 14 hours aloft.

Relief officials conceded the effort was far short of what was needed.

Ambuzzman said his most pressing needs to organize a sufficient relief program are "helicopters, helicopters and helicopters."

County's Population Increase Is Centred in Belleville Area

The county of Hastings, including Belleville and Trenton, had a population gain of 2,723 in the past year, according to officials at the regional assessment office in Trenton.

Total population figures for the county released today by the Trenton office list 52,894 persons living in the county and its two major population centres.

The figure for Prince Edward county was given as 19,824 as compared with 19,678 last year, for a gain of only 146.

A breakdown of the Hastings county figures shows the major population growth was in Belleville and in the two rural townships of Sidney and Thurlow, with the three municipalities accounting for well over half of the total growth.

According to assessment office figures, the Trenton population dropped by 600 during the past year.

The greatest percentage of population growth in the county was in Thurlow township, which in the past year has seen a gain of more than 10 per cent — from 5,203 last year to 5,743 this year.

Next in line was the township of Sidney, which jumped from 7,518 to 7,981 for a growth of 463.

In the same period, Belleville jumped from 33,343 to 33,814 for an increase of 471 while Trenton dropped by 683 from 13,041 to 13,021.

In Prince Edward county the major population centres are the town of Picton with 4,676, and the township of Ameliasburg on the south shore of the Bay of Quinte with 4,202.

Back in Hastings county, Tyendinaga township in Rawdon has 2,614 residents; Rawdon has 3,292 and Hungerford 2,302.

Deseronto — the county's only separated town — has a population of 1,838; Frankford has 1,936; Stirling 1,473; Tweed 1,695; Madoc 1,353, and Marmora village 1,368. Before is the smallest incorporated village in Hastings with 239 residents, while Bancroft in the northern part of the county is the largest with a population of 2,325.

Limerick, with 258 residents is the most sparsely settled township, while the three most northerly municipalities — Marmora, Wicklow and Bangor — which send one reeve to county council, have a total population of 798. Most populated of the northern townships are Montague with 963 and Dungannon with 901.

Slot Machines Gone From Trenton Arena

TRENTON (Staff) — Pursuant to his statement in council Monday that he could have vending machines removed from the Community Gardens in short order, councillor Paul Tripp has done just that.

After consulting with councillor Stan Ketchison and recreation chairman Vernon Notley, the cigarette machine and another dispensing hot coffee and chocolate were removed by 3 p.m. yesterday.

Chairman Notley made what he called "criticism of the Community Gardens operation subject of an address to a Kiwanis Club meeting Nov. 12, explaining that a rumor was circulating that the gardens' canteen was not being operated properly.

The speech and "criticism" became basic for a heated dialogue between Mayor Duncan McDonald and councillor Stan Ketchison, himself a Kiwanian, at the Nov. 16 council meeting.

Mayor McDonald told council that he had questioned Mr. Notley on the canteen-vending machine service at the gardens, adding that, as mayor, he thought he had "the right to do so."

"The only thing I questioned . . . was the installation of vending machines in the community gardens that I felt would take from the profits of the canteen," he said.

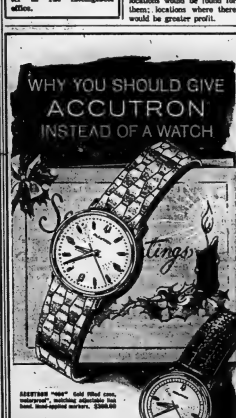
Councillor Paul Tripp, a local wholesaler and owner of the vending machines, contends that the image of his firm was hurt by the council dialogue. "It's one of public relations out of this," he said.

"As an ex-officio member of all committees, the mayor, could have brought the matter up before the Gardens Board - Recreation Committee without taking it directly to council," he suggested.

Councillor Tripp says that during the council meeting it was implied that he "used undue pressure or manoeuvres" to persuade the gardens board to do business with his company.

He said that the vending machines had been placed in the gardens as a "public relations gesture" on the part of his company and that he could "assume that a smear campaign" had been mounted against him over their presence in the lower arena complex.

"There is no way you can make money in that location," he asserted, stressing that they were placed there "only as a backup to provide a service."



Mayor McDonald, however, points out that cigarettes are no longer sold in the canteen, but only from vending machines, and profit would be greater if sold from the counter.

Furthermore, he says that there are times when the canteen is not open when there are sufficient numbers present in the building to merit it. He did agree with Councillor Ketchison that the vending machines are useful at certain times, particularly for early Saturday hockey practices.

"At the present time, we would not be willing to put the machines back," Councillor Tripp said, adding that other locations would be found for them; locations where there would be greater profit.

CARDS OF THANKS

The members of Branch 99, Royal Canadian Legion would like to thank all those who sent cards, flowers and Mass offerings. Special thanks to the staff of the Belleville General Hospital, Rev. Father Brady of Holy Cross Church, Stirling and Canon R. B. D. Wright of Belleville. Thank you all.

Mrs. Joseph Brownson,
R.R. 1 Marysville, Ontario.

Our sincere thanks and appreciation are extended to relatives, friends, neighbours, nurses, doctors and ministers and congregation of Rev. Dr. Ross Hall for cards, flowers and visits and mother Fred Green. We especially wish to thank Rev. Dr. Ross Hall for the lovely eulogy and the nurses in the Intensive Care Unit of the Belleville General Hospital for their kind attentions extended to our mother. Sorry Jr. Peters for his kind words at the funeral service and at the service. Sons, M. Sidwell, C. Green, Mrs. M. Green, Mrs. M. Sidwell, Mrs. C. Green and families.

Leslie R. Green and family.

Allore Faces Questioners

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The "separate school mess" can be solved quickly by calling me back to work", suspended superintendent F. B. Allore told about 200 ratepayers last night.

"I would accept reinstatement at any time," he said in reply to a question from the floor, after the meeting called to give him a chance to state his case was thrown open to queries from the listeners.

"I have no hatred," he added, "My wife and I decided that the ultimate test would be to allow hatred to take us over at any time."

Mr. Allore said he has had no charges levied against him, and "I don't know what I'd be defending" in hearings or court action.

"If...this board changes its mind, or a new board comes in, it could solve this mess quickly by calling me back to work. They could levy the charges, in a public meeting, and if they didn't like my answers could call a firm of management consultants, at the end of a year the consultants would recommendations were not carried out. I would be in trouble."

Before the meeting adjourned, a woman in the audience asked if the ratepayers present should request the board to bring in an outside firm of consultants.

"It would serve no purpose to bring in consultants now to judge what happened a year ago," replied Mr. Allore. "I don't know what records are there (in the board office). A firm should be brought in for recommendations now, and brought back to make a reassessment a year from now."

Other than reinstatement, there are two other courses of action to solve the situation, Mr. Allore said. One is court action, the other the setting up of a judicial inquiry by the department of education.

"As I was jointly hired by the board and the department of education, I can only be jointly fired," Mr. Allore said. "The board chooses, the department ratifies. It doesn't do this lightly. When a board terminates employment, the department is reluctant to get involved. The fact that the department has not taken action is general indication of its attitude."

Belleville solicitor Douglas Boyle commented that "it was grossly unfair of the department not to act," during the six months since the suspension.

"If the department favors reinstatement it could refer the matter back to the board, which is a nice way of saying 'hire him back' ", said Mr. Boyle.

"There might be a letter to that effect with the chairman now; I don't know," replied Mr. Allore.

The superintendent added that there are factors involved "that have nothing to do with this board or with me."

"When asked by Mr. Boyle if he were referring to the "frail blazing" nature of a superintendent's suspension, Mr. Allore replied that the situation might have an impact on future legislation.

Mr. Allore said his contract with the board is "permanent, until I resign." He added that it is similar to other contracts between superintendents and boards in the province. He told Mr. Boyle that it did not include any clauses terminating employment by mutual agreements.

He added that he had never agreed with the board that the reasons for his suspension should be kept secret.

Mr. Allore told the gathering that under section 83 of the school act, his suspension, if ratified by the department of education, would result in "disbarrment for life".

One ratepayer called for the superintendent to "bow out gracefully now, because of the blot on the board".

"How can I? They have blighted all possibility of my getting another position," replied Mr. Allore.

"But they were elected," insisted the man.

"Election does not give any board the right to act illegally, immorally or unethically," Mr. Allore shot back.

Mr. Allore read from documents setting out the terms drawn up by himself and his lawyer for settlement if his employment were terminated. Two attempts at reconciliation or settlement were made during the summer, he said, one involving the board, with K. J. Buckley acting on its behalf, and one involving private arbitration between Mr. Allore, Mr. Buckley and a Toronto clergyman who "volunteered to act as arbitrator

Both attempts failed, Mr. Allore said, because Mr. Buckley withdrew.

The terms of the second settlement discussion called for both parties to declare the situation a matter of differences during the period of changeover to county boards, and did not call into question of capacity, competency or integrity of Mr. Allore.

It also called for expunging and rescinding any reference to the suspension from all records. Mr. Allore said this meant that the pertinent minutes would be circled, the words "expunged and rescinded" written beside them, as an indication that after the minutes were written "they changed their minds, or the entry was an error".

Mr. Allore was to be paid a minimum of two years salary and certain costs and consideration as a termination settlement.

Mr. Allore said one of the board's principles was a lack of an established business administration unit to take over in Jan. 1969, because of the death of Carl Casey, administrator with the Belleville separate school board, just before the merger.

"Business administration is something a superintendent never touches if he has qualified people under him," said Mr. Allore. "But without experienced people, he must help out or take over."

Mrs. Carl Casey challenged Mr. Allore at this point, claiming that Mr. (Mr. Allore) kept the business administration position himself, instead of dividing the administrative duty to qualified staff as other boards had done.

"The public board hired six or seven men, why did we not have the same?" she asked. "You can't blame others if you didn't hire adequate business administration staff. You complain about Mr. Mercereau, but you hired him."

Mrs. Casey added that "we have more school accommodation now than we need and except for the Ontario Municipal Board stopping you there would be a new Michael Brennan school in Belleville now."

"If you had been given the backing of the board, could you have straightened out the administration of money?" asked J. J. Marta.

In reply, Mr. Allore said "we were in an almost superlative position in 1967."

"At the beginning of the year we had a $414,000 deficit, at the end of the year it was $116,000. We had a $117,000 tax underlevy that no one could predict. "All this I had to do from memory — there were all sorts of electronic accounting machines in the office, but none working."

Mrs. Casey continued to press for further answers to her questions, especially concerning the board's first accountant, no longer in its employment.

"You had a man with no accounting degree or school board experience, filling a minor position. He should have had two or three others over him. You did nothing to solve it — you kept the job yourself."

Mrs. Casey added that a special group organized last night's meeting — "not the ratepayers".

Homeless Hounds Here

Strayed and lost hounds, homeless since...hunting season, were trucked into Belleville yesterday by the department of lands and forests.

The dogs — 35 assorted shapes, sizes and breeds — are being lodged at the Ontario Humane Society Quinte shelter on Avonlough Road for reclamation by owners.

The plight of the hounds is as familiar as aftermath of deer-hunting season as venison stew.

Dogs used by hunters to raise deer in the bush at times will fail to return and wander at large in the countryside. Others are abandoned.

To offset the problem the department locates pounds at strategic points where a animals found by other hunters or local residents are held for a period of time.

A number of hounds already have been claimed at these local holding units — and more strays can be expected to turn up from the bush, a lands and forests game warden said yesterday.

At one time, the pounds — at Gunter, Deloro, Northbrook and Millbridge — held the animals until well past the hunting season.

However, since the formation of the OHS in the Quinte district with its spacious Belleville - area facilities, the strays now are transferred from the pounds as soon as possible after the hunt season.

Several dog owners were waiting expectantly outside the OHS shelter yesterday as when the lands and forests truck rolled up. However, no hounds were claimed.

OHS superintendent Harry Brown said the hounds will be held until next Monday at the shelter. After that they will be put up for adoption.

Claimants will be charged a flat $10 shelter fee.

Music for Fantastiks A Challenge for Trio

For the Belleville Theatre Guild to present the first musical in its history, musicians are of obvious importance and the guild has solved the problem in plenty of time for the production's opening tonight at the Pinnacle Playhouse.

The Fantastiks runs from tonight through Sunday night, reopening Tuesday to run through the following Saturday night, making 19 performances in all.

Three young musicians will be playing the entire score, from the songs in the production to the background melodies. Peter Robertson, 19, Bob Robertson, 21, and Marilyn Bailey, 17, are the musicians who have in the past four weeks learned, adjusted and arranged the music of the Fantastiks.

Preparing the music was not an easy chore for the trio. The original score, Peter explained, was done with piano, bass, harp and drums. Peter and Bob are guitar-playing brothers and Marilyn will handle piano duties.

Both guitarists use classical guitars in the show because of the Spanish overtones within it.

There are 12 or 13 major pieces of music throughout the play, although some of them are just piano pieces.

"We don't read," Peter said. "And there were no guitar arrangements for the music so we had to get the record and take the music off it and then arrange it for guitar."

The arranging of all that music kept both musicians up in the later hours, but their interest was aroused by the fact that this was the first time they had provided music for a play.

"This is a brand new bag for us. We played in a rock band in Toronto," Bob said.

"I like it," Peter commented. "It's good experience."

Marilyn has been playing piano for nine years and does have the ability to read music, but like her guitarist counterparts, providing music for a play is a brand new experience for her.

She has performed solo concerts and is the organist of College Hill United Church.

"It was difficult at the beginning," she said. "There was this one jazz piece, but I caught on."

Marilyn not only has a number of the songs in the production, but has to play some of the background and effect music as well.

Timing is important but she should have no problems if actors remember their cues.

The trio had only one complaint about providing the music for the Fantastiks — the lack of a little more time.

"Of course," Peter quipped, "there's no competition in ac-competing musical produc tions here."

Quiet Revolutions

Canada has come late to the revolution game — much later for instance than latter-day pioneers like the Irish and Latin Americans, not to mention the Russians in 1917.

Ireland had its Easter Rebellion in Dublin in 1916 and Latin America its off-and-on coups in first one country, then another, down the years. More recently there has been the recurring trouble in Ulster and occasional flurries of activity in South America. Those are the traditional images of the two regions — but is there nothing else? The answer is yes; both can point to other "revolutions" of a gentler, more subtle sort, reflecting trends to which the public alas pays little heed. From them Canada may be able to derive some lessons; for example we must not ignore the cultural treasures and creative drive of the majority of its population if we are to put other things to do than indulge in FLQ-style subversion.

A recent Irish visitor to Toronto was Kathleen Winston Byrne, radio and TV personality who is also woman's consultant to Irish Distillers Ltd. Mrs. Byrne said Ireland is no longer exporting people the way it did in the difficult days of the past. "Never have the Irish had it so good and it is getting better," she said, doubtless with an eye to the promotion in this country of her firm's product and to the sophisticated custom-made clothes of designers like Charles Haughey of Dublin who has also been in Toronto of late.

Revolution Latin American style is something else again these days. Apart from a few kidnappings and the fall of political prisoners few actual coups have been reported from there of late, and for us there is greater pleasure in reading about the contribution of some of its citizens to Canada's growing cosmopolitanism. For example, Nelly Arboleda of Colombia and Carmen Grau of Chile, two attractive young matrons in an overseas group learning English in Toronto. They are wives of students doing postgraduate work at the university and Mrs. Arboleda (who looks more Anglo-Saxon than a young woman of Spanish origin) will be staying on; her psychiatrist husband has accepted a position in Ottawa.

In Canada the FLQ, Maoists, New Leftists and sundry other subversives are doing their best, but nevertheless the country is far from being consumed by revolutionary fervor. Consider such other, more wholesome, activity as Belleville's community program schedule in the schools, or Toronto's inner-city after-school project. It seems there is some difficulty over financing of the latter, but as The Globe and Mail's Jo Carson puts it, the youngsters "have a place to go after classes and the program is not just a babysitting service. Arts, crafts, gymnastics, knitting are among the subjects of study."

All these activities represent the sort of quiet revolutions which are occurring every day. They have nothing to do with violence or flamboyant rhetoric, but rather with the positive workings of the mind which ensure man's orderly and civilized progress in the world.

Alive and Well!

Our main purpose in this life, someone has observed rather tritely, but with truth, "is to be alive." But how many of us, how many young people especially, are truly alive and using their mental and moral faculties to the full? How many fit columnist Richard Needham's observation which cited sometime the this: The kids are so bored and disinterested I have difficulty keeping down with them."

The other day we encountered a young woman who is the very antithesis of this concept, one who is truly alive and well, a teenager of engaging personality and boundless enthusiasm. She is Betty Lou Pokol, a Grade 13 student at Centennial secondary school in Welland and a Rotary scholar who returned recently from Japan.

Service club luncheon speeches are not notable for their warmth or humor, but then young women like Miss Pokol are a rare enough breed and rarer still on speakers' rosters. Suffice it to say that Miss Pokol is a master in the art of communication with a warmth of personality that had her audience of Belleville businessmen all attention for 45 minutes. Normally, a strict 30 minutes is enforced, and Miss Pokol was aware of this, but with feminine tact she breezed through another quarter of an hour.

The Welland student plans to become a nurse. Meanwhile, she should be invited to speak to as many student groups as possible, for she has great qualities of mind and spirit.

Architects and the Population Explosion

Floating Colleges and Computers Theme at Swiss Parley

By JEREMY HAMAND in UNESCO Features

— Ways of getting students of architecture out of the lecture hall and into real community projects;

— a "floating college" manned by teachers and students from industrialized countries which would dock in developing countries to help found training centres for architects and building technicians in the Third World needs so badly;

— an investigation of new computer techniques to release the architect from his drawing board and allow him to work more closely with community leaders, planners and politicians:

These were some of the ideas tossed about at the first international meeting on the education of the architect, organized by Unesco at the Federal Technical University in Zurich, Switzerland.

How are the world's schools of architecture facing up to the challenge of the population explosion? How can they, it would seem, and one speaker at the Zurich meeting even spoke of the architecture profession "fighting a battle of survival". Today's generation of students should be training to serve a new client — society, not just individuals or corporations, and with a new range of design methods and techniques. But too often these changes in the student's environment continue to be taught by methods that are both dull and ineffective, with the result in him that is academic and static. A remedy mentioned by several speakers was case-study project work which took staff and students into the field to study real community problems, introducing an immediacy and a reality impossible in the usual carefully organized school projects.

Thus, Oswald Ungers, Professor of Architecture at the Technical University of Berlin, described work at Cornell, where he had been teaching, traditional academic education had been abandoned for 4th and 5th year architecture students. Instead, they were offered a choice of five projects in city or rural areas which brought them into direct contact with the community.

A typical project was in a Black neighborhood in Baltimore where, with the authorities' agreement, a team of students spent two months or more talking to people and community leaders about their problems before working out a proposed solution. Apart from the expected long-term benefits to the community, the educational value of the project was enormous: students were forced to avoid jargon in their proposals and keep their feet on the ground ("Every lovely solution were just shot down in flames by the community leaders"; not least important, they came to realize that they were often not well equipped enough on their own to solve the complex problems involved — other disciplines such as transport planning, sociology, psychology, had to be brought in.

This project - oriented education may be a "good thing" in the wealthy countries in the developing countries it is the only answer, John Lloyd, Principal of the AA School of Architecture in London, told how a few years ago he had worked in a UN project to create a faculty at the University of Ghana to train both architects and a range of building technicians at different levels. Since the 200 students and 40 faculty members at Kumasi represented the biggest concentration of the country's design and building industrial capacity in national planning, he said, "it was more than just good education, it was our duty to get directly involved in community projects".

William C. Wheaton, Dean of the College of Environmental Design at the University of California, Berkeley, pointed out another advantage of "community studies": as well as helping the future architect to have a better idea of what the client wants, they help professional groups to understand what kind of decisions they can influence and what decisions are entirely beyond their control. This was part of the process of what Dean Wheaton called "involving the public in design decisions" a process he would like to see greatly developed. "What sometimes worries me more than how to educate my students," he said, "is how to educate the other 27,000 students at the University of California, of their responsibilities as future community members".

Professor Ungers placed his imaginative proposal at Cornell for "floating and mobile study stations". A task force of students and faculty members would travel by special train — equipped with a reference library, computer console, drawing offices, etc. — to communities in urgent need of help in solving their planning and housing problems. And if wanting to needy communities, why not service to the developing world? Taking his idea one step further, Professor Ungers suggested that an obsolete aircraft carrier or similar vessel could be equipped and sent as a "floating college" overseas, to spend perhaps 6 to 12 months in port in an Asian or African country providing a useful start for a new university or institute, then sailing on elsewhere.

This might prove to be a way of getting over some of the main snags in the international exchange of teachers and students. No one was in any doubt about the great value of such exchanges in a world where the rich countries have if anything too many architects and designers while the poor countries have virtually none — and so become victims to an insidious form of neo-colonialism (a case was cited of a sizeable African country where virtually every important building was built by the same firm of architects from the ex-colonial power!); but many speakers underlined the practical difficulties involved.

Dean Wheaton explained that 60 per cent of the postgraduating students from overseas at his university never return to their home countries, adding: "the rich are made richer and the poor made poorer by this process". The Chairman of the meeting, Jai Ratan Bhalla, President of the Commonwealth Association of Architects, pointed out that foreign expertise, while welcome was exceedingly expensive for developing countries: professors of architecture in the United States earn at about 10 times as much as they did in his country, India. And he and Derykl Mutton, an architect with the Kenyan Ministry of Works, had hard words for those who sent local experts from the industrialized countries could achieve anything useful in two months or a year. It usually took that long just to begin to understand the special situation of developing countries, they said, and many years were needed to make a useful contribution.

What of the future of architecture? One factor certain to make an impact is electronic data processing. Computers can — and will — help architects in many ways: while making accurate forecasts of population growth rates and migration trends; in "scanning the millions of possible alternatives the architect is faced with and selecting the one with the lowest cost and highest benefit; and, unexpectedly, in graphic work — converting a set of sketches into three-dimensional drawings and even converting these drawings into specifications and reckoning the architect from the non-creative part of his drawing work and giving him more time to co-ordinate the wishes of the community, the planners and the politicians.

"Disposable" housing is also likely to become a reality. Here the architect will have the choice between creating a very cheap structure, which can be simply burnt down after perhaps five years, and a more solid basic structure, which itself may last 100 years, but which can be completely transformed inside as often as is necessary. In the developing countries, we are likely to see more self-help projects like the one described in Chile, where the government provided materials, the services of architects and prefabricated elements up to 90 per cent of the cost of the actual construction work was done by the people themselves, so that they ended up with a house that they really thought of as their own. Another good example, already introduced in the Indian state of Rajasthan, is "rationalized" building, where instead of being prefabricated in a factory, parts are made by local workers and crowded to standard sizes, so that they can be assembled by unskilled labor in conjunction with a set of standard plans.

This cruel element of building will probably never die out — even in the most highly industrialized countries. Dean Wheaton spoke of a growing interest among his students in just this aspect of architecture, and claimed that as mass building came increasingly to predominate in the future, so the urge to "build your own thing" would grow too.

Finally, the interest of today' generation of students in politics was seen by many as a positive force. According to John Lloyd, architects have remained on the sidelines too long. Citing the case of Peterborough one of Britain's much-praised New Towns, he described how its size and location had been fixed by purely political criteria long before architects and planners had appeared on the scene. The town, he said, was built on top of the first hill hit by southwesterly gales of the North Atlantic, a situation that no architect, planner or geographer would ever have chosen!

But it is not enough for architects to cry over spilt milk, added Professor Lloyd: they must be less passive, more actively involved, readier to form political pressure groups — for if they, as experts, are not concerned with the politics of planning decisions, how can the public be expected to care about the issues at stake? If democracy is not to fly out of the window where planning, housing and the environment are concerned, this aspect of the architect's education must not be overlooked in a world where politicians and economists will find it increasingly easy to impose their solutions.

The Seventies, Sex and

All That

Letter to the Hamilton Spectator

Recently I watched, for the first time, "Here Come the 70s" on TV. Although the prospect of a machine-type city, however ingeniously designed and eye-appealing, appalls me, I thought the program was interesting enough and important enough to watch.

The shot of the nude woman walking across a beach into the water caused me some dismay. If this is what is coming in the seventies, this type of television programming and that type of film, we have reason for concern.

At one time there was a self-regulating code in the movie industry, but we have measured so much that we no longer need the impediments of regulations to assure good taste in movies or any form of entertainment. (Yes, I realize good taste is a relative term open to interpretation). In fact we have matured to the extent that we have eliminated obscenity! This is certainly a remarkable achievement. We can do these things now by legislation and re-definition without any aid from the bogeyman of a slavish past once known as high moral standards (now defined as repression which together with frustration frightens us more than nuclear war).

Now that the theatre and movies have done us the good service of helping us accept as the disputable fact that sex is a plaything, anywhere, anytime, what is healthy we are willing to invite in to our living rooms as our constant companion. It now remains and advises us which are the products of the best quality. Some cars have the invaluable characteristic of giving a man sex appeal. This is standard equipment.

Once upon a time, perhaps 10 or 15 eons ago, it was argued that individuals had the choice of seeing only movies and TV programs which did not offend them. This is becoming increasingly difficult.

W. Goossen,
Hamilton.

Blind persons in the community will be guests of the Canadian Concert Association for the new series of concerts this season. The concert to which the blind were invited last season was so greatly enjoyed by them that the association arranged that they should be special guests at future concerts.

Another link in the new lighting system that the city council and Belleville Hydro Electric Commission have adopted will be connected officially tonight, when 35 lights, the same as were placed on Dundas St. E. will be turned on, on Highland Ave. and Bridge St. N.

At the present time, according to Dr. G. S. Cronk, Medical Health Officer, there is not a single case of contagious disease in the city of Belleville.

James V. C. Truaisch has been appointed postmaster after 31 years of service in the post office here.

An enjoyable dance was given in Bennett's Academy under the auspices of St. Michael's Athletic Association. Excellent music was furnished by the F. A. Cousins' Six Piece Orchestra of Toronto. A vocal solo by Harold Barrett was much enjoyed. Much credit is due to the efforts of the following officers of the association: president, Dr. Daly: vice-president, Mr. Hamm: treasurer, F. M. Barrett; secretary, A. C. Meagher.

Nov. 18, 1970 . . .

Ernest Augustus, British-born prince of Hanover, died 119 years ago today—in 1851—after ruling since separation of Hannover from the English Crown in 1837. When Queen Victoria succeeded to the throne, Salic Law required a male ruler for Hannover. Under the law of 1705, all lineal descendants of Ernest's great-great aunt, Princess Sophia, may claim British citizenship.

1835—The Board of Broadcast Governors announced regulations governing television broadcasting.

1866—The United States cargo liner Carl D. Bradley sank in Lake Michigan with a loss of 33 lives.

1940—Gold miners in the Kirkland Lake area of Northern Ontario struck in demands for union recognition.

1926—The Toronto Globe bought the rival Mail and Empire and merged the two papers as The Globe and Mail.

1929—A 15-foot tidal wave struck part of Newfoundland's southwest coast, killing 27 persons and causing $1 million damage.

1903—The United States-Panama treaty for the canal was ratified.

1898—The USS Maine was launched.

Allore Says Clique Ousted Him

One of the "deliberate attempts to create disorder," occurred at the board meeting of Feb. 18, 1970, said Mr. Allore, when a 1969 summary of expenditure was presented. This report had no summary of revenue. In its place was a terminology and a compilation of statistics leading to gross misunderstandings, he said.

"A comparison of this year-end report with the auditor's statement of the same period will show the tactics described," read Mr. Allore. At this same meeting a statement was issued about the projection figures (of pupil enrolment) used in 1969.

"I informed Mr. Buckley . . . that this report had gross errors in it, and that he should refute them as the business administrator had not submitted them to a board committee for study and research on their accuracy. The newspaper account of that meeting will show that Mr. Puquet (Edgar) was not required to verify his statements, nor was I asked to comment on them."

Early in April, Mr. Allore said, Mr. Buckley and Mr. Kreese met with him, and Mr. Buckley said the board wanted his resignation within two weeks.

The board chairman gave Mr. Allore five reasons for the demand. As listed by Mr. Allore they were: "I was too strong for the board; board members didn't know they were going anywhere; I was the cause of friction between communities; he wanted all the trustees back for another term, and I wasn't getting along with second-line staff."

In reply, the superintendent said he recommended the board bring in a "reputable and established management consultant firm to diagnose and make recommendations".

Mr. Buckley, Mr. Allore continued, said that "there was an underground movement against me and that I would have to be a magician to get out of this one."

Following the request for his resignation May 1, Mr. Allore called for a board meeting May 7, to present him with the reasons for the May 1 meeting and "to afford an opportunity to talk and work out the problems that did exist."

During the week before the meeting, Mr. Allore said "it appears that one or more secret meetings were held for some of the trustees".

Mr. Allore called on Mr. Buckley to play to the public the tapes of the full proceedings of the May 7 meeting and "to allow them to be transcribed as is required by school law".

"I would like to point out that throughout the development of this conspiracy, Magr. J. P. Sullivan and Robert Lucy did everything humanly possible to bring reason, logic and evidence to the forefront," said Mr. Allore. "They could not do so, because the fence-straddlers gave the power clique their support through indifference."

"The story of reconciliation efforts is one which involved Mr. Buckley alone, and he operated independently from that point, reporting to the board only what, how and when he chose," Mr. Allore added.

Concluding his formal presentation, Mr. Allore told the ratepayers: "Loyalty, justice and truth await your rescue."

Posters Urge New -Board

Signs that school board nominations are imminent decorated St. Michael's auditorium last night as local separate school ratepayers gathered to hear suspended separate school superintendent F. B. Allore present his case to the public.

Six posters had been placed at the front of the hall, reading: "We need a new board — 17 years is too long"; "Vote responsibly, change the board", and "Reinstate Mr. Allore."

However, no one in the crowd declared that he would stand for nomination next Monday.

Japan Life Recalled

The Japanese take great pride in their education and work hard to that end. Getting into colleges and universities however is much more difficult than in Canada and the suicide rate among students who fail is high — "for the simple reason that if they do not get in it is the end of the world for them."

This and other aspects of a year spent in Japan were described to Rotarians yesterday by Betty Lou Pokol, a Grade 13 student and Rotary scholar from Welland.

Miss Pokol, who attends Centennial School in the Niagara peninsula city, said that Japan had better preparation for its students. Offices and banks have their own tests which, taken in conjunction with interviews, guide employers in making a choice.

"Everyone there has an idea of where he is going, whereas in Canada students will go to universities and choose jobs afterwards.

Miss Pokol, who spent a month in Grade One primary school on arrival to learn the rudiments of Japanese, stayed with Japanese families and later entered high school there. She returned to Canada feeling "part Japanese."

A tall young woman in a land where the people are of comparatively small stature, Miss Pokol was referred to jestingly by one of her hosts as "this giant." In crowded buses and trains she found herself the target of curious stares and would surprise her fellow passengers by speaking to them in their own language.

The small daughter of one family with whom she stayed asked her: "When my hair gets golden like yours, can I come to Canada?"

Miss Pokol said compared with girls back home, Japanese girls seemed on the immature side, but it depended on the basis of judgment on the basis of judgment. In other ways it was far other way round and she was impressed by Japanese family life.

Japanese women, she said, preferred creative activity to female gossip, like the study of such traditional national arts as flower arranging. She studied this herself, together with the tea ceremony and Japanese calligraphy. She also taught English in a boys' high school — "and I learned judo, too," she added with a laugh.

Holy Trinity Guild Holds Tea, Bazaar

SIZES
10½-22½

Autumn decor highlighted the annual tea and bazaar held by Holy Trinity Women's Guild, Shannonville, recently.

Warmly greeting the guests at the entrance to the hall was the president Mrs. Helen Spencer assisted by Rev. John Neal and Mrs. Doris Johnson.

Hostess for the tea room was Mrs. Kaye Hill assisted by Mrs. Mary Fletcher and Susan, Miss Judy Sager and Mrs.: Velma Cook. Here the attractive tea table was centred with colorful arrangements of flowers and flanked with tapering candles.

Tea was poured by Mrs. J. Kilburn, Mrs. P. Wright, Mrs. R. Wallbridge of Belleville; Mrs. Don McLaren, Mrs. J. Jordan of Read; Mrs. Jean Claus of Deseronto; Mrs. Bates of Tyendinaga Township, Mrs. H. Hart of Point Anne; Mrs. Asa Cook and Mrs. A. Wilson of Shannonville.

Making the tea and arranging the plates of petite sandwiches and tasty cookies were Mrs. Florrie Sager, Mrs. Ruth Rychman and Mrs. Mary McKenzie.

Among the sales booths, the sewing table seems the most popular, especially at this time of year. Many colorful aprons, knit goods, embroidery and needlework were sold by Mrs. Francis Little, Mrs. Stella Broadman and Mrs. Minnie Lethbridge.

The Christmas table also a popular drawing card had an assortment of candles, corsages, ribbon ornaments and other items and was convened by Mrs. Leah Reid.

A busy corner was the bake table with its many pies, tarts, homemade bread and buns and other sweet goods. These were sold by Mrs. Myrtle Vivian and Mrs. Dorothy Ross.

The fish pond attracted the little folks with numerous small favors and this was tended by Mrs. Myrtle Little.

Successful Living

There Is A Limit to the Amount One Can Give

By DORIS CLARK

Jeanie despised Tom, when they finally broke up. Yet Tom was one of the best natured, kindest people you would ever want to meet. He was bewildered by her attitude.

Why? When he analyzed it, and looked back over the 12 unhappy years he had spent with the wife from whom he was now separated, he realized that he had tried to make her happy by giving her everything she wanted.

Jeanie had been a spoiled child. Had learned to demand what she wanted, then when she got it, it did not bring something more to be wanted.

This unhappy woman had never learned the self-discipline which would give her reasonable balance in accepting the gifts and sacrifices of others. If Tom had realized, earlier, that what she needed was to be controlled and limited, that she needed help in learning adult ways of behaving. In learning to consider others, and to give rather than to get, their marriage might have been saved.

As it is, they are two disillusioned people.

Dear Doris: My children don't like me. My husband is afraid of me. I don't get all my work done. I'm afraid to go out in the back yard where neighbors will see me in case they board me having one of my tantrums.

I don't know what I need, but I can't continue wiping noses and changing diapers, and taking dirty marks off the walls and stains off the rug. People think my husband is great and that I'm very lucky.

Maybe it is me. Maybe I'm just no good. — Trapped.

Dear Trapped: You aren't the first mother of six who blew her top. But having tantrums as a way of life never brought a person friends.

You should be using all the wits you've got, not to berate your fate, but to figure ways and means of getting help, of getting change, of getting peace of mind.

When you communicate with your husband, do it as if you liked him. Sit down with him: point out the help you need and get him to work with you in organizing the chores. Each child needs to be a helper and will love to be trusted and counted on.

My Tips For Harrassed Homemakers is so fu way to you, but it is just a start. The rest is up to you.

* * *

Dear Doris: I have need of some literature on the nature of sex, for a young girl of 14.

I appreciate your column greatly. The teen - agers will read it, when they don't want mother's advice. — Mother of One.

Dear Mother: No mother needs to go without the help there is now in telling her young people the facts of life. A pile of literature can get words into your mouth. And the sooner you start to make this subject an open book between you, the better.

It isn't that teen-agers don't want to know what mother thinks about things. They do. But to ask would seem like a commitment to take your advice. Part of growing up is a real anxiety to stand on one's own feet.

Young people don't have to take my advice; and reading my column doesn't commit anyone to anything.

If we can help our boys and girls to look at things from two or three points of view it stimulates their own thinking. And that's the best thing to do after all.

(What's troubling you? Putting it on paper to Doris is the first step towards solving your problem.)

Ann Landers

Small Shoe Size Involves Problem

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You've handled just about every problem under the sun but never one like mine. I'm a guy who has a very small foot. I wear a size 8C shoe. Men's shoe stores do not carry my size. For the past several years I've been going to women's shoe stores and getting a perfect fit. As you know, Ann, women's styles have become very masculine which is a break for me. Boots are the in thing now.

My girl has been going with me when I buy shoes and naturally the salesperson thinks she is the customer. When they find out I'm not, the customer they darn near faint. It bothers my girl a lot. Last week she refused to go shoe shopping with me. I hate to go into a women's shoe store alone. Do you have any suggestions? — BOOTS.

DEAR BOOTS: Have you considered the boys' shoe department? If not, why not? Give it a try and if you can't find what you want, go back to the women's department — alone if necessary.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was interested in the overheated response you received from "Boiling Over." She wrote that you had insulted every arthritic in the country by saying arthritis can be caused by gossipers. You did right to let people know this. Many don't know until it's too late.

You are probably aware that highly irascible people who cannot find a suitable outlet for their suppressed rage sometimes develope arthritis. It is possible that you helped that woman immensely by supplying her with an external object for her anger. Even though she misunderstood, she may be less apt to have an attack of arthritis after having written that vitriolic letter — and it didn't hurt you in the least. Keep up the good work. — KARL MENNINGER, M.D.

DEAR DR. KARL: Your good letter serves a double purpose. First, it points out that arthritis, like ulcers, migraine headaches and many other organic illnesses, can result from unresolved emotional problems. Second, an angry letter to Ann Landers allows a writer to unload his hostility and, as you said, it doesn't hurt me a bit. Thank you for the double assist.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: So you don't want drop-in company? Well, that's your business. But please don't answer for me or for millions of other down-in-earth folks who love it when friends and neighbors come by for a surprise "Howdy!"

Every week end then you publish a letter from some sourpuss who hates surprise visitors. You take her side and refer to a sign a famous person hung on his front door: "If you are welcome you are not expected and not wanted. Go home."

I was raised by big-hearted, open-handed parents who taught us to be hospitable night or day, no matter who drops in. Some people just need to talk. I feel honored when a guest shows up. If it's mealtime we share whatever is on our table. I've never had a caller I wasn't glad to see. Too bad you can't say the same. — JUST PLAIN FOLKS.

DEAR FOLKS: I can say the same. I've never had a caller I wasn't glad to see either — at least not in the last ten years. My friends have the message.

I was raised by open-handed parents, too, but I was taught to respect other people's privacy. You are right when you say "some people just need to talk." I devote approximately 10 to 12 hours a day to those people, and in order to help them I must schedule my time and guard it carefully.

B and P Club Enjoys Sari Demonstration

An interesting demonstration on "How to drape a sari" highlighted the program, when the Belleville Business and Professional Women's Club held its regular meeting at the Sun Valley Motor Inn, Monday evening.

A number of new members also attended as the result of a get - acquainted tea and chicken party held Nov. 9 at the home of Mrs. Dorothy Brown and convened by membership chairman Mrs. Gloria McNeil.

During the business portion of the meeting, the president Miss Jeanne Stephenson reported on the district meeting held in Ottawa the weekend of Nov. 1 which she had attended as a delegate. At this time also Mrs. Wilma Carr chairman of the ways and means committee put forth two excellent suggestions for the club to raise money. The one was accepted and the second will be decided on pending further information by the ways and means committee.

Mrs. Susan Korah, a native of India demonstrated the proper procedure in draping a sari. She also instructed members Dolly Reed, Dorothy Brown and Peggy Weed how to drape a sari for themselves to the delight and enjoyment of the other members, with the end results a most pleasing effect.

Plans were discussed for the Christmas party to be held at Sun Valley, Dec. 14.

PRINCE EDWARD - BELLEVILLE LADIES' CLUB

Mrs. J. Parrot showed slides of her trip to the Canary Islands where the Homebuilders' Convention was held, during the November 14 meeting of the Prince Edward - Belleville Ladies' club held at the recreation centre with an attendance of 33 members and two visitors.

Mrs. Parrott's pictures showed a large old church, named after Columbus, girls' schools and the Maspalomas Oasis Hotel where accommodation must be reserved a year in advance, all taken in the Island which is about 60 miles by 30 miles. She also showed pictures of Lisbon, Portugal from where Cohens bus started out on his voyage to the Western world and of the hotel where the Queen stays when she visits the islands. Before concluding, she showed a picture of a beautiful scene in Lonsdale and of the Mary Ritchie nurses' residence in Belleville, then reminding the viewers that although one may visit faraway places and admire their beauty there is beauty around our own city too.

Mrs. Parrott was presented with a gift from the club. The meeting was chaired by Mrs. F. Henderson, who conducted a short memorial, a mark of respect to the fallen soldiers and remember those who were still suffering from the wars.

The December meeting will be the annual turkey supper to be held on December 9 at 6.30 p.m. The Victoria Willing Workers will cater for it.

Lunch was served by the group led by Mrs. O. White and Mrs. A. Mitchell and a social time was enjoyed by all.

200 Attend 50th Anniversary Party For Laurel Rebekah Lodge 211

The 50th birthday party of Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211, was celebrated with a roast pork dinner served to 200 members and guests by the United Church Women of Mount Pleasant. The invocation was given by the Rev. Charles Staples of Stirling. Sis. Eileen Woodcox, Jr P.N.G. acting as Chairman, extended a warm welcome to all on behalf of Laurel Lodge.

Following the toast to the Queen, Bro. Earl Fox, past grand master introduced the head table guests who were: from Kingston, Belleville, Tweed, Madoc, Thomasburg, Picton and Stirling. The toast to Grand Lodge was proposed by Bro. Charles Carter, PNG and responded to by Bro. Earl Fox, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Ontario. The toast to the Rebekah Assembly was proposed by Sis. Bessie Patterson and the response was made by Sis. HOME and SCHOOL NEWS

The November meeting of the King George Home and School Association was held in the school auditorium with a good number of interested parents in attendance.

A short business meeting was held followed by the showing of two films entitled, "Helicopter Canada" and "The Rise and Fall of the Great Lakes". Both films were much enjoyed by those in attendance as the first gave a broad look at this beautiful country from sea to sea and the second film, which was nominated for an Academy Award, gave us insight into today's pollution problems in the Great Lakes.

The meeting closed with refreshments served.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

An Economical Dessert Dish

By MARY MOORE

At a quick glance our market looked like a red and green sea. Apples and squashes were in abundance.

My daughter-in-law Margaret told me they were into their third bushel of apples this fall and that she was buying "seconds" while they were in good shape.

The dessert I am giving you today I predict will be a favorite for it is economical and the batter is light and easy.

DUTCH APPLE CAKE
(Serves 6)

2 tbsps. butter or margarine
2 tbsps. shortening
¼ cup granulated sugar
1 egg
1½ cups sifted cake and pastry (or all-purpose) flour
¼ tsp. nutmeg
1¼ tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
½ cup milk
3 cups pealed, cored, quartered, sliced apples (about 2½ large)
¼ cup light brown sugar
2 tbsps. melted butter

Into batter bowl measure the butter, shortening, sugar and egg and beat until light. Sift the sifted flour with the nutmeg, baking powder and salt. Add to the creamed mixture along with the milk and beat with beaters about 30 seconds or until ingredients are just blended. Spread batter evenly in greased 8" sq. pan. Arrange apple slices (¼" thick crescents) in parallel rows on top, pressing slightly into batter. With your fingers sprinkle brown sugar over, then drizzle melted butter evenly over. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 40-45 min. or until golden and apples may be pierced with fork. Serve warm with milk.

Amorc Holds Special Meeting

The Quinte Chapter of the Rosicrucian Order, AMORC, were hosts to the Toronto Lodge at a special meeting in the Masonic Temple on Saturday, November 14.

Registration began at 7.30 p.m. with the Master, Mrs. Marion Bucher, welcoming the members and their friends. Hugh Wheeldon, Inspector General for the Toronto area, brought warm greetings and introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Francesca Harrold.

Mrs. Harrold, who is well known in Toronto Lodge for her clearly understood lectures, presented a demonstration and experiment in concentration and meditation. She emphasized that concentration is the first step and is an active process involving work and will power. Using colored slides and music she illustrated how concentration merges into the second stage of passive contemplation. Then the third stage, meditation, is a letting go or a complete physical and mental relaxation.

The members were given an opportunity to take part in the experiment and discuss their results.

Refreshments were served during a happy social hour.

Members were present from Toronto, Hamilton, Peterborough, Kingston, Trenton and Prince Edward County.

UCW Meetings

MELROSE UCW

MELROSE — Mrs. Ken McMechan presided at the Melrose United Church Women opened the recent meeting held at the home of Mrs. Leslie McLaren.

After the opening proceedures, a number of reports were given which included the treasurer's report revealing a bank balance of $219.35. Funds had been raised by catering for a wedding and a small sum was realized from the food display and sale at the Shannonville Fair. From this amount ten dollars will be donated to the Mental Health Association. Tickets for a turkey supper to be held Nov. 13 in the church hall were given to two boys injured in sports activities. A nominating committee was appointed to bring in a slate of officers for the coming year.

As delegate to the recent fall rally at Eastminster Church, Belleville, Mrs. McLaren reported on the interling program. She stated the Melrose evening unit was well represented and each commented on the enjoyable day.

Mrs. William English as program convener led in a discussion on various beliefs and gave in some length, the beliefs of Jehovah's Witnesses. Mrs. Charles Bates Jr. dealt with Mormon religion and their dedicated way of life.

A number of thoughts on "What is wrong with the United Church" were given and in answer to the roll call. The general feeling was that it may lose itself if it is not prepared to get involved in ministering to the world.

A humorous skit was enacted by Dorothy Lazier and Jean Macfarlane after which the hostess and lunch committee served refreshments.

Stalling Causes Backlog

Stiff Rules Urged for Visitors Seeking Immigrant Status

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister Otto Lang had praise Tuesday for a report to the government which recommends stiff new restrictions on the legal rights of visitors to Canada seeking to obtain landed immigrant status.

The report, prepared by Toronto lawyer Joseph Sedgwick, recommends amendments to immigration laws and regulations to end legal stalling by visitors who are ordered deported after failing to qualify for landed immigrant status.

Mr. Lang told reporters the report had been designed to provide a focus for both government and public attention on the problem of a huge backlog of appeals to the Immigration Appeal Board from visitors seeking to stay in the country.

Recommendations based on a study of the report would be presented to Parliament by the government in due course, the minister said.

He added that Mr. Sedgwick's endorsement of a proposal to transfer to a special security board hearings on appeals involving security cases made "significant sense."

The report, which Mr. Lang had just tabled, was commissioned last June by then immigration minister Allan MacEachen after studies indicated widespread abuse of 1967 changes in immigration regulations.

The changes have permitted visitors to apply for landed immigrant status after arriving in the country and those who fail to qualify under the department's point-rating system are eligible to appeal to the independent appeal board.

Mr. Sedgwick's report says the average time lag between a deportation order and a hearing before the board is about 18 months and "will be two years by the end of 1979. There was a backlog of close to 3,200 cases as of August," with appeals arriving at the rate of 400 monthly. The report says the board can handle about 1,200 cases annually.

Recommended is an end to the right to appeal to the board by rejected visitors. Instead they would be entitled to an inquiry held their case by an officer of the immigration department itself. Leave to appeal would be granted by the board only in special cases.

The alternative, Mr. Sedgwick reports, would be to greatly increase the staff of the immigration division and the personnel of the appeal board. It would be, he states, an unwarranted expense of tax money "solely to get rid of persons who do not meet our immigration standards."

The problem has become acute with an increase to 12,000 last year from 29,000 in 1968 of applications for landed status from visitors. About 77 per cent are acceptable and cause no problem, the report says. The trouble is caused by "applicants who do not qualify, many of whom intend to exhaust all their legal remedies before leaving."

Mr. Sedgwick said many people succeed in their appeals by having "entrenched themselves" in Canadian society during the long waiting period.

An official of the immigration department said the recommendations would affect principally visitors to Canada from southern Europe who have heard they can win permanent entry to the country by stalling long enough to find a job, learn the language and get married.

Mr. Sedgwick recommends that the government accept the proposal of the royal commission on security for creation of a special review board to look into applications for landed status of subversives.

He also suggests that requests for political asylum would best be handled by the immigration minister himself rather than the immigration appeal board.

To deal with its backlog, the report says, the board should first go through its files and approve all cases which would probably be accepted on compassionate grounds. To deal with the remaining appeals, the board should then be temporarily enlarged.

Choquette Confirms FLQ Report Wanted Men Fooled Police

QUEBEC (CP)—Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said Tuesday that police who arrested a suspect in the kidnapping and slaying of former labor minister Pierre Laporte were unaware three other suspects were hiding in a secret compartment in the same apartment where the arrest was made.

Mr. Choquette told the Quebec national assembly the three men were apparently hiding in a walk-in clothes closet in the west-end Montreal apartment when Bernard Lortie was arrested Nov. 6.

The minister was replying to a question from Opposition Leader Jean-Jacques Bertrand.

Lortie, a 19-year-old student, was found hiding in another closet.

Mr. Choquette said brothers Paul and Jacques Rose and Francis Simard were apparently in the secret closet and escaped when, at 6:30 p.m. the following day, police on guard in the apartment left temporarily.

He said that before leaving, the officers made sure both the front and back doors were locked but when they returned, they found the back door open. Another search led to the finding of the secret compartment.

Referring to the oversight in not finding the hiding place in the first search, Mr. Choquette said he had every reason to believe "that this place was particularly well hidden. There was no reason to believe people could hide in that secret compartment."

The justice minister said that although police had not been entirely successful in their investigations of the kidnappings so far, this was no time to criticize them.

He described as "inopportune" a statement by Prime Minister Trudeau in the Commons Nov. 10 in which Mr. Trudeau said the failure of police investigation was part of the reason for the invocation of the War Measures Act. Mr. Choquette said the remark could have affected police morale.

Mr. Trudeau later explained that police were dealing with an entirely new situation. They had not been trained to combat this type of problem.

A newspaper report in Montreal said a high-level police investigation is under way to determine how a tape recording of two incarcerated persons was smuggled out of provincial police headquarters where they are being detained.

The three-minute recording by lawyer Robert Lecleroc and labor leader Michel Chartrand, both charged with seditious conspiracy and being members of the outlawed FLQ, was played Tuesday at a news conference.

The Gazette quotes an unidentified QPP spokesman as saying the force's police director, Maurice St. Pierre, is aware of the tape recording and "something is going to be done about it."

In Quebec, Premier Robert Bourassa also confirmed that a receptionist at his Montreal office was arrested last month during the police crackdowns on suspected terrorist sympathizers in the province.

The receptionist, Jocelyne Despatie, 21, was charged last Friday with seditious conspiracy and with being a member or professing to be a member of the FLQ.

The premier said the government will take all necessary measures to assure the majority of the state.

Mr. Choquette ordered Tuesday a "screening" of all civil servants working close to the premier in a move to filter out any FLQ listeners who may have infiltrated strategic government posts.

In Ottawa, Mr. Trudeau denied in the Commons any knowledge or reports that Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand has cleaned that members of the FLQ in Quebec "controlled" the French-language network of the CBC.

And Senator Paul Desruisseaux (L-Quebec) told the Senate Tuesday Quebecers are being brainwashed in a situation somewhat comparable with Nazi Germany's in 1937.

Senator Desruisseaux said unemployment and education are partly responsible for spreading unrest and increased demand for separation in Quebec.

He said that during the last few years hundreds of teachers and professors from abroad had obtained jobs in Quebec without proper screening.

"In Quebec too many new extremist educators from other countries found easy grounds for preaching their doctrines and personal philosophy outside of their assigned courses."

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League Eastern Ontario Club

We have just received a letter from one of our members in Shannonville, Ont. who has recently returned from Florida and informs us that he was fined $20 for supposedly driving 60 miles an hour in a 35-mile zone, which was not marked, in Crestview, Georgia. He noticed further south on highway 301, at Jesup and Valdosta, Georgia, there were also speed traps. We want to remind our members that there is another speed trap just south of Richmond, Virginia, on highway 95 and 301 between Petersburg, Va., and the North Carolina border. Anyone travelling this route whether en route to Florida should reduce speed in these areas.

QUESTION: We have been told it is cheaper to live in Florida than in the northern states of Canada. Is this true? We hope to rent an efficiency and cook our own meals.

ANSWER: Yes, we do believe it is somewhat cheaper to live in Florida than in most other parts of this continent. Savings are primarily in winter clothing, house heating, property and income taxes. While in Florida watch the sales the chain grocery stores put on for some worthwhile savings. With large chain grocery stores been offering good discounts, we think you'll find that our food prices are about the same as theirs.

QUESTION: I have been told that a good way to live in Florida is in a mobile home in a nice mobile home community. Would you recommend this?

ANSWER: Mobile home living in Florida continues to be increasingly popular and it is amazing how many people of various age groups have adopted this way of life. The mobile homes of today are almost on a par with many of the conventional - type homes being constructed and are considerably less expensive.

If you visit Florida, why not rent one for a while and live in it before you make any long-term, definite decisions.

QUESTION: We would like take our trailer to Florida this winter. Will you please give us information on camping facilities there?

ANSWER: During the past few years it has been noticeable that more Canadians are taking camping trips to Florida. Since the climate makes camping a year-round recreation, the State has found it advisable to offer extensive facilities ranging from modern, well developed parks to remote forest retreats. In the areas, campers are free to enjoy the natural beauty of Florida's beaches, lakes, rivers and woodlands.

Florida State Parks require that a person 21 years of age or older, or married people 18 years of age or older be present in any camp groups. No pets are allowed to remain in the parks overnight. To book a reservation in a park the request must be received in writing or in person and must be for a minimum of four days. Camping fees in the Florida state parks are $2.50 (plus tax) per day and sites with electricity outlets are 50 cents (plus tax) additional per day. In addition to the state parks there are many fine privately owned campgrounds. Fees at these range from $2.50 to $4 per night. Mosquitoes can make life miserable for campers and repellants should be included in camping equipment. Also, good netting or screening is almost a must, especially for sleeping quarters. If you are a member of the Ontario Motor League, 2300 Princess Street, Kingston, or at 123 Front St., Belleville, you may pick up one of our Florida campground directories free of charge. This book lists all the approved campsites in Florida and a description of facilities and price of each one.

QUESTION: Is the Disney World attraction at Orlando, Florida open to the public yet and is there anything that can be seen there at this time?

ANSWER: The Walt Disney World has a preview centre which hundreds of tourists and local residents visit daily. It reveals to these visitors what is in store when this big attraction officially opens in October, 1971.

Try to Keep Eaton Auto Plant Open

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Officials of the provincial department of trade and development are expected to meet with representatives of Eaton Automotive Ltd. to see if alternate product can be produced at the plant which is to close by next June.

S. W. Clarkson, the department's deputy minister, said his department will be working with the department of labor. The shutdown was announced Monday by a representative of the parent firm, Eaton Yale and Towne Ltd., of Cleveland.

Robert Nickerson, international representative of the United Auto Workers, said Monday the union intends to fight the decision to close and that the 139 workers, members of Local 27, might strike.

Letters in French

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa said Tuesday his cabinet has decided that all government correspondence with businesses, public organizations and institutions in Quebec should be issued in French only.

Mr. Bourassa also said the cabinet decided that communication with individual citizens should be done in both English and French.

The premier said that to deal exclusively in French with all Quebecers might create prejudices.

He was replying to questions from Opposition Leader Jean-Jacques Bertrand.

Opposition Makes Charge

New Public Order Act Confers Kind of Powers Given Hitler

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition parties delivered a heat-thumping Ca m mons denunciation Tuesday of what spokesmen described as the government's entrenched resistance to suggested changes in the proposed public order bill.

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said that without some of these changes, the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, would give the government "the same kind of powers as were handed to Adolf Hitler."

Debate on the public order bill is not expected to resume until next Monday. Today and Thursday the House is to debate a Conservative motion moving government economic policies. On Friday it is to adjourn for the funeral of Bernard Pilon, the government whip and MP for Chambly who died Tuesday.

The primary aim of Mr. Woolliams, a Calgary lawyer, and that of David Lewis (NDP—York South) was to force the government to set up a review board to protect civil rights under the act, which replaces regulations under the War Measures Act invoked Oct. 16 to deal with terrorism in Quebec.

Both MPs moved amendments calling for the creation of such a board. Mr. Lewis's was defeated, Mr. Woolliams's is yet to be voted on.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield made what many MPs considered an exceptionally impressive speech, recommending a similar review procedure. But he was quick to dispel any notion that he might vote against the bill because the recommendation was rejected.

"... One cannot possibly justify powers . . . being granted in this bill without some recourse, without providing some right of review," Mr. Stanfield said as the Commons continued its clause-by-clause study of the bill.

"... I say this House would be derelict in its duty in creating the powers set forth . . . without setting up a reasonable source of review."

Mr. Stanfield said outside the Commons, however, that he would vote for the bill when it reaches third and final reading as he supported it at first and second reading.

The Conservative party had called on the government to produce temporary legislation to replace regulations under the War Measures Act and this now had been done.

Justice Minister John Turner said the government opposes the creation of a review board because this was the sole responsibility of the Quebec attorney-general.

The provinces had the constitutional right to administer laws whether they were federal or provincial.

In the Commons, Pierre De Bane (L—Matane), who has been one of the strongest critics of the public order bill, moved three amendments Tuesday. All were defeated.

His first two motions were aimed at forcing police to acquire warrants wherever possible before making arrests and making it an offence for an employer to fire an employee arrested under the bill but not charged.

His third amendment called for an explicit guarantee that goods seized by police in the investigations would be returned to their owners.

David MacDonald (PC—Egmont), the only MP to vote against the bill at second reading, said the police, by making so many arrests in their investigation, have shown themselves woefully short of good judgment."

Mr. Lewis moved an amendment, also defeated, that would have required police to have "probable and reasonable grounds" to suspect a person is a member of an unlawful organization before any arrests were made.

Mr. MacDonald said the bill leaves the decision to arrest almost exclusively to the whims of individual police officers.

MARIJUANA: THE NEW PROHIBITION by John Kaplan

Professor Kaplan says the laws against marijuana symbolize not only the war on drugs, but to young people who follow the new lifestyles they represent, the hypocrisy of their elders who smoke, drink and take barbiturates and amphetamines. While he discusses all the aspects of this question and gives the results of various studies, the author definitely feels that marijuana should be legalized. He says that making criminals out of so many young people creates more serious social problems.

CULTURE AND COMMITMENT: A STUDY OF THE GAP by Margaret Mead

From her wide knowledge of both primitive and sophisticated cultures, Margaret Mead is well qualified to comment on our own generation gap. She says today's youth face a new era, one shaped by the bomb, satellites, jet flight, the population explosion, the breakdown of cities and the destruction of the environment. Adults have nothing in their previous experience to offer as guidance and the young people turn to their peers in an effort to establish a new way of life.

MORE IN AND MORE UP by E. A. Butler

With humor, imagination and profound understanding of the psychology of success, the author gives advice to the business man. He may be a young man choosing a career or a middle-aged man going nowhere but afraid to give up security, Mr. Butler talks about changing jobs, applying for jobs, taking tests, and undoing past mistakes.

HOW TO TALK BACK TO YOUR TELEVISION SET by Nicholas Johnson

In the United States the average TV is on nearly six hours a day. Many children by the age of five have spent more time watching TV than a student spends in college. Nicholas Johnson is a member of the Federal Communications Commission and has made himself unpopular in some areas with his criticism of the medium. Here he suggests ways in which government, industry and the viewing public can better the quality of television.

Pepin Hits Proposed Trade Act

NEW YORK (CP) — Canadian Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, in an unusual attack by an outsider on a proposed American statute, said Tuesday the trade expansion act now before Congress contains "dangerously protectionist elements" and lacks a positive thrust.

Addressing the national foreign trade convention in New York, Pepin warned against a tendency to seal trade into national and regional walls and renounced "preoccupation with narrower domestic matters."

Canada's prosperity demands a continuing momentum towards freer world trade, he said. Canada had always considered the U.S. its ally in international trade "as in so many fields."

"Today, we are no longer in that fortunate situation. There is admittedly a trade expansion act of 1970 now before the Congress, but it is legislation which, in our view, not only contains dangerously protectionist elements but entirely lacks the positive forward thrust that the present situation requires.

"I hope I may be forgiven if I suggest that the title 'trade expansion act' may seem something of a misnomer."

Mails Curtailed

TORONTO (CP) — Mail service during the Christmas and New Year period this year will be cancelled for a total of seven days, a post office spokesman said Tuesday.

School Lottery Planned

SARNIA (CP) — Louis Gelinius, chairman of the St. Patrick's private high school board, said Tuesday the board has approved a lottery to help finance the school's operations. The private board is part of the Lambton County separate school board.

Distinct Signs of Thaw Seen In Kremlin's European Policy

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Although Moscowites are preparing for another cold Russian winter, there are clear signs on the international political front of a thaw in relations between the Kremlin and Western Europe.

A non-aggression pact signed by West German Chancellor Willy Brandt in Moscow in August might well prove to be a historic turning point in relations between these two powers.

And the visit here in October of President Georges Pompidou of France, who was given a red carpet welcome, set the stage for closer Franco-Soviet political contacts.

Both Pompidou and the Soviet Brezhnev had reason to be pleased with the result of the French president's eight-day visit

An agreement they reached for their foreign ministers to hold regular consultations was a major step forward.

There is so far no spectacular development in relations between the Soviet Union and Britain, but the groundwork for a possible new rapprochement was laid with a visit to Britain at the end of October by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

This was the first formal top-level contact between a top Soviet official and Britain's new Conservative government.

The Soviet foreign minister invited both Prime Minister Edward Heath and Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home to make official visits to the Soviet Union.

Both accepted the invitation, but no date was set for the Moscow visit. The last visit by a British prime minister to the Soviet Union was by Harold Wilson in 1966. Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin went to Britain in February, 1967.

Since then, the Soviet-led Warsaw pact invasion of Czechoslovakia in the summer of 1968 cast a cloud over Anglo-Soviet relations and further widened the political gap between the Kremlin and the United States.

Canada's Trade Policy Unchanged

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday he hopes the United States will not depart from its belief in multilateral trade, and that this will be emphasized at next week's meeting here of the Canada-United States ministerial committee on trade.

Mr. Trudeau was replying to Conservative questions by Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield about "possible protectionist tendencies" developing in the U.S.

He asked whether these tendencies appeared to be contrary to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

The prime minister said he didn't think the U.S. would develop policies that run counter to GATT. He had already emphasized to President Nixon Canada's hope that the U.S. would maintain its belief in multilateral trade.

He said this would be reiterated at next week's conference.

George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings), a former Conservative trade minister, asked whether the government had received any assurances that trade legislation now before the U.S. Congress will not be applied against Canada and restrict imports, particulary manufactured goods.

Mr Trudeau said the Canadian government could not expect such assurances, since, under the GATT agreements, the U.S. could not discriminate in favor of a country any more than it could discriminate against a country.

Canadians Divided On Relations With U. S.

NEW YORK (CP) — The Canadian ambassador to the U.S. said Tuesday night that Canadians are determined to preserve and enrich their distinctive social and cultural values.

Marcel Cadieux told a Canadian-American audience that Canadians will not accept the thesis that the forces of continental integration are so overwhelming that we will have to accept relatively painless loss of independence.

"We have every intention of ensuring that what we do have, we will preserve and enrich," he said. The mood of Canada is such that any extra costs and difficulties required to ensure survival undoubtedly will be accepted.

Cadieux was delivering the Boland Memorial Lecture at the 13th annual seminar on Canada-an-American relations sponsored by the University of Windsor, Ont., and Canada University here. The theme of this year's seminar is Canada: The Unknown Nation. It is being held for the first time in the United States.

The ambassador, who emphasized he was speaking personally and not as a representative of the government, said Canada is in a new phase of establishing the conditions which will best support a state that is neither homogeneous in language and culture nor unitary in political structures.

French-speaking Canadians are concerned that their institutions should correspond to contemporary values and that their culture "should not now be assimilation axed so many English-speaking people on the continent."

"The insistence by French-speaking Canadians on new and better conditions for their corporate existence within the country had the effect of making most English-speaking Canadians assess again their own concepts of national life."

The social and political ferment in Canada, he said, "has alerted us particularly to the problem of foreign investment; in other parts of the country companies from the United States can benefit from the use of English and a reasonable cultural homogeneity; in the predominantly French-speaking areas they will have to accommodate themselves to different conditions. . . ."

Two panel discussions were held Tuesday: one on defence policies and the other on economics.

Melville Watkins, professor of political economy at the University of Toronto, said American investment in Canada has turned the economy into a "branch plant."

In the defence panel, James Eayrs, professor of international relations at the University of Toronto, said he believes Canada can have a "free ride" in defence and that the United States would come to Canada's defence whether or not there were defence-sharing treaties.

He said the long-term policy of Canada should be to get out of these treaties. He asserted that the danger to Canada is not from the Russians coming over the North Pole but from south of the border.

Watkins clashed with two MPs in the audience when he said that American dominance of Canadian industry is one of the causes for the feeling of separation among the youth of Quebec.

Marcel Prud-homme, Liberal MP for Saint-Denis in Montreal, said the true concern of the Quebec young is language. He said: Watkins gave the wrong impression of Canada.

Hylard Chappell, Liberal MP for Peel South in Ontario, said that Watkins is "peddling the NDP manifesto." Watkins is a vice-president of the New Democratic Party.

Eayrs said Canada no longer is indispensable to the defence of the North American continent—merely convenient.

Gen. Jean V. Allard, former chief of the Canadian general staff and chairman of the defence panel, said if the U.S. spends large amounts on the defence of Canada, the Americans "will find a way to pay themselves back."

Federal Juvenile Bill Hit

TORONTO (CP) — Two Ontario cabinet ministers attacked the federal government's proposed Young Offenders Act Tuesday, saying it had tremendous implications for the provinces.

The bill, introduced in Parliament Monday, suggests that "juvenile delinquency" be abolished as a special criminal status. It also would repeal the federal Juvenile Delinquent Act.

It defines a young offender as a youth between 10 and 21 years of age. At the upper limit, it raises by one year in seven provinces the maximum age of children to be tried in family courts rather than in ordinary criminal courts.

The age limit would continue to be 18 for all children in Quebec and Manitoba and for girls in Alberta. Other provinces would raise the limit to 17 with provinces given the option of raising it to 18.

Correctional Services Minister Allan Grossman said his department would have to provide about $20 million worth of new accommodation if the federal bill is passed.

He said he doubted if Ottawa would help finance the extra training schools. It was a situation where the federal government drafts legislation the provinces have to pay for.

Attorney—General Arthur Wishart said he didn't think raising the age of accountability as a juvenile was a good idea, but conceded that some provisions of the bill—elimination of the blanket offence of juvenile delinquents, for example—have some merit.

Wishart Approves Wiretap Decision

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Attorney—General Arthur Wishart said Tuesday he favors the federal government's decision to give politicians rather than judges power over police wiretapping practices.

Mr. Wishart was commenting on a bill planned for introduction in the Commons soon that would give authority over wiretapping to the provincial attorneys-general and the federal justice minister.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Bores Can Be Beaten

How to get rid of bores without being as openly rude as one would like to be is a problem that has long confounded the majority of mankind, and perhaps always will.

Having, for some unknown reason, an almost chemical attraction for bores, I have over the years adopted several poses and procedures, none of them quite satisfactory, I am still looking for the perfect insulation.

One of the simplest methods, of course, is to out-bore the bore — and Saki once wrote a charming story demonstrating the effectiveness of this counter - charge. Its only drawback is that it is as exhausting to be a voluble bore as it is to listen to one.

Then again, there is the retreat into mystical meditation — removing one's mind and spirit completely from one's surroundings, and concentrating on Nirvana; while at the same time keeping the eye deceptively bright and the head nodding at proper intervals. Public men excel at this.

I will not even bother to speak of the crude ruses that are available only to larger groups; pretending to see an old friend across the room, inventing a trip to the loo, or fobbing off the bore on some unsuspecting guest who has innocently wandered into the conversation.

In my younger and more impetuous days, I used to shock them quite satisfactorily

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Epilepsy Patients Live Normal Lives

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: About six months ago my 17-year-old son had a blackout in school. It lasted so long the teacher called it a "long faint." Of course I took him to our family doctor the next day.

For the first time I learned that over the years he had had times when he lost awareness of what was going on around him. These lasted only for a few seconds.

Now that we took back as parents, we recall times at dinner when we would call him clumsy for dropping a knife or fork — and he never even remembered doing so. With this history our doctor recommended that our boy see a neurologist for consultation.

He performed a special brain wave test (EEG). He reported that there were some small abnormalities in the brain pattern of the reading. All this time Bill has been taking Dilantin, and has not had further trouble.

We had practically forgotten about the episode until a neighbor the other day asked what the doctor called the illness. And we said that no definite diagnosis was given us.

Now we've begun to worry, because we've been told — by the same neighbor — that it sure sounds like epilepsy. Is it possible that the doctor could be keeping the diagnosis from us just not to frighten us? Don't you think we ought to know? — Mrs. D.

Comment: For many years tuberculosis was a prominent skeleton in the closet. And, of course, syphilis. Or when a family member had a breakdown and was being treated in a mental institution. But we are no longer making moral judgments on sick people — whatever their illness. However, old ways of thinking still cling to us like stench.

Consider your own family problem, Mrs. D. After hearing your son's history and knowing he has had an EEG with "changes," and that he has been taking Dilantin for three months with no recurrences, the first guess by any doctor would be, "A petit mal epilepsy. The diagnosis!"

I guess the reason your doctor hasn't given you the specific diagnosis is that you haven't asked him directly. Some families go to pieces when they hear such a diagnosis. (In spite of the fact that most patients with epilepsy, adequately treated, can live normal lives.)

So I suggest you ask him. Just wondering and worrying will do neither you nor your son any good. There's no need to panic. He has done well for the past six months. Have faith that he will continue to feel well.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is it true that color - blindness is inherited? And that it is more common in males than in females? — Mrs. V.

Comment: True. But even if a female isn't color blind herself she can carry the trait and pass it down to her sons.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have rheumatoid arthritis and am taking eight aspirins a day on doctor's orders. I am taking one B-12 and one Vitamin C daily also. I am 76 years old. Will the vitamins do me any harm? How about the aspirin? A retired nurse has told me to give up the aspirin as it will cause hemorrhages — Mrs. N.

Comment: It's all right to continue with vitamins. As for the aspirin, take that, too — as you are under a doctor's care. Although some people can't take aspirin, fortunate it is for the majority that this helpful drug can be used without complications.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

Smythe Ruling Reserved

TORONTO (CP) — Chief Justice Dalton Wells of the Ontario Supreme Court Tuesday reserved decision on a Crown application asking him to order a trial for Stafford Smythe, Toronto Maple Leafs Hockey Club president, on income tax-evasion charges.

County Court Judge Joseph Kelly earlier quashed charges Nov. 9 against Mr. Smythe of evading payment of taxes on income totalling $280,372 and filing false or misleading returns.

The trial judge ruled he had no jurisdiction to try the case.

Judge Kelly agreed with Smythe's lawyer, J. J. Robinette, that prosecution under the Income Tax Act violated the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Mr. Robinette repeated his argument Tuesday for Chief Justice Wells, who suggested that Mr. Robinette's argument would, if successful, threaten the validity of many Canadian statutes. . . .

LaMarsh Appeals Award for Libel

VANCOUVER (CP) — Statements by former secretary of state Judy LaMarsh about an Ottawa radio reporter in her book Memoirs of a Bird in a Gilded Cage were her own opinions and nothing more, the British Columbia Court of Appeals was told Tuesday.

As such, they cannot be libellous, lawyer D.E. Laidlaw contended in appealing Miss LaMarsh the $2,500 libel damage award by Chief Justice J.O. Wilson of the B.C. Supreme Court against her and her publishers in Thomas Edward Murphy Feb. 9.

Miss LaMarsh was not present at the appeal.

Mr. Murphy, who now does a hot-line radio show for CFMX Vancouver, sued the former Liberal MP for Niagara Falls, claiming she libelled him in her book, published in 1968 by McClelland and Stewart Ltd., when she said he was "heartedly detested" by most MPs and members of the Ottawa Parliamentary Press Gallery.

Chief Justice Wilson, in finding the "heartily detested" statement by Miss LaMarsh libellous, held that Mr. Murphy's character had been tarnished in the mind of the ordinary reader by what he termed a casual and careless statement.

In setting the damage award, he added that he did not feel the libel was a major one. The ordinary reader would probably have forgotten the passage "by the time he turned the next page."

Mr. Laidlaw contended that Chief Justice Wilson erred in finding that the words were libellous.

He said that what she said about Murphy was purely an opinion—her own—and submitted that a study of her book would support that contention.

The book, he said, was Miss LaMarsh's own account containing "strong and contentious" opinions about people and events she had known during her tenure in Parliament.

He submitted that if Miss LaMarsh had prefaced her remarks about Murphy with the words "in my opinion" there would have been no libel action at all.

Prices For Steel Rise Today

TORONTO (CP) — The first of six planned rounds of steel price increases goes into effect today.

Steel Company of Canada Ltd. announced Tuesday that it is increasing prices on most of its products by 2.5 per cent to 5.3 per cent.

Other steel companies did not immediately follow suit but were believed considering similar moves.

Stelco said its increases comply with the commitment to the federal prices and incomes commission by field price increases this year below cost increases.

In Ottawa, the commission said it will review the Stelco increases to see whether they follow the price-restraint formula.

The commission published a report last March on the previous round of steel price increases in October, 1969. That report concluded then that increases of about six per cent on three steel mill products were in line with rising costs. But it said the increases would not have met the price-restraint formula had that been in force when the 1969 increases were announced.

Steel is generally regarded as an especially important product in determining the general level of prices since it is a major component of big consumer durables such as automobiles and appliances.

It also is a major factor in the construction industry, already afflicted by rising costs and prices.

Stelco said the increases resulted from higher labor rates and increased cost of raw materials, supplies and services.

Aid Planned To Create New Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government added $475,138,756 to its 1970-71 budget Tuesday, $60 million of which will be spent creating jobs in areas expected to be hit hard this winter by unemployment.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury tabled the supplementary spending estimates in the Commons. They will bring expected government spending to $16,026,415,182 by March 31.

The main estimates—the government's spending program—were set at $15,732,594,426 earlier this year.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson announced last month in the throne speech debate that the government planned to add $60 million to its budget this year to fight expected increases in jobless Canadians.

Outside the Commons, Mr. Drury said $18,983,000 of the $60 million goes to the manpower department to extend its retraining programs.

Of the remainder, about $25 million will be for capital projects in areas where unemployment is high. The rest will be for maintenance tasks across the country.

Treasury Board officials said they were unable to estimate how many jobs would be created under the program.

Kingston defenceman Bob Murray employs a football style bodycheck to slow up Belleville Fairways' forward Joe Clarke in their Eastern Ontario Junior B contest. The Fairways earned a 3-3 draw to pick up their second point of the season.

Fairway Surge Ties Kingston

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

KINGSTON — Belleville's Hard Rock turned soft bodied Tuesday night, but it was the Kingston Frontenacs who were hurt most in the 3-3 Eastern Ontario Junior B contest.

Kingston's Dave Johnston took exception to a third period check handed out by the Fairway's Brian "Hard Rock" O'Coin, who wisely refused to return the blows.

For the dubious satisfaction of landing some blows to the back of O'Coin's helmet, Johnston received a double minor which opened the gate for Danny Lupenette's tying goal.

Lupenette had played one of his poorer games in the first 40 minutes, with the exception of some penalty killing stints, but more than made up for it in the final frame. In addition to scoring two of the three Belleville goals, he set up O'Coin for the third marker by stealing the puck from the Kingston defence.

The Fairways continued to play their usual, that is to say terrible, first two periods of hockey, and only some sharp work by Ron Jury kept the score from climbing to more than 3-0. Jury blocked 17 of the 18 shots he faced in the first period, while Kingston's D'Arcy Walters was tested only three times.

Jim Scullion notched the only goal of the first period, taking a passout from Bob Ferguson and slamming the puck into the open side of the net. Jury had robbed Ferguson, earlier in the period on a breakaway.

Tom Rivaire made it 2-0 in the second catching the far side of the net on a long shot as Jury failed to cut down the angle.

A quick shot from the slot by Gord Rivaire bounced off Jury's pads into the net to up the count to 3-0, near the end of the second period.

Danny Lupenette and Dave Ferguson had the best scoring chances of Belleville with both players hitting the Kingston goal posts.

Lupenette got Belleville on the scoreboard at 1.56 of the final period beating Walters with a backhand shot, and Jury helped hold the Frontenacs by stopping Tom Rivaire who was in alone.

DAN LUPENETTE

O'Coin got the Fairways second marker as Lupenette poked the puck away from the Kingston defence giving the visitors a two - man breakaway. His goalmouth pass was batted into the corner by O'Coin to narrow the Kingston lead to one goal.

The Frontenacs twice came close to upping the count. A shot that clanked Jury hit defenceman John Mayhall, and had crashed into the goalie and was lying in the crease. Jury once again pulled off a key save on Yuri Rivaire, sliding out to smother his shot when the Kingston forward was left uncovered in front of the Belleville goal.

Lupenette's final goal was an unassisted effort. The quick stepping centre ice man stickhandled through the entire Kingston team and doked Walters to score on a picture effort at 14.20 of the period.

A Fairway "mistake" paid off late in the game when the Frontenacs again threatened. The home team had a 3-1 break with only defenceman Peter Ackerman back, but two Belleville players came over the boards to stop the rush. The Fairways played for the next 30 seconds with four forwards and two defencemen on the ice, unhindered by the game officials.

Attempting to stay even with the Peterborough Lions in their battle for a spot in a junior tournament in Toronto next month, Kingston pulled Walters for an extra attacker with six seconds left in the game. The strategy almost backfired when Lupenette won the draw and cleared the puck into the Kingston end, where time ran out.

Jury continued his fine play in the Belleville nets coming up with 44 stops twice as many as Walters was called on to make.

Defensively, Dave Ferguson continued to show improvement, playing a strong game on the Fairways blueline as well as seeing spot duty at forward.

Newcomer Rick Holmes of Tweed played a steady game in his own end and was especially adept at clearing opposing forwards from in front of Jury.

The Junior B's next game is Sunday night when they meet the Trenton Golden Hawks in Belleville.

Brabham Reaches End

LONDON (CP) — Jack Brabham, three times world motor racing champion, has decided to hang up his helmet and quit the increasingly dangerous race circuit.

But he denies that his retirement is a result of the ghastly run of accidents which, in less than four months, claimed the lives of Britons Piers Courage and Bruce McLaren and German Jochen Rindt.

"No, it's just that I want to give more time to my wife and family —and build up my business interests in Britain and Australia," he said.

At 44, the Australian is nearly twice the age of many Grand Prix drivers. He doesn't feel, however, that he has lost his touch: "I believe I can drive as well as any of them," he claimed. Few make plans to be present. In the event of insufficient attendance, this executive will assume its members no longer have an interest in offering Minor Soccer to the youngsters of this city, and accordingly, will resign and hand over all equipment and assets to the Belleville Minor Sports Association. Additionally, notice of its dissolution will be forwarded to the Ontario Minor Soccer Association in Toronto. It's your organization, either support it, or forget it.

WILLIAM HOCKLEY,
PRESIDENT 1970.

His career began 22 years ago racing midget cars in Australian speedway events where he acquired the "tail-out" style of driving which characterized him throughout his career as a Grand Prix driver.

In 1959 he joined the Cooper Formula One team and was the Monaco and British grands prix in a Cooper-Climax to clinch his first world championship. The following year he took the title again, with victories in the Dutch, Belgian, French, British and Portuguese grands prix.

At the height of his career in the early 1960s he astonished the racing world by leaving the successful Cooper team to build his own cars. The controversial move paid off; in 1966 he won his third world championship driving one of his own cars.

His retirement rings one happy note; he is not opting out because of injury. "I have made myself treat the game with respect and have always driven within my capabilities," he said. Indeed, another of his driving characteristics was his caution on the race track through which he proved that there are racing drivers who can have rich rewarding careers—and live.

Snooker Champion Succumbs

TORONTO (CP) — George Chenier, 64, North American snooker champion, died of a stroke Monday.

Chenier won the title in 1947 and held it against all comers, defending back two challengers in the last three years despite an earlic stroke suffered in 1965. His last victim was Eddy Agha of Montreal, whom he defeated last spring, 36 matches to 27.

In 1963 he racked up the first perfect 150 break in a pocket billiards contest world champion Irving Crane, a feat achieved by only one other player. His 104 in the world snooker championship is the longest ever recorded in the competition.

Chenier was recognized as North American champion when he completed a challenge tour of the United States in 1947 by defeating Jimmy Moore in a $1,500 match at Amarillo, Tex.

Terriers Coach Calls It Quits

ORILLIA (CP) — Joe Kane, 42, has resigned as coach of Orillia Terriers of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A league.

Manager Bill McGill will act as coach until a replacement is found. Kane, a Toronto lawyer, had the Terriers in first place with 11 victories and one defeat.

In Toronto, Kane said he resigned because the coaching position was too demanding.

"And, I should add, that it may have been that the reason was my own inability to adjust to the demands."

He said all 40 games on the schedule were road games for him because he had to drive to the arenas from his home in Toronto.

Canadiens in First

Bingo Number for Tuesday Nights's NHL Winners Is Five

By IAN MacLAREN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Five was the big winner in National Hockey League games Tuesday night, but Montreal Canadiens had other reasons for rejoicing.

The Canadiens doubled Detroit's Golden Seals 5-1 to move into first place in the NHL's East Division, with 21 points, one ahead of Boston Bruins and New York Rangers, both of whom were idle Tuesday.

The game also marked the return to the Montreal lineup of left winger John Ferguson, who discarded retirement plans, and stamp-shooting Chris Oddleifson of three weeks with a cracked foot bone.

But the real sparkplug in the Montreal attack was veteran Henri Richard. Skating like a rookie, the 34-year-old centre scored twice and assisted on two others. His effort was supplemented by Pete Mahovlich's two goals.

Richard had managed only one goal in Montreal's previous 11 games while Mahovlich, enjoying his finest start in the NHL, counseled for goals No. 7 and 8.

In other games, Minnesota North Stars dumped St. Louis Blues 5-3 in St. Louis and Detroit Red Wings defeated Vancouver Canucks 8-3.

Ferguson, who retired Oct. 7 because of pressures of business outside hockey, decided to return last Friday.

Cournoyer had scored 16 goals in nine games before his injury. He played a regular shift but Ferguson the club's policeman, was used sparingly and did not get involved in any of the many fights that marked the latter stages of the game.

Centres Jude Drouin and Tom Williams scored in the second period to snap a 2-2 tie and ignite the Minnesota victory, snapping St. Louis' home-ice winning streak at seven games. Denny O'Shea got the insurance goal with three minutes left in the game with a 40-footer that eluded Blues' goaltender Glenn Hall.

Two unanswered goals in the second period sent Detroit wing-to victory at Vancouver. The goals, by Tom Webster and Billy Dea, gave the Red Wings a 4-1 lead.

The win moved Detroit to within two points of the Canucks, fourth in the East Division with 15 points.

Tonight the Bruins are at Minnesota, New York visits Los Angeles Kings and Toronto Maple Leafs and Buffalo Sabres battle for sixth spot in the East Division at Toronto.

Frazier 5 to 1 Favorite

Foster Cuts All Ties As Light Heavy

DETROIT (AP) — Joe Frazier, fighting for universal acceptance, and Bob Foster, who has turned his back on the class

Tale of the Tape

DETROIT (AP) — Here is the Tale of the Tape for tonight's Bob Foster-Joe Frazier heavyweight championship fight in Detroit:

	Foster	Frazier
Age	31	30
Weight	191½	203
Height	6-3½	5-11½
Chest (normal)	42	44
Chest (exp.)	44	45½
Reach	79	73½
Biceps	15½	15
Forearm	13	13
Waist	32	32
Thigh	24	24½
Calf	14½	16
Fist	13	13

be rules, meet tonight for the heavyweight championship on the world.

The scheduled 15-round fight is set for 10:30 p.m. EST, at Cobo Arena and will follow, as part of a closed-circuit television doubleheader, a scheduled weights George Foreman and Boone Kirkman in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Although Frazier is the heavyweight champion and unbeaten in 25 pro bouts, he fights in the shadow of Muhammad Ali, also known as Cassius Clay.

So, if Frazier beats Foster—he is the 5-to-1 favorite—it will be another step toward stamping out the shadow of Ali because it will bring closer to realization a Frazier-Ali fight.

As for Foster, he has said no matter what happens in the Frazier fight he will not defend his light heavyweight championship again.

Foster, who was expected to weigh from 192 to 196 pounds for tonight's fight, says he cannot make the light heavyweight limit of 175 any more.

A crowd of about 15,000 which would mean a gate of $300,000 is expected to watch Foster try to become the first light heavyweight champion to win the heavyweight title. Seven previous light-heavy kings tried unsuccessfully, a total of nine times.

The closed-circuit telecast will be seen in 110 locations, with a seating capacity of 500,000, in 91 cities in the United States and Canada. The fights also will be beamed to 27 countries in Europe, Africa, South America, Central America, Asia and the South Pacific.

Frazier has been guaranteed $150,000 against 40 per cent of all receipts. Foster will get 22½ per cent.

No matter what Frazier makes on this fight it will be peanuts compared to what he would get for fighting Ali. That would be the most lucrative fight in history, with predictions of a $10 million gross.

If everything goes right Frazier and Ali would probably fight in February. All fights Oscar Bonavena in December and the U.S. supreme court has expected to act until at least March on an appeal of Ali's conviction of refusing induction into the army—a conviction that carried with it a five-year prison sentence and led to his being stripped of the heavyweight title.

The 30-year-old Frazier will outweigh Foster by about 15 to 20 pounds, including his beard which he will not have to shave off, but the 31-year-old Foster, at six-feet 3½ inches, is 4¼ inches taller than Frazier and has an edge of 3½ inches in reach.

Uneasy Truce

Dixie Flyers End Hockey Strike

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Striking members of Nashville Dixie Flyers of the Eastern Hockey League voted early today to end a walkout and return to the ice in Greensboro, N.C. tonight.

The game had been postponed by the Greensboro club after a contest scheduled in Charlotte, N.C. Tuesday night was cancelled because the players failed to show up.

The players' action brought an uneasy truce in a dispute which began Monday when players received pay cheques reflecting $78 fines imposed on all members of the team for poor performances in recent games.

Mark Parrish, Flyers general manager, had said earlier that any players who failed to show for the game in Charlotte would be suspended and "never play hockey again."

But a team spokesman said this morning all but two players will depart today for tonight's game in Greensboro.

Wally Sprenger, centre who has acted as player representative in the dispute, and veteran defenceman Norman Ryder will be left behind to continue negotiations with club owners, the spokesman said.

In addition to the fines, the players said they were upset by what they called poor medical treatment, inferior equipment and the condition of the team's travel bus.

League president Tom Lockhar, who had been asked to help settle the dispute, suspended all of the players after the Charlotte game was cancelled.

Parrish said Tuesday night that the team would go out of business and season ticketholders' money would be refunded if the players continued the strike.

Details of the strike settlement were not available, but a spokesman said Sprenger and Ryder will continue negotiations in an effort to iron out some of the player's complaints.

Parrish has indicated the team has already made plans to buy a new travel bus.

German Rider Leads Horse Show

TORONTO (CP) — Gert Wiltfang of West Germany took his third victory in international show jumping competition at the Royal Horse Show by winning a Jumpoff Tuesday night against six other riders in the Accumulator Stakes.

The win put the German well in front as the leading rider at the show. Second and third places were taken by Jim Elder and Torchy Millar to keep Canada on top in the team standings.

The 24-year-old Wiltfang has collected 27 points. Elder is second with 18, Barbara Simpson of Calgary third with 15 and Hector Dunlop fourth with 14.

The Canadien team stays in front with 71, followed by Germany with 67 the United States 33, Mexico 22 and Ireland 19.

Elder, Canadian team captain from Aurora, Ont., and Millar, from Ste. Marguerite, Que., riding Colonel Pete, had faultless rounds to go into the Jumpoff.

Wiltfang, riding Goldika, also navigated the seven-jump course with out a knockdown as did Carlos Aquirre and Gerardo Tazzer of Mexico and Hartwig Steenken and Hans Gunter Winkler of Germany.

But, in the Jumpoff, time as well as clean ride became a deciding factor and Steenken and Winkler each knocked down one fence tying for a fast ride.

Millar had a faultless ride in 45.7 seconds and Elder also ride clean in 39½ seconds less time.

The Aquirre appeared headed for an even faster time until his mount, Scandal, caught a rail on the seventh fence and both crashed to the ground. Neither was injured but penalty points for the fall put them out of contention.

Wiltfang and Goldika then sped around the course w thout a fault eight-tenths of a second faster than Elder's ride aboard Beefeater.

Johnny Bench Youngest To Win Baseball MVP

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Bench of Cincinnati Reds, the 22-year-old slugging king of the major leagues, added another crown today when he became the youngest player ever to win a Most Valuable Player award.

Bench, who led the majors in home runs with 45 and runs batted in with 148 while leading the Reds to the National League pennant, outdistanced a field that included nine other strong Cincinnati candidates in the balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

The young catcher received 22 of the 24 first-place votes and a total of 328 points. Billy Williams of Chicago Cubs was second with the other two first-place votes and 218 points.

Bench's slugging team-mate, third baseman Tony Perez, finished third in the balloting with 149 points while another member of the Reds, outfielder Pete Rose, also cracked the top 10, finishing seventh with 84 points.

Bench is only the second player in the 40-year history of MVP balloting to win the award at the age of 22. Stan Musial was 22 when he won in 1943, but Musial's birthday falls on Nov. 21 and Bench's on Dec. 7.

Bench is the first catcher to win the award in the National League since Roy Campanella did it with the 1953 Brooklyn Dodgers.

Bench appeared on every ballot in winning the award, being named second on the other two cast.

Golf League Idea Broached

NEW YORK (AP)— Formation of a golf league funded by 11 regional franchise owners for $6.6 million the first year, and patterned after other organized professional sports, was announced Tuesday by Charles R. L. White and Constantine Gerodin of New York, the co-founders.

The International Professional Golf League (IPGL), which is slated to begin a schedule of 80 match-play events in the spring of 1975, consists of 11 regional franchises, whose owners have been committed to $600,000 each for the first year of operation.

White, commissioner pro tem, and Gerodin, president, said each franchised team would consist of six players and two alternates.

None of the 66 players has been signed and none of the tourney sites in the franchises confirmed.

"We have talked with players," said Gerodin, "but we couldn't do anything about signing them because we only became a league yesterday."

Gerodin termed the IPGL the "big league of golf," and said the organization had no intentions of competing with U.S., Golf Association, which governs amateurs, or the Professional Golfers Association.

But White said the "owners propose to put under contract the best golfing talent available."

Return for Imlach

Sabres-Leafs Game A Sellout

TORONTO (CP) — Demand for tickets to tonight's National Hockey League game between the Maple Leafs and visiting Buffalo Sabres is at a pre-Stanley Cup peak.

Toronto and Buffalo are currently battling it out for ahsh place in the NHL's East Division, but most of the interest centres on the return of Buffalo coach Punch Imlach to the Gardens.

Imlach, general manager and coach of the Leafs for 10 years, will be making his first public appearance in the Gardens since he was fired after Toronto was eliminated in the 1966-69 Stanley Cup quarter-finals in four straight by Boston Bruins.

"I wouldn't miss this one for the world," said Imlach on Tuesday.

Imlach appears ready, but the Sabres are hurting. Rookie centre Randy Wyrozuk is sidelined with a broken collar bone and defenceman Jean-guy Talbot and Mike McMahon have leg injuries.

"I have to be philosophical about this," said Imlach who won four Stanley Cups with the Leafs. "The other players recognize the fact that I would like to wid this game.

"They know what it means. I also have a captain who would like to win it as much as I do," he added, referring to winger Floyd Smith, left unprotected by Toronto in the NHL draft last summer and claimed by Buffalo.

Alouettes' 8 Tops All-Star Selection

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Seven first-year men—five from Montreal Alouettes and two from Ottawa Rough Riders—won positions on the 1972 Eastern Football Conference all-star team announced Tuesday.

The 24 players—12 each on the offensive and defensive squads—were picked by vote of the Football Reporters of Canada and announced by president Laurie Artiss of Regina.

The seven, all in their first year in the Canadian game, are quarterback Gary Wood and defensive back Al Marcelin of Ottawa, with running back Moses Denson, offensive tackle Ed George, defensive ends Steve Smear and Steve Booras and outside linebacker Mike Widger, all of Montreal.

In all, the Alouettes put eight men on the two squads. Toronto Argos and Hamilton Tiger-Cats had six each and Ottawa contributed four.

The teams:

Offensive — Quarterback: Gary Wood, Ottawa; running backs: Bill Symons, Toronto; Dave Fleming, Hamilton; Moses Denson, Montreal; flanker: Jim Thorpe, Toronto; centre: Gene Ceppetelli, Montreal; guards: Charlie Bray, Toronto; Bill Dennychuk, Hamilton; tackles: Ellison Kelly, Hamilton; Ed George, Montreal; tight end: Mel Profit, Toronto; split end: Tommy Joe Coffey, Hamilton.

Defence — Ends: Steve Smear and Steve Booras, both Montreal; tackles: Angelo Mosca, Hamilton; Marshall Shirk, Ottawa; middle linebacker: Charlie Collins, Montreal; outside linebackers: Jerry Campbell, Ottawa; Mike Widger, Montreal; defensive backs: Garney Henley, Hamilton; Marv Luster and Jim Tomlin, Toronto; Al Phaneuf, Montreal; Al Marcelin, Ottawa.

The quarterback category—in which retired Russ Jackson of Ottawa had taken every vote for four years in a row—went to Wood by a wide margin. He had 29 votes to eight for runner-up Wally Gabler of Hamilton, two for Tom Wilkinson of Toronto and one each for Joe Zuger of Hamilton and Sonny Wade of Montreal.

It was a completely new backfield from last year. Symons won unanimous selection with Fleming and Denson not far behind.

Of last year's running backs, Vic Washington was ineligible, Dave Rainey of Toronto got a scant five votes and Dennis Duncan of Montreal pulled in only three.

Bray at guard, Kelly at tackle, Profit at tight end and Coffey at split end all were holdovers from last year's eastern all-stars.

It was a fourth consecutive selection for Coffey, a fifth all-star berth for Mosca and a third for Profit.

Henley's selection was his eighth in a row.

Ken Lehmann of Ottawa, who had won middle linebacker honors for five years in succession, was slowed by injuries and got only one vote as Charlie Collins swept the category.

Booras edged Toronto's Ed Harrington by one vote for the defensive end spot the Argo won last year. Shirk was a repeater at tackle but perennial all-star John Barrow was left out of the running, pulling one vote.

Henley and Luster, whose selection as defensive backs was almost unanimous, were the only holdovers in that category. Dick Thornton of Toronto was the only one from last year's backs to get a vote this year—and he, also, got only one.

Stamps Want Lancaster in the Pocket

CALGARY (CP) — Defensive coach Dick Monroe says he has found a way to throttle the Saskatchewan Roughrider offence and give Calgary Stampeders the opportunity tonight to win the Western Football Conference championship.

The secret is to keep quarterback Ron Lancaster from roaming around in the Saskatchewan backfield.

"You've got to keep Lancaster in the pocket. You let him scramble around and you're in trouble.

"This is where he's hurt us in the past. Our defensive ends have to be conscious of this all the time. . . . They've got to keep him in there."

The Calgary defensive unit demonstrated last Saturday they could keep Saskatchewan, where Munroe wanted the Roughriders. The Stampeders took the first game of the best-of-three final 25-11 and held the vaunted Roughrider offence to 198 yards compared with 317 yards for Calgary.

Saskatchewan coach Eagle Keys attached no blame for his team's showing in the opener and said Tuesday if they played as well tonight Calgary would be headed for defeat.

Munroe says Lancaster is one of the reasons Saskatchewan is a tough team to defend against "but there's really not any one guy you can key on."

"You've got to come up with a defense to combat their bread-and-butter stuff. A lot of times it just boils down to who is doing the best job.

Trial Begins

Canadian Aerospace Firms Need Help

MONTREAL (CP) — A group of aviation specialists said Tuesday that some form of government involvement is needed to help the ailing Canadian aerospace industry.

David Hendy, president of the Air Industries Association of Canada, said that this involvement might take the form of an "enlightened partnership between government and industry to develop a formula for sustained and balanced growth."

"We haven't established this rapport yet here, unlike some European countries which have found a basis for creative interplay between government and industry," he said in a panel discussion at the annual Canadian Aeronautics and Space Congress meeting.

One kind of government help could be in marketing.

"For example, a small country wants to buy one of our planes but in turn wants a market for some of its wines," he said. "Then the Canadian government should get in touch with its liquor boards to see that those wines are imported."

The group generally agreed that Canada was not alone with its aerospace industry problems. Other countries were suffering and one big reason was cited as the Vietnam war in which massive U.S. defence spending was depriving the industry of research and development money usually available in times of relative peace.

There also was general agreement on the need to specialize. Dudley Taylor, president of Aviation Electric Ltd., said he hoped this would take the form of government leadership "to help stimulate a national STOL program."

The STOL—or short-takeoff, scratching aircraft—would operate between heavily-populated city centres. Canada is seen as a leader in this as-yet undefined field with planes under development by Canadair Ltd. in Montreal and de Havilland of Toronto.

The Science Council of Canada has prepared a study recommending that government, industry and the universities combine to develop such aircraft and the associated ground installations.

J. L. Harrison, an air division chief in the department of industry, trade and commerce, cautioned that it would be unwise to rely too heavily on specialization since other countries would eventually develop their own competitive goods.

Mr. Harrison said that Canada's aerospace-producing capabilities lie in export since it is primarily a producer of airplane components. With this in mind, "we must look at forming an alliance with a good foreign market."

The obvious choice appeared to be the U.S. which accounted for 58 per cent of world sales of aeronautical products in 1967 compared with two per cent by Canada.

This was why it was important for Canada, whose industry was basically foreign-owned, to maintain good relations with parent companies so as not to suffer a deterioration in its export ability.

More White-collar Workers Form Own Bargaining Units

TORONTO (CP) — White-collar workers are becoming more aware of the benefits of unions and similar collective organizations, a conference sponsored by the Personnel Association of Toronto was told this week.

Dr. J. H. G. Crispo, director of the centre for industrial relations at the University of Toronto, said white-collar unions are on the rise, despite inadequate organizational attempts by established unions.

He said blue-collar unions have not committed enough resources to organizational drives and have not come up with approaches that appeal to white-collar workers.

Dr. Crispo said that as an alternative to unions, white-collar workers—general office workers, store clerks and employees of financial institutions—may form collective-bargaining organizations similar to existing professional organizations.

"White-collar workers are no better nor worse off than blue-collar workers," Dr. Crispo said. "It's a constant juggling for shares and anybody that isn't organized loses in this constant struggle—in the rat race."

He said office workers are beginning to realize that factory workers are not the only people who have organized. Teachers, nurses and public servants are increasingly touched by union activity.

R. A. Abbott, manager of labor relations for the Ontario Hydro—Electric Power Commission, said white-collar unions may become locals of blue-collar unions in plants.

Once white-collar unions are established, he said, they will have the same aims as blue-collar unions.

White's District

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Bible Study was held at the home of Mrs. Van Huizen on Wednesday with a large number of people attending.

The AOTS men's club and the fellowship club of Westminster United Church joined together to convene a pot luck supper on Friday evening. Following the supper Mr. and Mrs. Keith Johnston gave a resume of their trip to Western Canada in July and displayed folders to show the places they visited. About 50 people attended the supper.

Rev. John Zunner conducted the service at Westminster United Church on Sunday. The senior choir rendered two anthems accompanied on the organ by Linda Johnston.

TOO REALISTIC

SALVADOR, Brazil (AP) — Performances of Shakespeare's Macbeth were suspended after a goat was killed on stage in the witches' scene, to the dismay of the audience. Authorities reported a nervous young actress played the sacrificial element too realistically while patron covered their eyes and ears.
